House Votes to Bar Use of OCD's Funds For 'Frills, Furbelows'

Many in First Lady's Pet Division Are Branded 'Leeches,' Fellow-Travelers

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

In revolt against the appointments to places in the Office of Civilian Defense of Melvyn Douglas, screen star, and Mayris Chaney, dancer protege of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, the House yesterday voted to bar use of civilian defense funds for "instruction in physical fitness, fan dancing, street shows, or theatrical performances of any kind."

The action, on a teller vote of 88 to 80, followed an afternoon marked by stormy criticism of "parasites and leeches" on OCD payrolls and demands that the whole civilian defense setup be shorn of its "frills and furbelows."

After the House recessed, James M. Landis, executive of the OCD, issued a statement which made no direct reference to the debate there but declared the OCD "will not be deflected from its task by petty criticism or personal attack."

"Fair constructive criticism is always the right of a free people," he said. "Criticism aimed to undermine and divide leadership is another thing."

Landis said also that 5,400,000 persons had volunteered their services and that OCD was "determined to use this human energy wisely and effectively in the war effort."

Pay Contracts Cited

Representative Faddis (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, struck the keynote of the discussion when he declared: "Do you realize we are paying Melvyn Douglas as much as we are paying Gen. MacArthur, who is so bravely defending the Philippines?

"And that we are paying the dancer Mayris Chaney almost twice as much as we were paying Capt. Colin Kelly, who gave his life in the first days of this war?"

The amendment against paying for fan dancing and such was inserted tentatively in the omnibus appropriations bill which carries an allotment of 100 million dollars for the Office of Civilian Defense. Final action on the measure was carried over to Monday because discussion of the "fancy appointments" ran to great length.

All the 100 million dollars is earmarked for badly needed civilian defense equipment and could not be used for salaries.

In an effort to eliminate the amendment, Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, pointed out the House would have a chance to vote specifically on OCD salaries when funds for the Office of

'My Work Is Important'

OCD's Dancer Will Distract Children During Air Raids

By Bill Brinkley
Post Staff Writer

Mayris Chaney, former nightclub entertainer, has been conferring with "some of the country's biggest experts" on psychology, children's games, kindergarten work and daytime nurseries in her $4600 job as assistant director of physical fitness for the Office of Civilian Defense, her headquarters at Philadelphia said yesterday.

For example, the press relations office of the physical fitness division explained, a week ago last night she had a conference in Philadelphia "with experts in children's games from various parts of the country to consider a substitute for toys, now going out of the picture."

"Miss Chaney and these experts," said Raymond Hill the press relations man, "took up the question of, 'What can children play with in subways during an air raid?' Some of the experts said, 'We ought to show movies.' Someone else said, 'But there won't be any light, so how can we do that?'"

(The United States has subways only in New York, Boston and Philadelphia. Chicago is building one.)

In Philadelphia last night Miss Chaney, speaking for the first time since her OCD affiliation made headlines, said she made a "financial sacrifice" to accept the job at $4600 a year.

"No one knows how long the war will last," the former dancer explained. "Meanwhile, it is important to interest children in pleasant ways of keeping fit. The draft has shown the poor physical condition of the Nation. Some day today's children may have to answer a draft call."

In reply to Representative Leland Ford (Republican), of California, who demanded an investigation of OCD expenditures after learning of

Public Must Register for Sugar Ration

Teachers to Handle Enrollment; Every Man, Woman, Child Will Receive a Book

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

A sugar-rationing system, providing for registration of consumers by the Nation's public school teachers, and the issuance of books of weekly sugar purchase stamps to every man, woman and child in the country, was outlined last night by Leon Henderson, Federal price and rationing chief.

The plan voids any advantages which persons who have been hoarding sugar expected to gain. It calls on the registrars to tear stamps out of the hoarders' book equivalent to the excess supply accumulated, thus depriving the hoarders of the right to purchase sugar until their hoards are used up.

Applicants for the rationing books must disclose their supplies under penalty of $10,000 fine or ten years imprisonment for making false statements to the Government.

Weekly Ration Undetermined

Henderson said the registry and the issuance of books would begin as soon as the enormous job of printing and distributing the certificates had been completed.

He added that the weekly amount of sugar for each person would probably be about three-fourths of a pound, but that the exact amount is still to be determined by the War Production Board, which must decide how much can be made available to the Nation's retail stores.

Principal provision of the system, as indicated by the rationing czar:

One book, containing 28 weekly stamps, will be issued for every person in the country.

Only one person from each family unit needs to register at the public school designated. He can obtain books for the entire family unit, defined as father, mother, children and wards.

Others Must Register Separately

Other persons living in the household must register separately for their books except in unusual cases of invalidism, etc.

When buying sugar, the customer will be required to hand over to the retailer the stamp dated for the week in which the purchase is made. The retailer, in turn, will paste the stamps he has received on a special card, which will be turned into the store's supplier, in order for the retailer to replenish his stocks.

Stamps not used in the week for which they are current are invalid for the future. In other words, purchases must be made week by week and cannot be done cumulatively.

When consumers apply for their book—"War Ration Book No. 1"—they will be required to make a certified statement as to the amount of sugar in possession of the family unit to which they belong. Anything in excess of two pounds per person will be considered as hoarded sugar, and stamps will be torn from

'We Will Hold Singapore!' Commander Says; Japs Take Another Oil Port in Borneo

Samarinda Seized By Enemy, 60 Miles From Balik Papan; Java Reconnoitered

By the Associated Press

Batavia, Feb. 6.—The Japanese have strengthened their hold on Borneo's eastern coast in the drive on Java by occupying Samarinda, 60 miles north of the wrecked oil port of Balik Papan, the Dutch high command announced today.

Samarinda is an oil "feeder point" for Balik Papan.

After two destructive air attacks on Soerabaja, big Allied naval base in eastern Java, Japanese planes today reconnoitered this island which apparently is next on their invasion program.

'Chute Invasion Revealed

Scouting planes were sighted over the towns of Semarang, Madioen, Magetan, Solo and Tegal as Java's defenders girded for a possible parachute invasion.

Survivors of the Balik Papan fight reaching here revealed that the invaders used parachute troops to take that port whose oil installations were blasted by the retreating Dutch.

One physician told the Aneta news agency he hid in a ditch while the parachutists landed behind the port passed within a few feet of him. At least one company of troops landed by parachute, he said.

Others disclosed that the Dutch delaying action was upset by failure of a plan to defend a stream behind the town with a fire set by oil spread on the water. The oil was ignited, but a heavy rain made it impossible to start an effective blaze, they said.

The belief persisted that a Japanese aircraft carrier was operating somewhere in the Java Sea between Borneo and Java because of fighter planes participating in the Soerabaja attacks.

For the second straight day the Dutch made no mention of fighting at Amboina, second most important Dutch naval and air base 1,000 miles northeast of Soerabaja. Tokyo reports claimed that Japanese forces had occupied the stronghold.

Japs Claim Sea Victory

Tokyo (from Japanese broadcasts), Feb. 6.—Japanese naval planes have sunk two Dutch cruisers, and heavily damaged a third Dutch cruiser and a United States cruiser of the 7050-ton Marblehead type in the Java Sea, imperial headquarters announced tonight.

Domei's broadcast version said the action occurred Wednesday east of Soerabaja, Dutch naval base, and claimed that in addition to the two cruisers, a 5000-ton ship was sunk.

One Japanese plane was reported missing.

A Rebel Once More

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Across 40 years of peace, Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo appeared in the war news again yesterday in a role described by the War Department as "a sort of Philippine Quisling."

The aged insurrectionist, who fought American efforts to pacify the islands in the early years of this century, has broadcast an appeal to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commanding United States forces in the Philippines, to surrender to the Japanese. His appeal, the War Department said, was ignored.

Aguinaldo's radio appeal was bolstered by pamphlets addressed to Filipino soldiers in MacArthur's command and dropped from aircraft, advising them that their pay in American money is worthless since finances in Manila are based on the Japanese war note. These pamphlets were received, MacArthur advised the War Department, with "considerable amusement."

EMILIO AGUINALDO

Filipino irreconcilables, led by Aguinaldo, gave the United States much trouble in its efforts to occupy and organize the islands after they had been won from Spain in 1899.

Guard Against 'Chutes

By the Associated Press

Singapore, Feb. 6.—Some of the men, planes, ships and supplies have been removed from several airfields on this beleaguered island because they could not operate under Japanese shell fire, Lieut. Gen. A. E. Percival, commander of imperial land forces here, disclosed tonight at the end of a week of siege.

But he said firmly: "We will hold Singapore! There is no question about it."

"Just because we do not see so many of our aircraft overhead and our naval units about does not mean the air force and navy have abandoned Singapore," added Gen. Percival.

"They have gone to places whence they can bomb Japanese bases just as effectively and build up our naval strength. The navy is continuing to do a lot of work around the island and Malayan shores under difficult circumstances."

Guard Against Chute Attack

Gen. Percival's disclosure—some people in Singapore have known it for several days—came as British troops patrolled the island against the threat of attempted parachute invasion, and imperial batteries laboring under enemy dive-bombing assaults, flung salvo after salvo across the Johore Strait into Japanese troop concentrations on the Malayan mainland.

And even as he spoke, a pillar of smoke rising from burning oil tanks to the north marked the scene of the great Singapore naval base, a bastion that was 20 years in the building at a cost of tens of millions of pounds sterling.

The navy's rescue of nearly 1000 British troops who had been cut off in Malaya provided ample evidence of the heroic work British warships have been doing in Malayan waters.

This mission was carried out on several successive nights by fleet units operating under the very noses of the Japanese, and the Tommies now are helping to man Singapore's defenses.

How Rescue Forces Worked

A naval officer who took part in the operations said naval units and "all the small craft we could commandeer" left Singapore in the afternoon, arriving off their rendezvous under cover of night.

Larger vessels remained several miles offshore, while launches and motorboats towed sampans and fishing boats through shallow water to beaches, where they took on full loads, then returned to the ships offshore.

Many of the rescue forces remained on the mainland several nights, hiding the rescue craft in inlets and swamps while the furtive task of rounding up the stranded Tommies proceeded.

"The last launch to reach Singapore was so packed the men couldn't see anything but the mast," the officer recounted.

Many women are being sent away, Gen. Percival explained, not

Grand Jury On Axis Agents Recalls Fish

Hill, Congressman's Clerk, Is Sentenced To Two to Six Years

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Representative Hamilton Fish was called yesterday for further questioning by the special grand jury on Axis agents. He was called a few hours after his secretary, George Hill, 45, was sentenced to two to six years in prison for perjuring himself to keep from giving testimony before that same grand jury.

Fish's appearance was sought for 10:30 o'clock next Tuesday morning.

Hill made a last minute effort to escape the prison term by offering, on certain terms, to give "complete and truthful testimony." The terms were "beyond countenance," said Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., and the proposition was not considered.

The prosecutors gave this explanation after Hill spoke of the proposition in open court.

Linked to Viereck

Hill was called before the special grand jury in an investigation of the operations of the German agent, George Sylvester Viereck, who will go on trial February 16 on charges of concealing his use of Congressmen and their franks for German propaganda.

This propaganda—some of it written or edited by the German agent for Congressmen—appeared in the Congressional Record. The grand jury charged that Viereck financed the activities of Prescott Dennett, sponsor of paper isolationist committees, so Dennett could mail the propaganda under Congressional frank.

The Post exposed the fact that Hill sent a House truck to Dennett's office, which hauled off about a ton of unaddressed franked envelopes wanted by the grand jury for evidence. Fish told the House this

Faddis Charges REA Wastes Copper, Funds

Agency Fighting Power Firms to Detriment Of War Effort, He Says

Waste of strategically needed copper, power capacity and money by the Rural Electrification Administration in a contest with private power companies in Southwestern defense areas was charged yesterday by Representative Charles I. Faddis (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

Faddis, chairman of a House Military Affairs subcommittee investigating defense procurement, completed hearings on alleged copper misuse in Arkansas and Texas, and said his subcommittee will shortly file a report "to lay the facts before the public."

Provokes Inter-Agency Conflict

Two days of subcommittee testimony on House charges by Representative Thomas D. Winter (Republican), of Kansas, that REA was needlessly duplicating private power facilities, uncovered a sharp conflict between Government agencies on the defense value of REA operations.

Evidence submitted to the subcommittee disclosed:

That the Arkansas Department of Public Utilities condemned as wasteful of both power and copper a proposal for the REA to run a 250-mile transmission line from the Grand River Dam in Oklahoma to an aluminum reduction plant now being built by the Aluminum Co. of America in Arkansas.

That the Army and Navy Munitions Board on January 20 decided that a counter-proposal to pool facilities of 11 private utilities to supply power to the plant "is more conservative of critical war material" and "contributes more lasting benefits" than the REA plan.

The Army and Navy Munitions Board recommended to the Arkansas department that the REA-proposed line "is not necessary

D. C. Becomes United Nations' War Capital

U. S., Britain Set Up 'Combined Chiefs of Staff' Board Here

Washington became the war capital of the United Nations last night with announcement by the War Department that a board of "combined chiefs of staff" of the United States and Great Britain had been set up here.

This board, with offices on Constitution Avenue, will collaborate with military heads of all the nations opposing the Axis powers in all theaters of operation. It will advise the executive heads of America and England on broad matters of strategy, but "in minor and immedate matters relating to current strategy" will act without delay on its own initiative.

Among other things, work of the board will include production and distribution of war supplies where they will be most effective.

A Combined Command Post

The new board, composed of high American and British leaders, will be housed in the Public Health Building on Constitution Avenue—which thus will become a nerve center of the far-flung fight against the Axis. Located in the same building will be a Munitions Assignment Board, as well as central agencies to apportion shipping facilities and raw materials.

The "chiefs of staff" agency, the War Department said, "amounts to a combined command post for the conduct of all joint operations of the two governments in the war."

For the United States, the members are Admiral Harold R. Stark, the chief of naval operations; Gen. George C. Marshall, the Army chief of staff; Admiral E. J. King, commander in chief of the United

New Aerial Attacks

Moscow, Feb. 6.—The Red army, trying to widen three wedges imperiling Germany's long winter line, tonight admittedly was meeting increasing Nazi resistance, strengthened by air-borne reinforcements.

Front dispatches spoke for the first time in weeks of battles in which the Russians were outnumbered, but nevertheless said the Soviets were hacking their way westward after inflicting nearly 10,000 casualties on the invaders in a three-day period ending Thursday night.

Flynn Repudiated, Willkie Declares

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Wendell Willkie issued this statement today in commenting upon President Roosevelt's press conference views that the Nation, when at war, needed Congressmen who, regardless of party, would back up the Government and had a record of backing it:

"I congratulate the President on his repudiation of Ed Flynn. As I said in Syracuse the other night—what both Democrats and Republicans should be doing now is not dividing the country with excessive partisanship but selecting in the coming primaries and conventions men who have the daring and imagination to see the world whole and to tell the people the truth unaffected by partisan bias or political advantage."

Regardless of Party

Support Legislators Backing War Effort, President Asks

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

President Roosevelt, in the first indication of the stand he will take in the first wartime Congressional elections, called yesterday for election of Congressmen—regardless of party—who will back up the Government and have a record of backing up the Government in the emergency.

His remarks made it clear that some of the pre-war isolationists in House and Senate will receive little campaign assistance from the Administration, whether they are Republicans or Democrats, and that pre-war interventionists may receive support, no matter what their affiliation.

The President had his say on the forthcoming election when he was asked to comment on a statement by Edward J. Flynn, chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

"Mr. Flynn," said a newspaperman, "said something to the effect that if a Congress hostile to the Administration were elected it would be the same as a military defeat."

The newspaperman did not say it, but Mr. Flynn's statement was generally interpreted as meaning he wanted only Democrats elected in 1942.

President Roosevelt said he thought the easiest way of putting it was that when the country was at war the need was for Congressmen, regardless of party, that have backed up and would back up the Government. He suggested that the words regardless of party be put down twice.

Suffering from an acute heart ailment and blocked from hospitalization by the overcrowded condition of Washington hospitals, George M. Carhart, 79, of 330 Ninth Street Southeast, shot and killed himself at his home yesterday.

Carhart's physician, Dr. Thomas J. Rossiter, of 820 D Street Southeast, said he personally telephoned "every hospital in town except Gallinger" Thursday night.

"There wasn't a bed left," the doctor declared yesterday. "I didn't call Gallinger Hospital because it generally takes two or three days to obtain an admission there."

Carhart was found with a bullet wound in his head by a grandson, Malcolm Carhart, of 819 B Street Southeast, about 8 a. m. yesterday, a 38-caliber gun beside him.

A retired Navy Yard worker, Carhart lived alone and was virtually a recluse, the doctor said, adding that he had visited the patient twice on Thursday.

"He was in a critical condition and was suffering pain in his chest. He was nervous and weak and needed hospital care."

The physician said there was little doubt in his mind that had Carhart been able to go to a hospital, despite his critical condition, his life would have been prolonged.

"Under treatment his mind would have been better satisfied. And, of course, that gun would not have been present," Dr. Rossiter said.

12 Survivors Land

Sub Sinks U. S. Tanker Off New Jersey, 26 Missing

By the United Press

Atlantic City, N. J., Feb. 6.—Twenty-six crew members of the tanker India Arrow apparently lost their lives when a submarine torpedo sank the ship off the New Jersey coast, the captain and 11 other survivors said tonight.

The India Arrow was struck by a torpedo off Atlantic City at 7 p. m. Wednesday and the survivors were not picked up until early today.

Only one lifeboat was launched successfully and members of the crew had to swim in a sea covered with blazing oil, the survivors said.

Capt. Carl Samuel Johnson, 49, Staten Island, N. Y., was hurled into the water by the blast and swam to the one lowered lifeboat. This boat, Johnson told Coast Guard officers, was partly filled with water and crewmen in it were unable to maneuver it to pick up men whom they could hear calling in the water.

The captain said he did not believe the 26 missing men were picked up. The oil escaping from the tanker's hold was ignited, he said, and spread over the water for several hundred feet around the sinking ship.

Johnson said the torpedo apparently struck the tanker below the waterline and crashed into the engine room. All the engineer officers and most of the below-decks crew were among those missing.

Johnson, who was shipwrecked in

No Allied Losses

Americans, R.A.F. Crush Burma Raids

By the Associated Press

Rangoon, Feb. 6.—In a swift and effective shift from offense to defense the American Volunteer Group and their R. A. F. teammates broke up a chain of vicious Japanese raids on this Burma Road port today by destroying at least 10 and probably 20 raiders, up to two-thirds of the attacking force.

The A. V. G. and R. A. F. pilots ambushed the Japanese nearly four miles above Rangoon in this most spectacular of a long list of stunning victories.

Pilots of the Volunteer Group—from Los Angeles, Spokane, Seattle and Fort Worth—saw the little Japanese army 97's disintegrate and fall in flames under the spouting fire of their Tomahawk guns.

"But we were too busy to keep track of everything we shot at," said a former marine from Seattle. "The Japs split up their formations and tried to escape every which-way. We had the advantage of altitude though, and kept right on their tails."

Their victory came in daylight, after Rangoon had been pounded all night by waves of enemy raiders in the third consecutive evernight attack. The last raid, at 9:50 a. m., was the seventh wave, involving 30 enemy planes, and when it was over this was the official score for the defenders:

American Volunteer Group: 7 certainly shot down; 5 probably.

R. A. F.: 3 certainly shot down, 5 probably.

There were no Allied losses.

The accomplishment was the more remarkable because it followed by 24 hours a hard raid by two waves of the R. A. F.'s Blenheim bombers, escorted by American fighters, on the enemy's Salween River base of Paan, in lower Burma, from which the Japanese are trying to drive toward the Burma Road.

The British and Burmese troops fighting the invaders on the Salween front 100 miles east of Rangood appeared standing firm on their orders "to fight the Japanese on every inch of our soil, to the last shot and, if necessary, to the last man."

British-held Martaban, at the mouth of the Salween, where it flows into the broad gulf of Martaban, was under spasmodic Japanese cannon fire but a communique said there were no casualties or damage.

Frustrated Enemy Lands More Troops; Assaults Are Reduced

Frustrated in every effort to drive American resistance from the Philippines by sheer weight of numbers, the Japanese apparently have been reduced to the expedient of simply adding to their 200,000 troops now swarming fruitlessly over Luzon.

Artillery emplacements built by the Japanese on the southeastern shore of Manila Bay have been smashed by the guns of Corregidor and its flanking forts, the War Department reported yesterday.

Along the 13-mile front across Bataan Peninsula, where repeated and costly Japanese assaults have got nowhere, little activity was reported beyond unproductive air attacks.

Nine Transports Seen

In Lingayen Gulf, on the west coast of Luzon, nine Japanese transports were seen, unloading more reinforcements for the huge Jap army already there. It was the only successful enemy effort reported.

The guns emplaced along the southeast shore of Manila Bay were thought to have been intended to support another Japanese attempt to storm Corregidor, the pivot of American resistance. Last week, an effort to take Corregidor by a landing party ferried across the bay in launches and small boats was crushed by the guns of the fortress before it started. It was wrecked at its assembly points.

Bombing of American-Filipino positions, which began early yesterday and slackened as the day went on, was supplemented by intermittent artillery duels which flared in the center of the line. Apparently enemy artillery fire was in support of strong patrols sent out in the same area to feel for soft spots in the defensive positions.

Army Communique No. 93

Full text of the War Department communique issued yesterday at 9:30 a. m. follows:

"Philippine Theater: Japanese gun emplacements on the southeastern shore of Manila Bay were destroyed by fire from our fortification. These artillery positions were presumably designated by the enemy for an attack against Corregidor.

"Nine Japanese transports are at ports in Lingayen Gulf, debarking troops to reinforce the already very large enemy concentrations in Bataan and other points on the island of Luzon.

"Relative quiet continued all along the front in Bataan during the past 24 hours. Enemy aerial bombing attacks on our troop positions, which began early in the day, decreased later on. They resulted in no damage. Intermittent artillery fire flared up in the center. There was some increase in patrol operations in this same general area.

"There is nothing to report from other areas."

Munitions Board Announced

The British members of the group were said to be in constant communication with Admiral Sir Dudley Pound, Gen. Sir Alan Brooke and Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Portal, the British chiefs of staff in London.

In addition, formation was announced of the Munitions Assignment Board, with Harry Hopkins as chairman and Maj. Gen. James H. Burns as executive. This has a counterpart in London, both with British and United States membership.

Brig. Gen. W. B. Smith, formerly secretary of the War Department general staff, was designated as United States secretary of the combined chiefs of staff, and also as secretary for the joint board and many other agencies established by the War and Navy Departments to insure unity in major strategy and operations. An initial staff of about eight officers will be selected from the Army and Navy.

The British secretary of the combined chiefs of staff is Brig. V. Dykes, for several years secretary of the committee of imperial defense and war cabinet in London.

The combined chiefs of staff "will be the control agency for planning and coordinating," the War Department said.

The department said also that in addition the new group would provide a medium for adjusting such joint operations as involve other governments of the United Nations such as China, the Netherlands East Indies, Australia and New Zealand, at the present.

Representatives of these governments will participate with the combined chiefs of staff in considering matters concerning their national interests.

Aguinaldo Pleads For Surrender

Finally captured by a party of scouts under Gen. Frederick Funston, then a young volunteer officer, Aguinaldo has spent the intervening years working for Philippine independence. The Japanese announced several days ago that he had joined them.

Last night's War Department communique announced also that the steamer Cynthia Olsen, under charter to the Army and loaded with lumber, was presumed to be lost, no word having been received from her since she radioed she was being attacked by a submarine December 7. She was en route from Seattle to Honolulu and carried a civilian crew of 33 and two soldiers, all of whom were presumed to be lost.

Army Communique No. 94

Following is the full text of the War Department communique issued yesterday as of 5 p. m.

"Philippine theater: During the past few days American and Filipino troops have been bombarded by the Japanese with radio broadcasts and pamphlets urging them to surrender. These appeals have occasioned considerable amusement for the troops.

"A radio broadcast addressed to Gen. MacArthur was made by Emilio Aguinaldo from Manila. Aguinaldo, who led the revolution against the United States in 1899, is apparently being put forward by the Japanese as a sort of Philippine Quisling. He urged immediate surrender. The appeal was ignored by Gen. MacArthur.

"The latest pamphlet dropped by Japanese aviators over our lines declares that American money is rapidly becoming valueless and that the pay the soldiers are receiving from the United States will do them no good. The pamphlet concludes by urging the Filipino troops to surrender.

"American and Filipino soldiers fighting on Bataan Peninsula have received frequent reports from Manila bout the worthless 'invasion currency' the Japanese are attempting to circulate at the point of the bayonet. Hence this pamphlet appears to them as particularly ludicrous.

"The text of the pamphlet follows:

"'To the Filipino Soldiers:

"'All banks in the city of Manila are under the regulations of the Japanese forces, and newly issued war note is controlling more and more the financial activities of Manila day after day. For this reason, the money you are receiving from the American forces as your salary is losing its value and will be waste paper in the near future. Take my word, you are exposing your life in danger without any remuneration. There is nothing so pointless! In Manila your countrymen enjoy life peacefully with full cooperation with the Japanese forces. Give up useless fighting. Surrender immediately to the Japanese forces.'

"Hawaii—The steamship Cynthia Olsen, under charter to the United States Army as a freight transport, having been unreported since December 7, 1941, is presumed to be lost as a result of enemy action. On December 7, this vessel reported that it was under attack by a Japanese submarine. It gave its position as about 1200 miles west of Seattle. The vessel was en route to Honolulu with a cargo of lumber. It was due in Honolulu on December 10.

"The vessel was 1280 net tons, under charter to the War Department by the Oliver J. Olsen Co. On board the vessel at the time were 33 civilian members of the crew and two soldiers. All are presumed to have been lost.

only because they are better off elsewhere but because it meant also there would be less people to feed.

Some Women Staying Behind

He added, however, that "a number of women are remaining behind, doing valuable work."

Civilians have been removed from certain island areas, he said, for their own good and also to remove the possibility of Fifth Column activity such as hampered the British defense in Malaya.

With the first full week of the siege of Singapore running out, there still was no enemy effort to loose his grand assault, either frontally or with the parachute technique used in Crete.

Singapore itself, four times raided from the air before 9 a. m., was defended not alone by its hot ground guns but by fighter pilots, who arose to destroy one enemy plane and damage three others. One British plane was lost.

Intermittent Enemy Action

General headquarters thus summed up the day's action:

"Our artillery continued to engage enemy troop movements in the Johore Bahru area (just across the strait).

"There has been intermittent enemy shelling on the north of the island during the last 24 hours.

"Enemy air activity has continued. Our forward troops were subjected to low-level machine-gun and bombing attacks."

British Take Stand West of Tobruk

War Sidelights

Atlantic Ship Losses Soar In 6 Months

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 6.—Allied shipping losses in the battle of the Atlantic, including the toll of American vessels in United States coastal waters, are heavier than they have been in the past six months, official circles announced today.

Although the U-boat blows at the Atlantic lifeline still are nowhere near the losses of the worst months during the World War, the number of submarines operating along the Atlantic lanes "quite possibly will be increased."

There is a possibility, these sources said, that all of the submarines operating in the Western Atlantic do not have to make the long voyage back to bases in Norway and France for refueling—a possibility that "surface supply ships may be servicing them."

Without doubt, however, these sources declared, "There are more U-boats operating in the Western Atlantic than ever before."

Shades of Friar Tuck

London, Feb. 6 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill declared recently that the British would defend vital airfields even if they had to do it with pikes—and now to the amazement of some quarters the war office actually has issued spiked poles to home guard units.

An army officer said the 5-foot-4-inch medieval type weapons' function will be very largely that of a bayonet.

"In mopping up operations the pike is lighter and handier than a rifle. In street fighting, for example, when the road is full of one's own men at night, it is the point, not the muzzle, that is used with the rifle and bayonet.

"There is no theory in the war office of sending a regiment of pikemen against tommyguns."

It Ain't Necessarily So

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—The B. B. C. denied reports tonight that Germany and Great Britain have agreed that neither country will be heavily bombed in the future. C. B. S. heard the broadcast.

"This piece of news is false," the B. B. C. said. "It is deliberately put out with the aim of explaining why, in spite of Hitler's threats, for several months the Luftwaffe has not been able to deliver strong attacks on England."

B. B. C. said reports of the air truce were circulated throughout Germany.

Imperial Lines Hold Fifty Miles Short Of Battered Port

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Feb. 6.—British forces, pushed back to the rugged western approaches to Tobruk, will make a stand short of that battered port "from a line which can be defended and defended successfully," highly placed British informants declared confidently tonight.

Indications that Gen. Sir Claude J. E. Auchinleck's eighth army already was organizing positions for such a stand were seen in today's Middle East communique which reported no change in the situation yesterday.

Thus it was apparent that imperial forces were holding their ground against the Axis sweep, some 50 to 60 miles west of Tobruk, where a seven-month siege of British defenders was lifted last December 10.

[The Italians claimed the capture of Tmimi, 60 miles west of Tobruk, and said Axis columns were continuing pursuit of the British in the vicinity of Ain El Gazala, but they made no claim of the capture of the latter town midway between Tmimi and Tobruk. The Germans spoke only of the "pursuit of the enemy in eastern Cirenaica."]

While the land front remained unchanged, R. A. F. bombers pounced on Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's lengthened lines in the Jebel El Akdar coastal range, at the top of the Libyan hump. Today's communique said they inflicted heavy losses among Axis men and machines.

NaziGrumbling Is Admitted By Goebbels

By the Associated Press

Bern, Feb. 6.—Germans are grumbling about reverses in Russia and because they are short of coal and potatoes, Hitler's own propaganda minister, Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, admitted today in the Nazi Journal das Reich.

He explained it by saying the people were "overworked and irritable."

"It doesn't matter whether one wants to curse things occasionally," Goebbels wrote. "The reasons may be varied. One complains of the cold, another of the shortage of potatoes or coal, a third about the overcrowded trains, a fourth about the Eastern Front, a fifth about the war in Africa. All this really is not bad because we all are overworked and irritable."

[In Washington, the Agriculture Department said that early fall frosts had cut German potato production 200 millions bushels and that the Nazis faced a possible rationing of this food, one of the principal items of their diet.]

Goebbels returned to his familiar theme that Germany is a "young nation," saying that because of this the people had not developed full confidence in the Nazi doctrines.

"On the battlefield we always have been a great people," he wrote. "In politics, however, we frequently have failed. We Germans must always be reminded of this strength again and again, because we don't feel sure of ourselves on the field of political decisions."

Goebbels said it was easy for the Germans to believe in victory during the Battle of France when special announcements told of "victories every three hours."

"When the time comes that the conquered areas have to be held and defended, and when the leaders of the state and the army are faced with constantly new difficulties, then deportment and morale are necessary."

Germany Is Getting Foodstuffs, Lloyds Say

London, Feb. 6 (AP).—Lloyds, the British underwriters, published figures today indicating that Germany is obtaining large quantities of foodstuffs and other products through French Mediterranean ports in spite of the British blockade.

In making a comparison between the first eight months of 1938 and the same period in 1941, Lloyds' figures showed increases in several important categories, including:

Fruits and vegetables, up from 180,000 to 200,000 tons; coffee, 16,000 to 30,000; cereals, 175,000 to 250,000, and wines, 80,000 to 240,000 tons.

Setting these figures against reports of a considerable food shortage in unoccupied France, British sources concluded it was a clear sign of the extent to which the Germans are diverting imports to their own purposes.

A.F.L. and C.I.O. Agree to Draft Mutual Policy for Duration

By Ben Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Representatives of the A. F. L. and the C. I. O. have agreed to meet together in closed sessions during the next two weeks to draft a uniform war-labor policy program for presentation to President Roosevelt, it was learned yesterday following a meeting of the joint C. I. O.-A. F. L. Labor's Victory Board at the White House.

The decision to draft the program was made at the White House while the labor representatives sat around the table with President Roosevelt, Sidney Hillman, labor director of the War Production Board, and Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, associate member of the War Labor Board.

Wartime questions of wage policy, labor supply, and priorities will be handled in the proposed program with the A. F. L. and C. I. O. striving to develop a formula agreeable to both.

The conference at the White House lasted for more than an hour, following which the labor representatives adjourned for lunch, where the mechanics of drafting the program were discussed.

Perkins' Exclusion Cited

Inclusion of Hillman in the conference instead of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins was regarded as another indication that major labor questions would continue to be decided outside of the Labor Department with Hillman and the dominant factions of both the A. F. L. and the C. I. O. playing important roles.

Labor representatives at the conference were President William Green of the A. F. of L., President Philip Murray of the C. I. O., George Meany, secretary-treasurer of the A. F. of L.; Daniel J. Tobin, president of the A. F. of L. Teamsters; R. J. Thomas, president of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers, and Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer of the C. I. O. United Electrical Workers.

Agreement on "what labor is to do," with a disposition to avoid points of conflict between the two labor organizations characterized yesterday's meetings, informed labor sources said.

Program Outlined

Matters which are expected to be handled in the program include the following:

1. Development of an industrial training program to provide enough skilled workers for rapidly expanding war industries.
2. Handling of priorities unemployment by increased use of unemployment compensation.
3. Clarification of Selective Service procedure with respect to drafting of skilled men along with possible establishment of a system of labor priorities to determine who shall get "first crack" at skilled labor reserves—industry or the Army.
4. Provisions for maintenance of labor's standard of living in the face of rising costs, along with possible adjustment of shift-wage questions created in converting industry to continuous operation.

At the close of the meeting at the White House, Hillman, Green and Murray joined in calling the conference "exceedingly satisfactory."

Axis Press Shows Uneasiness Over Allied Invasion Threat

By the Associated Press

Bern, Feb. 6.—The Axis press for the first time speculated today that the United States and Britain might attempt invasion of Europe in the spring.

The Italian Admiral Ducci, writing in the review, Ofifi, predicted that the British and Americans would remain on the defensive in the Pacific, devoting their first offensive efforts to preventing the Axis from launching a new drive against Russia.

The invasion, he said, most likely will be directed against the Balkans or northern Scandinavia.

In the Balkans, Ducci wrote, the Allies probably would attack through Bulgaria or Albania, but also might move through Turkey.

In Scandinavia, he went on, the attackers probably would land above the Arctic Circle, between Navrik, Norway, and Archangel, Russia, forming a solid front with the Russians.

From the north, as Ducci envisaged the offensive, the British and Americans would try to push through Sweden and Finland, encircling Germany on the north. He also predicted intensification of naval action in the Mediterranean and the Atlantic.

Reds Strike Against Rising Nazi Power

Germans suffered heavily.

For four days now Soviet communiques have noted increasing German aerial activity "on Moscow's approaches," with 32 Nazi planes destroyed in that period.

However, residents of this capital have heard no gunfire, nor have they had an alert in several weeks, indicating that the German airmen never got very close to Moscow.

Raging blizzards in some sectors hampered offensive operations, but renewed Nazi air thrusts indicated that the weather had relaxed in some zones.

The Russians have three salients they are trying to expand, one in the northwest threatening Velikie Luki, only 85 miles from the Latvian border, the Kirkov spearhead below Vyazma some 90 miles from Smopalenski, and the Lozovaya drive between Kharkov and Stalino toward Dnieperopetrovsk, 65 miles beyond.

Otherwise the German lines appeared to be holding outside Leningrad down to Velikie Luki, thence east to Rzhev, and south through Bryansk, Orel and Kharkov to Taganrog.

Prisoners taken from the Thirty-fifth German infantry division were quoted as saying that all detachments had received stern orders to defend every village to the last man—or else.

There were unconfirmed reports that the Russians had pierced German lines north and south of Kharkov, the Ukraine's second city, and also that some units were operating north of Mariupol, 50 miles west of the German sea of Azov, anchor at Taganrog.

a hurricane off Cuba in 1917 and spent seven days and nights without food or water on a raft, said he caught a confused glimpse of other men on the ship being hurled about before he was thrown over the side.

Two lifeboats at the stern of the tanker were destroyed in the blast, he said, "and a third boat, although full of men, could not be lowered because of the sudden listing of the ship. The fourth boat was lowered but became partly filled with water.

"I swam to this boat and was pulled aboard. The boat picked up three other men but because it was loggy with water, it could not be maneuvered to pick up more men. I could hear the men shouting in the water but could not see them because of the dense pall of smoke hanging over the blazing oil."

British Tanker Sunk Off Canadian Coast

An Eastern Canadian Port, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—An Axis submarine has torpedoed and sunk a British tanker off the Canadian Atlantic coast, fifth victim of undersea warfare in that area since mid-January, it was revealed today when six survivors were landed here.

The survivors said 42 shipmates who left the tanker in two lifeboats shortly after it was torpedoed were missing.

Four of the six survivors were in critical condition from exposure and lack of food and water, and doctors said amputations might be necessary to save the lives of some of them. They estimated they had drifted about 52 hours with no nourishment but a bottle of brandy.

There were seven in their boat when they left the tanker, but one, an electrician who had sailed on the tanker as a passenger, died.

Revenue Aide to Assist With Tax Returns

To assist taxpayers in making out their income tax returns, a representative of the United States Internal Revenue Bureau will be at the Farmers' Banking & Trust Co. of Rockville the week beginning February 16 and at the Montgomery County National Bank of Rockville from February 24 through February 28. A representative of the State Comptroller's office will be at the office of the clerk of the Circuit Court at Rockville for one week beginning March 12 to assist in preparing State income tax returns.

Don't Be Smug; U. S. Can Lose, Batt Warns

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 6.—William L. Batt, chairman of the combined Interallied Raw Materials Board, declared tonight that the United States had a chance of losing the war and should not "kid" itself.

"I find all around me a smugness and satisfaction which to my mind are entirely unjustified," Batt asserted in an address before the annual advertising award presentations banquet here.

Batt, director of the War Production Board's materials division, asserted that "it seems to me that too much attention is being paid to minor air engagements in which American fliers down two Jap planes and lose one, and not enough attention is being paid to the enemy's steady progress against our vital outposts."

He made these observations:

"If Singapore goes down, the whole Far Eastern theater may be lost."

"If the Burma Road is closed, it will be next to impossible for us to continue to help the Chinese; the Nazis are on the offensive again in North Africa; and, while Russia has regained some ground, she still has a long way to go."

"Suppose we do lose the whole of the Far East and all the critical supplies we need from that area," Batt continued. "Suppose the Germans finally succeed in Africa and take Suez, which would be tantamount to taking the whole Middle East? Suppose Hitler does start a new and successful offensive in Russia in the Spring?

"Suppose all of these things happen, and all of them can happen. Where would we be? I do not like to think about the answer to that question."

All Must Enroll For Sugar Rations

Considerable Hoarding Recently

Henderson said the equalizing action against hoarders is necessary in order to place all consumers on the same just and fair footing.

"There has been a considerable amount of hoarding in recent weeks," he declared. He added, however, that he expected relatively few cases of falsification of reporting the amount of sugar in the possession of any family.

He gave no indication as to when the rationing system would become effective or how long it would take to print up the books, organize the registration and instruct the local rationing boards which will have general supervision. It was assumed that these boards are the same as those now handling the automobile and tire rationing programs.

In the meantime, Henderson asked "every patriotic citizen" to reduce his normal sugar consumption by at least one-third, and told hoarders to start dipping into their accumulations rather than buy more sugar. He also instructed retailers to continue limiting sales to individuals until the rationing plan is put into effect.

"I want to reiterate that we expect to ration sugar as a war measure," Henderson added. "The facts are that we can count now on only about 5,300,000 tons of sugar this year, as against 7,989,000 tons in 1941. That means a one-third reduction must be made in both household and industrial consumption.

"The reason for this decline in supply is three-fold; Sugar cane is required to make molasses, from which alcohol can be derived for manufacture of smokeless powder. Cutting down on sugar means more powder for our soldiers. Secondly, our imports from the Philippines have been cut off and those from Hawaii will probably be curtailed. Third, our allies have lost some of their supply sources and will draw in part on some of our sources this year. For the first time every person in the country has an opportunity to make a direct contribution to the war by reducing his consumption of sugar. I am counting on every person to do his bit."

Another Father Duffy Cheers Yanks, This Time in Luzon

By Frank Hewlett
United Press Staff Writer

With Gen. MacArthur's Army in the Philippines, Feb. 6.—United States troops here have a namesake of the Rainbow Division's famed Father Francis P. Duffy and he carries on heroically amid greater handicaps than that spiritual guide of World War fighters had in France.

He is Father John E. Duffy, of Toledo, Ohio, who holds the rank of major in the Regular Army.

He heads the chaplains for the First Philippine Corps. Four of those under him, all Filipinos, are listed as missing in action, and he feels responsible for their disappearance because he urged them to remain with their men.

Three of the missing chaplains are Roman Catholics and one an Agilpayan, belonging to a dissenting Catholic group with approximately 800,000 communicants throughout the Philippines.

Father Duffy has received the decoration of the Purple Heart awarded for "singularly meritorious action," as a result of his receiving a minor wound in action on January 1.

The spiritual are only a part of of the chaplains' duties in this war. They are assisting with burials, operating aid stations, delivering messages under shell fire and offering assistance with supplies.

Father Duffy is with a group that has been in the thick of the fray since the bombing of Clark Field and Fort Stottsenburg, north of Manila, at the start of the war.

He believes firmly that the efforts of the chaplains have helped to steady Filipino troops, who are predominantly Catholic.

Duffy is a graduate of Notre Dame University and of the Seminary of Mount St. Mary's, at Norwood, Ohio.

He has been in the Army nine years and has been promoted since the war started. He says he has ridden on the reputation of the original Father Duffy, who was a personal friend. The last time he saw his namesake, he recalled today, was at a banquet at which the chaplain of the "Fighting Irish" Sixty-ninth Regiment offered the following toast to the guest of honor:

"May the good Lord take a liking to you, but not too soon!"

Father Duffy is not the only American chaplain in the First Philippine Corps, however, who has performed yeoman duty. With the cavalry regiment there is an amazing character in Father Methias Zerfus, a captain from Twin Oaks, Wis. He has not shaved since the war's start and has a heavy black beard. When wearing a pith helmet to keep off the hot sun, this little man is a double for Haile Selassie, Emperor of Abyssinia.

For going through the hectic campaign from Lingayen Gulf to Bataan Peninsula in December, he shared the Twenty-sixth Cavalry citation of the regiment for valor by the corps commander. An officer of the regiment recalled today how during the bombing and strafing of Binalonan, east of Lingayen Gulf, Father Zerfus stayed exposed in the open while all other able-bodied men sought badly needed cover. He considered it his duty to comfort a badly wounded soldier on an open truck.

The Distinguished Service Cross has been awarded to Capt. Ralph Brown, Methodist chaplain from Seattle, Wash., for his courage in treating and taking to the hospital men injured during the raid on Clark Field, in which the Japanese used a record number of bombers.

Americans, R.A.F. Crush Burma Raids

By the Associated Press

Rangoon, Feb. 6.—In a swift and effective shift from offense to defense the American Volunteer Group and their R. A. F. teammates broke up a chain of vicious Japanese raids on this Burma Road port today by destroying at least 10 and probably 20 raiders, up to two-thirds of the attacking force.

The A. V. G. and R. A. F. pilots ambushed the Japanese nearly four miles above Rangoon in this most spectacular of a long list of stunning victories.

Pilots of the Volunteer Group—from Los Angeles, Spokane, Seattle and Fort Worth—saw the little Japanese army 97's disintegrate and fall in flames under the spouting fire of their Tomahawk guns.

"But we were too busy to keep track of everything we shot at," said a former marine from Seattle. "The Japs split up their formations and tried to escape every which-way. We had the advantage of altitude though, and kept right on their tails."

Their victory came in daylight, after Rangoon had been pounded all night by waves of enemy raiders in the third consecutive evernight attack. The last raid, at 9:50 a. m., was the seventh wave, involving 30 enemy planes, and when it was over this was the official score for the defenders:

American Volunteer Group: 7 certainly shot down; 5 probably.

R. A. F.: 3 certainly shot down, 5 probably.

There were no Allied losses.

The accomplishment was the more remarkable because it followed by 24 hours a hard raid by two waves of the R. A. F.'s Blenheim bombers, escorted by American fighters, on the enemy's Salween River base of Paan, in lower Burma, from which the Japanese are trying to drive toward the Burma Road.

The British and Burmese troops fighting the invaders on the Salween front 100 miles east of Rangood appeared standing firm on their orders "to fight the Japanese on every inch of our soil, to the last shot and, if necessary, to the last man."

British-held Martaban, at the mouth of the Salween, where it flows into the broad gulf of Martaban, was under spasmodic Japanese cannon fire but a communique said there were no casualties or damage.

Frustrated Enemy Lands More Troops; Assaults Are Reduced

Frustrated in every effort to drive American resistance from the Philippines by sheer weight of numbers, the Japanese apparently have been reduced to the expedient of simply adding to their 200,000 troops now swarming fruitlessly over Luzon.

Artillery emplacements built by the Japanese on the southeastern shore of Manila Bay have been smashed by the guns of Corregidor and its flanking forts, the War Department reported yesterday.

Along the 13-mile front across Bataan Peninsula, where repeated and costly Japanese assaults have got nowhere, little activity was reported beyond unproductive air attacks.

Nine Transports Seen

In Lingayen Gulf, on the west coast of Luzon, nine Japanese transports were seen, unloading more reinforcements for the huge Jap army already there. It was the only successful enemy effort reported.

The guns emplaced along the southeast shore of Manila Bay were thought to have been intended to support another Japanese attempt to storm Corregidor, the pivot of American resistance. Last week, an effort to take Corregidor by a landing party ferried across the bay in launches and small boats was crushed by the guns of the fortress before it started. It was wrecked at its assembly points.

Bombing of American-Filipino positions, which began early yesterday and slackened as the day went on, was supplemented by intermittent artillery duels which flared in the center of the line. Apparently enemy artillery fire was in support of strong patrols sent out in the same area to feel for soft spots in the defensive positions.

Army Communique No. 93

Full text of the War Department communique issued yesterday at 9:30 a. m. follows:

"Philippine Theater: Japanese gun emplacements on the southeastern shore of Manila Bay were destroyed by fire from our fortification. These artillery positions were presumably designated by the enemy for an attack against Corregidor.

"Nine Japanese transports are at ports in Lingayen Gulf, debarking troops to reinforce the already very large enemy concentrations in Bataan and other points on the island of Luzon.

"Relative quiet continued all along the front in Bataan during the past 24 hours. Enemy aerial bombing attacks on our troop positions, which began early in the day, decreased later on. They resulted in no damage. Intermittent artillery fire flared up in the center. There was some increase in patrol operations in this same general area.

"There is nothing to report from other areas."

How War Costs Stack Up

BOOKS FOR BILLIONS—Senator Meade (Democrat), of New York, explains that World War I cost the United States approximately 23 billion dollars, exclusive of foreign loans, while 39 billions have been appropriated for World War II during the first month of the present session of Congress. The Congressman's interested listener is Rose Marie Chite, Senate messenger. Meade has used each book to represent a billion dollars

The British representatives are Field Marshal Sir John Dill, former chief of the imperial general staff; Admiral Sir Charles Little; Lieut. Gen. Sir Colville Wemyss, and Air Marshal A. T. Harris.

Munitions Board Announced

The British members of the group were said to be in constant communication with Admiral Sir Dudley Pound, Gen. Sir Alan Brooke and Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Portal, the British chiefs of staff in London.

In addition, formation was announced of the Munitions Assignment Board, with Harry Hopkins as chairman and Maj. Gen. James H. Burns as executive. This has a counterpart in London, both with British and United States membership.

Brig. Gen. W. B. Smith, formerly secretary of the War Department general staff, was designated as United States secretary of the combined chiefs of staff, and also as secretary for the joint board and many other agencies established by the War and Navy Departments to insure unity in major strategy and operations. An initial staff of about eight officers will be selected from the Army and Navy.

The British secretary of the combined chiefs of staff is Brig. V. Dykes, for several years secretary of the committee of imperial defense and war cabinet in London.

The combined chiefs of staff "will be the control agency for planning and coordinating," the War Department said.

The department said also that in addition the new group would provide a medium for adjusting such joint operations as involve other governments of the United Nations such as China, the Netherlands East Indies, Australia and New Zealand, at the present.

Representatives of these governments will participate with the combined chiefs of staff in considering matters concerning their national interests.

Finally captured by a party of scouts under Gen. Frederick Funston, then a young volunteer officer, Aguinaldo has spent the intervening years working for Philippine independence. The Japanese announced several days ago that he had joined them.

Last night's War Department communique announced also that the steamer Cynthia Olsen, under charter to the Army and loaded with lumber, was presumed to be lost, no word having been received from her since she radioed she was being attacked by a submarine December 7. She was en route from Seattle to Honolulu and carried a civilian crew of 33 and two soldiers, all of whom were presumed to be lost.

Army Communique No. 94

Following is the full text of the War Department communique issued yesterday as of 5 p. m.

"Philippine theater: During the past few days American and Filipino troops have been bombarded by the Japanese with radio broadcasts and pamphlets urging them to surrender. These appeals have occasioned considerable amusement for the troops.

"A radio broadcast addressed to Gen. MacArthur was made by Emilio Aguinaldo from Manila. Aguinaldo, who led the revolution against the United States in 1899, is apparently being put forward by the Japanese as a sort of Philippine Quisling. He urged immediate surrender. The appeal was ignored by Gen. MacArthur.

"The latest pamphlet dropped by Japanese aviators over our lines declares that American money is rapidly becoming valueless and that the pay the soldiers are receiving from the United States will do them no good. The pamphlet concludes by urging the Filipino troops to surrender.

"American and Filipino soldiers fighting on Bataan Peninsula have received frequent reports from Manila bout the worthless 'invasion currency' the Japanese are attempting to circulate at the point of the bayonet. Hence this pamphlet appears to them as particularly ludicrous.

"The text of the pamphlet follows:

"'To the Filipino Soldiers:

"'All banks in the city of Manila are under the regulations of the Japanese forces, and newly issued war note is controlling more and more the financial activities of Manila day after day. For this reason, the money you are receiving from the American forces as your salary is losing its value and will be waste paper in the near future. Take my word, you are exposing your life in danger without any remuneration. There is nothing so pointless! In Manila your countrymen enjoy life peacefully with full cooperation with the Japanese forces. Give up useless fighting. Surrender immediately to the Japanese forces.'

"Hawaii—The steamship Cynthia Olsen, under charter to the United States Army as a freight transport, having been unreported since December 7, 1941, is presumed to be lost as a result of enemy action. On December 7, this vessel reported that it was under attack by a Japanese submarine. It gave its position as about 1200 miles west of Seattle. The vessel was en route to Honolulu with a cargo of lumber. It was due in Honolulu on December 10.

"The vessel was 1280 net tons, under charter to the War Department by the Oliver J. Olsen Co. On board the vessel at the time were 33 civilian members of the crew and two soldiers. All are presumed to have been lost.

only because they are better off elsewhere but because it meant also there would be less people to feed.

Some Women Staying Behind

He added, however, that "a number of women are remaining behind, doing valuable work."

Civilians have been removed from certain island areas, he said, for their own good and also to remove the possibility of Fifth Column activity such as hampered the British defense in Malaya.

With the first full week of the siege of Singapore running out, there still was no enemy effort to loose his grand assault, either frontally or with the parachute technique used in Crete.

Singapore itself, four times raided from the air before 9 a. m., was defended not alone by its hot ground guns but by fighter pilots, who arose to destroy one enemy plane and damage three others. One British plane was lost.

Intermittent Enemy Action

General headquarters thus summed up the day's action:

"Our artillery continued to engage enemy troop movements in the Johore Bahru area (just across the strait).

"There has been intermittent enemy shelling on the north of the island during the last 24 hours.

"Enemy air activity has continued. Our forward troops were subjected to low-level machine-gun and bombing attacks."

British Take Stand West of Tobruk

War Sidelights

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 6.—Allied shipping losses in the battle of the Atlantic, including the toll of American vessels in United States coastal waters, are heavier than they have been in the past six months, official circles announced today.

Although the U-boat blows at the Atlantic lifeline still are nowhere near the losses of the worst months during the World War, the number of submarines operating along the Atlantic lanes "quite possibly will be increased."

There is a possibility, these sources said, that all of the submarines operating in the Western Atlantic do not have to make the long voyage back to bases in Norway and France for refueling—a possibility that "surface supply ships may be servicing them."

Without doubt, however, these sources declared, "There are more U-boats operating in the Western Atlantic than ever before."

Shades of Friar Tuck

London, Feb. 6 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill declared recently that the British would defend vital airfields even if they had to do it with pikes—and now to the amazement of some quarters the war office actually has issued spiked poles to home guard units.

An army officer said the 5-foot-4-inch medieval type weapons' function will be very largely that of a bayonet.

"In mopping up operations the pike is lighter and handier than a rifle. In street fighting, for example, when the road is full of one's own men at night, it is the point, not the muzzle, that is used with the rifle and bayonet.

"There is no theory in the war office of sending a regiment of pikemen against tommyguns."

It Ain't Necessarily So

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—The B. B. C. denied reports tonight that Germany and Great Britain have agreed that neither country will be heavily bombed in the future. C. B. S. heard the broadcast.

"This piece of news is false," the B. B. C. said. "It is deliberately put out with the aim of explaining why, in spite of Hitler's threats, for several months the Luftwaffe has not been able to deliver strong attacks on England."

B. B. C. said reports of the air truce were circulated throughout Germany.

Imperial Lines Hold Fifty Miles Short Of Battered Port

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Feb. 6.—British forces, pushed back to the rugged western approaches to Tobruk, will make a stand short of that battered port "from a line which can be defended and defended successfully," highly placed British informants declared confidently tonight.

Indications that Gen. Sir Claude J. E. Auchinleck's eighth army already was organizing positions for such a stand were seen in today's Middle East communique which reported no change in the situation yesterday.

Thus it was apparent that imperial forces were holding their ground against the Axis sweep, some 50 to 60 miles west of Tobruk, where a seven-month siege of British defenders was lifted last December 10.

[The Italians claimed the capture of Tmimi, 60 miles west of Tobruk, and said Axis columns were continuing pursuit of the British in the vicinity of Ain El Gazala, but they made no claim of the capture of the latter town midway between Tmimi and Tobruk. The Germans spoke only of the "pursuit of the enemy in eastern Cirenaica."]

While the land front remained unchanged, R. A. F. bombers pounced on Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's lengthened lines in the Jebel El Akdar coastal range, at the top of the Libyan hump. Today's communique said they inflicted heavy losses among Axis men and machines.

NaziGrumbling Is Admitted By Goebbels

By the Associated Press

Bern, Feb. 6.—Germans are grumbling about reverses in Russia and because they are short of coal and potatoes, Hitler's own propaganda minister, Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, admitted today in the Nazi Journal das Reich.

He explained it by saying the people were "overworked and irritable."

"It doesn't matter whether one wants to curse things occasionally," Goebbels wrote. "The reasons may be varied. One complains of the cold, another of the shortage of potatoes or coal, a third about the overcrowded trains, a fourth about the Eastern Front, a fifth about the war in Africa. All this really is not bad because we all are overworked and irritable."

[In Washington, the Agriculture Department said that early fall frosts had cut German potato production 200 millions bushels and that the Nazis faced a possible rationing of this food, one of the principal items of their diet.]

Goebbels returned to his familiar theme that Germany is a "young nation," saying that because of this the people had not developed full confidence in the Nazi doctrines.

"On the battlefield we always have been a great people," he wrote. "In politics, however, we irequently have failed. We Germans must always be reminded of this strength again and again, because we don't feel sure of ourselves on the field of political decisions."

Goebbels said it was easy for the Germans to believe in victory during the Battle of France when special announcements told of "victories every three hours."

"When the time comes that the conquered areas have to be held and defended, and when the leaders of the state and the army are faced with constantly new difficulties, then deportment and morale are necessary."

Germany Is Getting Foodstuffs, Lloyds Say

London, Feb. 6 (AP).—Lloyds, the British underwriters, published figures today indicating that Germany is obtaining large quantities of foodstuffs and other products through French Mediterranean ports in spite of the British blockade.

In making a comparison between the first eight months of 1938 and the same period in 1941, Lloyds' figures showed increases in several important categories, including:

Fruits and vegetables, up from 180,000 to 200,000 tons; coffee, 16,000 to 30,000; cereals, 175,000 to 250,000, and wines, 80,000 to 240,000 tons.

Setting these figures against reports of a considerable food shortage in unoccupied France, British sources concluded it was a clear sign of the extent to which the Germans are diverting imports to their own purposes.

A.F.L. and C.I.O. Agree to Draft Mutual Policy for Duration

By Ben Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Representatives of the A. F. L. and the C. I. O. have agreed to meet together in closed sessions during the next two weeks to draft a uniform war-labor policy program for presentation to President Roosevelt, it was learned yesterday following a meeting of the joint C. I. O.-A. F. L. Labor's Victory Board at the White House.

The decision to draft the program was made at the White House while the labor representatives sat around the table with President Roosevelt, Sidney Hillman, labor director of the War Production Board, and Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, associate member of the War Labor Board.

Wartime questions of wage policy, labor supply, and priorities will be handled in the proposed program with the A. F. L. and C. I. O. striving to develop a formula agreeable to both.

The conference at the White House lasted for more than an hour, following which the labor representatives adjourned for lunch, where the mechanics of drafting the program were discussed.

Perkins' Exclusion Cited

Inclusion of Hillman in the conference instead of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins was regarded as another indication that major labor questions would continue to be decided outside of the Labor Department with Hillman and the dominant factions of both the A. F. L. and the C. I. O. playing important roles.

Labor representatives at the conference were President William Green of the A. F. of L., President Philip Murray of the C. I. O., George Meany, secretary-treasurer of the A. F. of L.; Daniel J. Tobin, president of the A. F. of L. Teamsters; R. J. Thomas, president of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers, and Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer of the C. I. O. United Electrical Workers.

Agreement on "what labor is to do," with a disposition to avoid points of conflict between the two labor organizations characterized yesterday's meetings, informed labor sources said.

Program Outlined

Matters which are expected to be handled in the program include the following:

1. Development of an industrial training program to provide enough skilled workers for rapidly expanding war industries.

2. Handling of priorities unemployment by increased use of unemployment compensation.

3. Clarification of Selective Service procedure with respect to drafting of skilled men along with possible establishment of a system of labor priorities to determine who shall get "first crack" at skilled labor reserves—industry or the Army.

4. Provisions for maintenance of labor's standard of living in the face of rising costs, along with possible adjustment of shift-wage questions created in converting industry to continuous operation.

At the close of the meeting at the White House, Hillman, Green and Murray joined in calling the conference "exceedingly satisfactory."

Axis Press Shows Uneasiness Over Allied Invasion Threat

By the Associated Press

Bern, Feb. 6.—The Axis press for the first time speculated today that the United States and Britain might attempt invasion of Europe in the spring.

The Italian Admiral Ducci, writing in the review, Ofifi, predicted that the British and Americans would remain on the defensive in the Pacific, devoting their first offensive efforts to preventing the Axis from launching a new drive against Russia.

The invasion, he said, most likely will be directed against the Balkans or northern Scandinavia.

In the Balkans, Ducci wrote, the Allies probably would attack through Bulgaria or Albania, but also might move through Turkey.

In Scandinavia, he went on, the attackers probably would land above the Arctic Circle, between Navrik, Norway, and Archangel, Russia, forming a solid front with the Russians.

From the north, as Ducci envisaged the offensive, the British and Americans would try to push through Sweden and Finland, encircling Germany on the north. He also predicted intensification of naval action in the Mediterranean and the Atlantic.

Germans suffered heavily.

For four days now Soviet communiques have noted increasing German aerial activity "on Moscow's approaches," with 32 Nazi planes destroyed in that period.

However, residents of this capital have heard no gunfire, nor have they had an alert in several weeks, indicating that the German airmen never got very close to Moscow.

Raging blizzards in some sectors hampered offensive operations, but renewed Nazi air thrusts indicated that the weather had relaxed in some zones.

The Russians have three sallents they are trying to expand, one in the northwest threatening Velikie Luki, only 85 miles from the Latvian border, the Kirkov spearhead below Vyazma some 90 miles from Smopalenski, and the Lozovaya drive between Kharkov and Stalino toward Dnieperopetrovsk, 65 miles beyond.

Otherwise the German lines appeared to be holding outside Leningrad down to Velikie Luki, thence east to Rzhev, and south through Bryansk, Orel and Kharkov to Taganrog.

Prisoners taken from the Thirty-fifth German infantry division were quoted as saying that all detachments had received stern orders to defend every village to the last man—or else.

There were unconfirmed reports that the Russians had pierced German lines north and south of Kharkov, the Ukraine's second city, and also that some units were operating north of Mariupol, 50 miles west of the German sea of Azov, anchor at Taganrog.

a hurricane off Cuba in 1917 and spent seven days and nights without food or water on a raft, said he caught a confused glimpse of other men on the ship being hurled about before he was thrown over the side.

Two lifeboats at the stern of the tanker were destroyed in the blast, he said, "and a third boat, although full of men, could not be lowered because of the sudden listing of the ship. The fourth boat was lowered but became partly filled with water.

"I swam to this boat and was pulled aboard. The boat picked up three other men but because it was loggy with water, it could not be maneuvered to pick up more men. I could hear the men shouting in the water but could not see them because of the dense pall of smoke hanging over the blazing oil."

British Tanker Sunk Off Canadian Coast

An Eastern Canadian Port, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—An Axis submarine has torpedoed and sunk a British tanker off the Canadian Atlantic coast, fifth victim of undersea warfare in that area since mid-January, it was revealed today when six survivors were landed here.

The survivors said 42 shipmates who left the tanker in two lifeboats shortly after it was torpedoed were missing.

Four of the six survivors were in critical condition from exposure and lack of food and water, and doctors said amputations might be necessary to save the lives of some of them. They estimated they had drifted about 52 hours with no nourishment but a bottle of brandy.

There were seven in their boat when they left the tanker, but one, an electrician who had sailed on the tanker as a passenger, died.

Revenue Aide to Assist With Tax Returns

To assist taxpayers in making out their income tax returns, a representative of the United States Internal Revenue Bureau will be at the Farmers' Banking & Trust Co. of Rockville the week beginning February 16 and at the Montgomery County National Bank of Rockville from February 24 through February 28. A representative of the State Comptroller's office will be at the office of the clerk of the Circuit Court at Rockville for one week beginning March 12 to assist in preparing State income tax returns.

Don't Be Smug; U. S. Can Lose, Batt Warns

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 6.—William L. Batt, chairman of the combined Interallied Raw Materials Board, declared tonight that the United States had a chance of losing the war and should not "kid" itself.

"I find all around me a smugness and satisfaction which to my mind are entirely unjustified," Batt asserted in an address before the annual advertising award presentations banquet here.

Batt, director of the War Production Board's materials division, asserted that "it seems to me that too much attention is being paid to minor air engagements in which American fliers down two Jap planes and lose one, and not enough attention is being paid to the enemy's steady progress against our vital outposts."

He made these observations:

"If Singapore goes down, the whole Far Eastern theater may be lost."

"If the Burma Road is closed, it will be next to impossible for us to continue to help the Chinese; the Nazis are on the offensive again in North Africa; and, while Russia has regained some ground, she still has a long way to go."

"Suppose we do lose the whole of the Far East and all the critical supplies we need from that area," Batt continued. "Suppose the Germans finally succeed in Africa and take Suez, which would be tantamount to taking the whole Middle East? Suppose Hitler does start a new and successful offensive in Russia in the Spring?

"Suppose all of these things happen, and all of them can happen. Where would we be? I do not like to think about the answer to that question."

All Must Enroll For Sugar Rations

Considerable Hoarding Recently

Henderson said the equalizing action against hoarders is necessary in order to place all consumers on the same just and fair footing.

"There has been a considerable amount of hoarding in recent weeks," he declared. He added, however, that he expected relatively few cases of falsification of reporting the amount of sugar in the possession of any family.

He gave no indication as to when the rationing system would become effective or how long it would take to print up the books, organize the registration and instruct the local rationing boards which will have general supervision. It was assumed that these boards are the same as those now handling the automobile and tire rationing programs.

In the meantime, Henderson asked "every patriotic citizen" to reduce his normal sugar consumption by at least one-third, and told hoarders to start dipping into their accumulations rather than buy more sugar. He also instructed retailers to continue limiting sales to individuals until the rationing plan is put into effect.

"I want to reiterate that we expect to ration sugar as a war measure," Henderson added. "The facts are that we can count now on only about 5,300,000 tons of sugar this year, as against 7,989,000 tons in 1941. That means a one-third reduction must be made in both household and industrial consumption.

"The reason for this decline in supply is three-fold; Sugar cane is required to make molasses, from which alcohol can be derived for manufacture of smokeless powder. Cutting down on sugar means more powder for our soldiers. Secondly, our imports from the Philippines have been cut off and those from Hawaii will probably be curtailed. Third, our allies have lost some of their supply sources and will draw in part on some of our sources this year. For the first time every person in the country has an opportunity to make a direct contribution to the war by reducing his consumption of sugar. I am counting on every person to do his bit."

Another Father Duffy Cheers Yanks, This Time in Luzon

By Frank Hewlett

With Gen. MacArthur's Army in the Philippines, Feb. 6.—United States troops here have a namesake of the Rainbow Division's famed Father Francis P. Duffy and he carries on heroically amid greater handicaps than that spiritual guide of World War fighters had in France.

He is Father John E. Duffy, of Toledo, Ohio, who holds the rank of major in the Regular Army.

He heads the chaplains for the First Philippine Corps. Four of those under him, all Filipinos, are listed as missing in action, and he feels responsible for their disappearance because he urged them to remain with their men.

Three of the missing chaplains are Roman Catholics and one an Aglipayan, belonging to a dissenting Catholic group with approximately 800,000 communicants throughout the Philippines.

Father Duffy has received the decoration of the Purple Heart ,awarded for "singularly meritorious action," as a result of his receiving a minor wound in action on January 1.

The spiritual are only a part of of the chaplains' duties in this war. They are assisting with burials, operating aid stations, delivering messages under shell fire and offering assistance with supplies.

Father Duffy is with a group that has been in the thick of the fray since the bombing of Clark Field and Fort Stottsenburg, north of Manila, at the start of the war.

He believes firmly that the efforts of the chaplains have helped to steady Filipino troops, who are predominantly Catholic.

Duffy is a graduate of Notre Dame University and of the Seminary of Mount St. Mary's, at Norwood, Ohio.

He has been in the Army nine years and has been promoted since the war started. He says he has ridden on the reputation of the original Father Duffy, who was a personal friend. The last time he saw his namesake, he recalled today, was at a banquet at which the chaplain of the "Fighting Irish" Sixty-ninth Regiment offered the following toast to the guest of honor:

"May the good Lord take a liking to you, but not too soon!"

Father Duffy is not the only American chaplain in the First Philippine Corps, however, who has performed yeoman duty. With the cavalry regiment there is an amazing character in Father Methias Zerfus, a captain from Twin Oaks, Wis. He has not shaved since the war's start and has a heavy black beard. When wearing a pith helmet to keep off the hot sun, this little man is a double for Haile Selassie, Emperor of Abyssinia.

For going through the hectic campaign from Lingayen Gulf to Bataan Peninsula in December, he shared the Twenty-sixth Cavalry citation of the regiment for valor by the corps commander. An officer of the regiment recalled today how during the bombing and strafing of Binalonan, east of Lingayen Gulf, Father Zerfus stayed exposed in the open while all other able-bodied men sought badly needed cover. He considered it his duty to comfort a badly wounded soldier on an open truck.

The Distinguished Service Cross has been awarded to Capt. Ralph Brown, Methodist chaplain from Seattle, Wash., for his courage in treating and taking to the hospital men injured during the raid on Clark Field, in which the Japanese used a record number of bombers.

Army Sentry Slain at Pa. Reservoir Dam

By the Associated Press

Media, Pa., Feb. 6.—Private John W. Baynard, 26, of Eaton, Md., was found shot to death today near the Suburban Water Co.'s reservoir dam, where he was stationed as a guard.

Army authorities said the body was discovered when the guard changed, but declined details pending an investigation.

In Baltimore, Brig. Gen. Dwight M. Mohr, Maryland State Guard commander, said another of a series of incidents apparently aimed at sabotaging the Baltimore waterworks occurred early today when a State guardsman on sentry duty at Montebello Reservoir was fired upon from ambush.

The rifle bullet narrowly missed the guardsman, who returned the fire. The shooting, Gen. Mohr declared, was "a deliberate attempt to assassinate the guardsman."

The sentry saw the flash of the rifle shot and ducked for cover when the bullet whined by his head. He returned the fire from a prone position. The assailant, who had waited until the guardsman walked under a light, disappeared in the early morning fog. The shooting occurred about 2:30 a. m.

Shortly afterward, the guard reported an unidentified man telephoned the sentry house near the filtration plant and said:

"I hope that bullet came close enough to you."

A .30-caliber empty shell, dated 1934, was found near the spot where the guardsman saw the flame of the attacker's gun. State guardsmen use the same caliber cartridges, but theirs bear a more recent date.

Guardsman have "orders to shoot to kill," Mohr said, adding that "this is war time and we cannot take chances—we can only ask questions later."

REA Charged With Wastefulness

for defense purposes and the application for a certificate of necessity to construct the same by them be denied."

That the REA transmission line to the plant was given an A-1-A priority rating and Donald Nelson on January 21 wired the Arkansas Department of Public Utilities asking cooperation in extending the REA co-op the necessary permit for construction.

Before the Military Affairs Subcommittee on Thursday, J. A. Krug, chief of the power branch of the War Production Board, testified that the Arkansas State department complied with the request and the work is now under way.

Krug said the Nelson priority ratings contemplated use of the REA line and power "in accordance with the private facilities in the area so we would get the maximum power supply." He said the REA tieup would use only about 125 tons more of copper than the private pool plan, and would yield greater power capacity.

Corporation Spokesman Dissents

A spokesman for the power companies, Frank M. Wilkes, vice president of the Southwestern Gas & Electric Co., testified that the private companies had more than enough power to supply the aluminum plant and were willing to pay for the connecting lines, and added that the REA plan involved 300,000 pounds more copper and ultimately "is actually going to waste 1,600,000 pounds of copper."

Either plan would use private power only until the aluminum reduction plant could build its own generating facilities.

Lieut. Col. John Churchill Damon, of the Office of the Undersecretary of War, and John Lord O'Brien, general counsel of the War Production Board, earlier were called separately before the committee to discuss Winter's charges of "shocking wastage" of copper by the REA in Texas.

Winter, after alleging that millions of pounds of copper were "hoarded" by REA in Gilmer, Tex., said an REA cooperative was building a 65-mile line from the Possum Kingdom Dam to serve a diesel engine plant within 100 yards of a private source of adequate power. He charged work was going forward in defiance of an SPAB order that no projects less than 40 per cent complete on December 5 be continued.

Lieut. Col. Damon submitted in evidence a report by Maj. L. O. Vogelsang, of the Army Corps of Engineers that work on neither of two REA projects in the Brazos River area was 40 per cent complete on January 11, but construction was continuing.

Called a Duplication

Vogelsang reported "that the proposed project of the Brazos River Transmission Electric Cooperative and the Farmers Electric Generating Cooperative are duplications of existing facilities and at present are arranged to serve only customers which are being served from existing facilities."

O'Brien Thursday told the subcommittee that the War Production Board received a complaint from the War Department that the REA Brazos line was being built in violation of the SPAB order "and we have it right now under active investigation and will determine it as quickly as we can."

"While we have a good deal of information, we haven't enough information," O'Brien said. "We have no power, as you know, to enforce priorities, except by the power of injunction, at present."

Prodigy Extends His Studies

Professional Clown Offers OCD Talents at $4600 Minus

Frank Portillo, Washington's famed "children's clown," figures that what with the troubled state of the Nation, it's high time he bend his efforts to cheering grown-ups as well. They need it, he thinks.

The spark that touched off Portillo's burning fire is the news of the appointments of Mayris Chaney, night club dancer, and Melvyn Douglas, movie star, to official posts in the Office of Civilian Defense. This is not particularly funny, he thinks, and may need some explaining. The country, he feels, would do best just to laugh these things off. But this requires some doing.

Admitting that he starts with what is essentially a lugubrious situation, Portillo believes he can help America laugh it off. For $4600, Miss Chaney's salary at OCD, Portillo said yesterday he will undertake to head up an OCD section in charge of laughs.

Says he'll even settle for $4000 and put the $600 in defense bonds.

House Bars OCD Funds for Frills

Emergency Management came up within the next few months.

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, took the position the amendment was necessary to the country's morale as it showed Congress "is not a party" to OCD expenditures.

Taber declared last night he still hoped to amend the bill in such a way that salaries of "parasites and leeches" could be stopped. If nothing else, he said, he would "name them by name right in the bill."

He got in quite a period of naming names on the floor yesterday when he singled out for "elimination from the OCD payroll:" Bernard F. Dickmann, former Mayor of St. Louis, now an OCD inspector general; Paul Kellogg, who helped set up the community planning division and whose "pedigree" Taber asserted to be "two pages on the Dies Committee blacklist;" Joseph Lash, consultant in the youth division; Mary Dublin, survey director; Betty Lindley, of the volunteer participation section; Douglas and Mayris Chaney.

Representative Wigglesworth (Republican), of Massachusetts, asserting he did not want to "say a word" against needed protection services in the civilian defense program, declared many of the appointees in the volunteer participation division of OCD to have associated themselves with alleged Communist front organizations. The volunteer participation division is headed by Mrs. Roosevelt.

Wigglesworth said he sent the entire OCD personnel lists to the Dies Committee and that these names from the "Dies blacklist" came back: Justine Wise Polier, consultant on a $22.22 a day basis; Miss Dublin, whose salary is $5600; Norman Corwin, consultant at $10.55 a day; George Saunders, consultant without compensation; Joseph Lash, who also is listed without compensation, and Kellogg, social welfare expert, who recently returned to New York and severed his OCD connections.

Judge Polier, who is on leave from the Court of Domestic Relations in New York, having been assigned to OCD by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, its director, was listed by Representative Wigglesworth as being associated with seven "blacklisted groups in all."

Miss Dublin was singled out as signing a letter protesting alien registration, and belonging to Consumers Union and American Committee for Protection of Foreign-Born. Lash was declared to "have the longest record of all" and Kellogg the next to longest. Saunders was said to have been one of the defendants in a Communist Party nominating petition case in Pittsburgh.

Wigglesworth called attention to testimony given by Mayor LaGuardia at appropriations committee hearings when the OCD director declared the Office of Facts and Figures had been taken from the Office of Civilian Defense and given to Librarian Archibald MacLeish because "I would not employ some of these people."

"That presents the picture, to my mind," Wigglesworth said. "Mayor LaGuardia has told us he is going to quit. I don't think he is in favor of several of these volunteer participation appointments.

"The thing has got out of hand. Well, it's about time the House did something to get it back into control."

Representative Marcantonio (American Labor), of New York, cut in to say he believed an investigation would show "some of these appointments could not be placed at the door of Mayor LaGuardia."

Hope that the lump-sum appropriation to the Office of Emergency Management will not be continued was expressed by Wigglesworth, who declared each of the agencies operating under OEM should be given its sum specifically as this would make the salary question easier to spot and control.

Faddis declared that instead of going to dancers and theatrical talent for help OCD should ask help from retired service men.

"This country is full of retired Army and Navy men already drawing pay and who would be delighted to serve the Nation."

Representative Hood (Democrat), of Michigan, declared he was not in sympathy with the upsurge of criticism in the House; said he thought it bad for the country.

"What's wrong with a dancer?" he asked. "I was quite grateful for the entertainment I received when I was serving in the World War.

"I don't think this is any time to be criticizing a program of this Administration."

Ways in which the 100 million dollars will be spent—when the OCD gets it, and nobody spoke against the need for it yesterday—were specified in committee hearings as follows:

Gas masks and facilities for producing same, storage and maintenance, $29,893,894; surgical first-aid and hospital equipment, plus administration and transportation to field, $4,890,290; armbands, $181,034.52; gasproof capes and overhead, $1,538,793.41; steel helmets, plus administration, $1,737,931.66; gasproof clothing, $3,427,021.91; fire-fighting equipment and maintenance, $57,217,271; fire-fighting protective clothing, $1,113,763.50.

Mayor LaGuardia has said all equipment will be purchased through the War Department and allocated to cities and centers on basis of War Department recommendations. It is needed in the training programs now under way, as well as for actual defense in case of air raids.

her appointment, the blonde Miss Chaney said:

"Anyone is entitled to his opinion. But I think my work is important. I did not ask for it. I was asked to take it."

Miss Chaney, a frequent guest at the White House, said it was incorrect to refer to her as a "protege" of Mrs. Roosevelt.

"We are merely friends," she said. "It is just as incorrect to use the word protege in referring to Joseph Lash."

Lash, American youth leader who serves without pay on OCD's youth advisory committee, has been criticized by the Dies committee for alleged past affiliations with the Communist party.

Purpose of the various conferences, the press relations man of Miss Chaney's office said, is to supply informative opinion for Miss Chaney's general task of "finding out the best way of taking care of kiddies during wartime."

"This is in the department of physical fitness," said the press relations man, "because mental breakdowns to which children are subject in air raids break down the physical condition of the children. If the physical condition of the children breaks down, the same thing happens to the parents also."

Miss Chaney has been on the job since November 15, he said, and since that time has held conferences "in New York, Washington and elsewhere," including "conferences with people from London."

As to exactly what has come out of these conferences, that won't be known until Miss Chaney makes her report, the press relations man said.

"When her report is ready," he said, "she will call in all the consultants with whom she has conferred. They will all thresh the thing out and decide on the best program, which will then be put into operation."

This "threshing out," the press relations man meticulously explained, is "because some people have one idea and some another.

"You might have one idea on the subject and I might have another," he said to the reporter as an example.

The man was asked if Miss Chaney would care to make a statement for herself.

"Certainly," he said, "I'll give you a statement for her. You can quote this statement as coming from her."

Here is Miss Chaney's statement, via the press relations division of her office:

"I offered my services for this kind of work because I believe everyone of us should pitch in with all our heart to do everything we can to achieve the ultimate goal—victory—as quickly as possible.

"If I can be of service in a field where my experience as (here the press relations man paused, fumbled about for a word, then, finding none, went on) can be best utilized then I want to do whatever I can to help America win the war."

Previously the press relations man had read off a statement from John B. Kelly, assistant United States Director of Civilian Defense in charge of physical fitness, with headquarters in Philadelphia. Kelly's statement:

"Miss Mayris Chaney has been assigned as director of children's activities for the division of physican fitness of the Office of Civilian Defense.

"She has been working there for approximately two months.

"The direction of her efforts has been toward developing a program of physical instruction that will improve the condition of the preschool group, particularly in connection with emergency strains to which war may subject them.

"Miss Chaney has been studying the London method, conducting surveys and seeing informed authorities in her efforts to develop a practical plan of putting into operation a program for these groups."

Mr. Kelly had left this statement for the press, the press relations man said.

Binoculars Loaned to Navy In 1917 Once Again Offered

In a burst of patriotic enthusiasm back in 1917, Max Darius, who as a German immigrant had settled in Wallace, Idaho, sent the American Navy a fine pair of French binoculars to help them spot the Kaiser's submarines.

The glasses traveled on historic naval vessels, were returned with warm thanks to Darius and now they are back in Washington for the Navy to use.

Twenty-three years ago Thursday—the day the glasses reached the office of Representative Compton I. White (Democrat), of Idaho, with Darius' request to send them on to the Navy—Capt. J. J. Raby, commanding the U. S. S. Georgia at Brest, France, wrote to the German immigrant:

"I have in my possession a pair of French binoculars donated to the United States Navy by you for the period of the war. These excellent glasses have been used by the captains of the battleships Missouri and Georgia and have done fine service . . . I hope the glasses will be returned to you in good shape and that you will always look upon them as having 'done their bit' for they were used by the captain of the Navy that escorted the first mercantile convoy across the Atlantic under American escort, and they brought home the first load of soldiers to be transported on a battleship."

Representative White will send the glasses to Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations, with a letter saying:

"In offering the binoculars for 'reenlistment; it occurs to me that if the U. S. S. Georgia is still in the service of the United States Navy, it would be a fitting gesture to offer them for the use of the captain of that ship. However, Mr. Darius has no preference in this matter. He simply offers the binoculars for such purposes as the Navy Department may see fit and requests that when the national emergency has passed they be returned to him."

report was a lie and Hill told the grand jury he did not have eight mailbags full of the evidence placed in a storeroom used by Fish. Hill also denied, under oath, that he knew Viereck.

For these statements Hill was convicted on January 15 of two charges of perjury. He neither took the stand himself nor offered any other witnesses in his defense.

Pale and trembling, with sagging shoulders, the mild-mannered Hill was haled before Justice F. Dickinson Letts for sentence yesterday. His lawyer, former Representative John O'Connor, told the court Hill was a disabled World War veteran whose patriotism has never been impugned.

At the worst, said O'Connor, Hill had only "fibbed" to the grand jury and his testimony would have made no difference in the inquiry. Moreover, O'Connor said, Hill was unlikely to repeat his offense. In conclusion, he asked the court to be merciful because of Hill's war record and his having held "a respected position with a great American member of Congress."

"This is shocking," Prosecutor Maloney said. "This man is still shielding Viereck, a sworn enemy of this country."

Prosecutor Hickey added that "the only proper way for him to seek leniency is to make an offer to make a full and frank disclosure."

Justice Letts started to ask Hill whether he wished to say anything in his own behalf, but O'Connor spoke first.

Turning to Hill, who was about 6 inches from him, O'Connor shouted:

"Have you anything to tell the court?"

Addressing O'Connor and his other lawyer, William F. Cusick, Hill answered in broken tones:

"Didn't you fellows make a proposition to these other fellows?"

O'Connor did not reply, but thundered another question:

"Do you want to retract anything that you said before the grand jury?"

Hill shook his head.

Justice Letts then said the case was a serious one, and must have been so regarded by Congress, which fixed the severe penalty of 2 to 20 years in prison. Although Hill pleaded not guilty, Justice Letts said, the court was bound by the verdict of the jurors who convicted Hill.

Justice Letts said while he was considering the penalty he had received the suggestions of a number of persons, including two members of Congress. He had also received letters, some of which came from Cold Springs, N. Y., Hill's boyhood home.

Although the offense was grave, the court said, he was not of the opinion that Hill ought to be given "the limit" sentence. Accordingly, he concluded, his judgment was that Hill should serve two to six years on each of the two counts of perjury, but the sentences would be served concurrently.

Half an hour later, Maloney and Hickey had Hill brought from the District Court cell block to one of the offices of the district attorney's staff.

Cusick went to Justice Letts and asked him to put a stop to this interview. Justice Letts upheld Cusick and ordered Hill taken back to the cell block.

Last night Hill was back in the District Jail, while his attorneys said they would draft an appeal.

Tells of Trying To Ram U-Boat

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Capt. Einar Gleditsch, a weather-beaten Norwegian whaling skipper, disclosed tonight that on the morning of January 19, off Cape Hatteras, his ship chased and attempted to ram an enemy submarine as it appeared ready to attack an unidentified vessel.

"But," said the tanned veteran of 18 years of whaling, "I now think the whole thing was a big bluff so far as the submarine was concerned. She must have been out of ammunition and torpedoes or otherwise she would have fired at us.

"About 1 hour and 30 minutes after we first heard the alarm and just as we decided to give up the chase and return to our original course an airplane flew over us, coming from the direction of the shore, and it circled the spot where we last saw the partly submerged submarine.

"I don't know whether the plane finished the job or not."

D. C. Hospital Expansion To Be Weighed

Ways and means of expanding private hospital facilities here will be discussed Monday at 2:30 p. m. at a meeting of Federal and municipal authorities in the District Building, it was announced last night.

The Commissioners have asked for Federal financial aid in providing hospital space in keeping with Washington's population, growing rapidly because of the war effort.

Open expressions of concern over cramped quarters in local hospitals have been made recently by the city heads. The Health Department already has asked District mothers to have their babies at home wherever possible.

The Commissioners said they were worried, frankly, over the possible spread of an epidemic here because of inadequate bed space in hospitals.

They said Federal aid will be sought in obtaining temporary structures to house extra patients. Any permanent additions to hospitals, the Commissioners conceded, is out of the question because of material priorities.

Meeting Monday with the Commissioners will be representatives of the District Medical Society, Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer; Charles P. Taft, assistant director of defense health and welfare of the Federal Security Board, and representatives of several local hospitals.

Defense Angle For Dance Tonight

Senator Tom Stewart, acting president, yesterday announced that the annual dance of the Tennessee Society in Washington tonight at the Carlton Hotel will have a strong "defense angle."

Soldiers, sailors and marines from the State and stationed in this area will be admitted free by wearing their uniforms, he said. Dancing will begin at 10 p. m., but will be preceded at 8:30 o'clock by a business meeting at which new officers will be elected. Wartime newcomers from Tennessee are specially invited, Senator Stewart said.

10 Congressmen To Tour Army Posts, Plane Plant

By the Associated Press

The War Department said yesterday ten Congressmen, among them Speaker Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, and Senator Radcliffe (Democrat), of Maryland, would inspect Army posts and an aircraft plant in Maryland tomorrow.

The group is to tour the Aberdeen Proving Ground for about an hour, before proceeding to nearby Edgewood Arsenal and the plant of the Glenn L. Martin Aircraft Co.

Accompanying the legislators, the War Department said, would be Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore, Glenn L. Martin, Brig. Gen. Robert L. Avery, commander of Edgewood, and Brig. Gen. Rolland W. Case, Aberdeen commander.

Others expected to make the tour include Representatives Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri; Cox (Democrat), of Georgia; Delaney (Democrat), of New York; Sasscer (Democrat), of Maryland; Meyer (Democrat), of Maryland; D'Alesandro (Democrat), of Maryland; Harter (Democrat), of Ohio, and Cole (Democrat), of Maryland.

Georgia, Iowa U. Picked as Naval Flying Schools

Selection of the Universities of Georgia and Iowa as two of the four institutions where 30,000 student naval pilots annually will undergo three months of "toughening" was announced yesterday by Navy Secretary Knox.

The University of Georgia at Athens has been chosen as the intensive preflight training center for the Southern area and State University of Iowa at Iowa City for the Middle West. A survey is now under way to select centers for the Far West and East.

Georgia and Iowa have agreed to provide buildings and grounds for naval athletic physical education activities, dormitories to house approximately 2000, classroom space for all necessary academic phases of the training program, dining room facilities for 2000 and the necessary number of hospital beds for naval use.

Martinsburg Man Heads National Peach Council

Charlotte, N. C., Feb. 6 (AP).—Carroll R. Miller, of Martinsburg, W. Va., was elected president of a National Peach Council today as growers of eight States worked out details of the organization, described as a "national clearing house for the peach industry."

A board of directors was named to represent North Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

It is expected to get the new council's program under way by March 15.

The principal objectives will be increased consumption of peaches and the improvement of marketing methods.

Adopting the name of "Bomber for Uncle Sam" for its campaign, the Junior Board of Commerce yesterday gave a full-speed ahead sign to its defense bonds and savings stamps sales campaign.

Samuel L. Samuel, chairman of the board's bonds-stamps committee, announced that $1500 in bonds and stamps were sold Thursday at the booth at Thirteenth and E Streets Northwest.

This booth is manned by members of the junior board and will continue to stay open, Samuel said.

Chillum Defense Area Takes the Initiative

EXAMPLE SET FOR DEFENSE WORKERS—Residents of one sector of the Chillum Heights defense area have purchased four tons of sand for home air-raid protection work. Rather than wait for allocation of funds from authorities, residents contributed $1.25 per family for the sand, picks, shovels and buckets. Sector wardens hope defense workers in other areas will follow their example. School children yesterday began apportioning the sand, piled in the garage of George Schulz, 227 Ingraham Street Northwest. Mrs. William Williams, a neighbor, directs George Schulz, Melvin Wright and Russel Miller in preparing the sand for distribution

48-Hour U. S. Workers' Week Urged

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

The House Appropriations Committee yesterday recommended to administrative officials a 48-hour Federal work week as a means of "mitigation of the desperate housing and office space problems" induced by the war program in Washington.

Its recommendation was made in the report on the $160,590,611 first 1942 deficiency appropriation bill on which the House is expected to vote Monday.

Meantime Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, sponsor of a bill authorizing appropriation of 50 million dollars for housing and public works to be used by Federal war workers in the District area, forecast House consideration of the measure Tuesday.

The proposal for a 48-hour week is not expected to take the form of legislation. Authority to expand Federal hours already has been vested in the Bureau of the Budget by President Roosevelt.

The recommendation carries weight, however, as a Congressional sentiment, and is couched in phrases leaving no doubt that it has been given serious consideration.

"Such action would obviate the necessity in some instances of requesting additional personnel to carry added work loads and in other instances might permit the release of personnel for transfer to agencies badly needing them," it was said in the report.

"A redistribution of personnel in this fashion, no matter how slight, would in that manner avoid the necessity of bringing other persons to Washington and further congesting the District. It would be no great injustice to request extra effort from Federal workers."

Citing the various benefits of retirement provisions and annual leave granted Government employes, the report stated:

"The committee believes that Federal workers in the District will patriotically and willingly work the extra time if that will contribute to relieve a situation that is rapidly getting worse."

Already the War and Navy Departments and other defense agencies are working on a 48-hour week. The Federal Bureau of Investigation has stepped its hours up to 45 a week.

The recommendation of the committees would blanket all departments, whether or not they are directly connected with the war effort, bringing them into a full six days of work each week.

Brazilians Seize Radio Transmitter In Nazi Embassy

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 6 (AP).—Brazilian authorities seized a short wave radio transmitter in the German Embassy Building today in what was said to b ethe first step of a drive to smash a web of wildcat radios throughout Brazil communicating with Axis ships and directly with Berlin.

Agents of the ministry of justice and capital police carted off the transmitter and dismantled two large antennas. The embassy iself has been closed since Brazil broke relations with Germany, Italy and Japan.

Wife Gets Writ to Obtain Custody of Children

A writ of hobeas corpus was issued in District Court yesterday against Capt. Daniel F. Boone, U. S. Army, of 7930 Sixteenth Street Northwest, by his wife seeking custody of their two children.

Mrs. Martha Lightner Boone charges that Capt. Boone has the children, Daniel, 6, and Martha, 3, although a North Carolina court awarded her their custody during hearings on a divorce petition.

Kennedy, 2405 First Street Northwest.

Wholesale Drug Association Is Indicted For Conspiracy to Establish Fixed Prices

The Justice Department announced yesterday that a Federal grand jury at Newark, N. J., had indicted the National Wholesale Druggists Association, 23 of its members and 29 officers and agents on a charge of conspiring to violate the Sherman Antitrust Act.

The indictment charged fixing of the margin of profits on drugs for wholesalers.

The department said that it was the first indictment alleging use of fair trade contracts in a manner not contemplated by the Miller-Tydings amendment to the Sherman Act or by State fair trade laws.

It was alleged that profit margins were maintained by fixing wholesale prices of drug products and by forcing manufacturers to fix the prices to be paid by wholesalers at levels demanded by them.

The National Wholesale Druggists Association, the department said, consitutes the largest group of wholesalers in the Nation, and does approximately 80 per cent of the Nation's wholesale drug business.

The defendants named, in addition to the association, included:

McKesson & Robbins, Inc., New York; Coffin-Redington Co., San Francisco; Davis Brothers, Inc., Denver; Des Moines Drug Co., Des Moines; J. W. Edgerly & Co., Ottumwa, Iowa; Ellis Bagwell Drug Co., Memphis; Gilman Brothers, Inc., Boston; Hazeltine & Perkins Drug Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., Justice Drug Co., Greensboro, N. C.; D. Kalman & Co., Inc.; Jersey City, N. J.; the Kauffman Lattimer Co., Columbus, Ohio; Kiefer-Stewart Co., Indianapolis; Charles Leich & Co., Evansville, Ind.; I. L. Lyons & Co., Ltd., New Orleans; Meyer Brothers, Drug Co., St. Louis; Mooney-Mueller-Ward Co., Indianapolis; Schieffelin & Co., New York; Smith, Kline & French, Inc., Philadelphia; Southwestern Drug Corporation, Dallas; Standard Drug Co., Meridian, Miss.; Strother Drug Co., Lynchburg, Va.; Towns & James, Inc., Brooklyn, and Yahr-Lang, Inc., Milwaukee.

Senate Group Approves W.A.A.C.

The Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday unanimously approved a bill recommended by the War Department to create a Women's Army Auxiliary Corps for service with the United States Army.

Identical with one approved by the House Military Affairs Committee and expected to pass the House soon, the measure would establish a uniformed volunteer feminine corps which would not be a part of the Army, but would be the only women's organization authorized to serve with it, exclusive of the Army Nurse Corps.

Posters Stress Danger of Careless Talk

Soldiers serving overseas and in hot spots in this country are reminded of the damage a few careless words may do by a series of posters prepared and issued by General headquarters of the Army.

These posters are the work of soldier artists and tell succinctly what may result from careless soldier talk. The burden of the idea is carried by the picture, some comic, some tragic, all based on themes taken from the soldier's own daily existence.

A half-dozen of the posters were prepared by Private William Crooks, formerly of the Thirty-first (Dixie) Division, now with GHQ at the War College here. Others have been selected for their excellence from the work of soldier artists with the field forces of the Army.

Among those shown here, the three depicting the sinking ship, the talkative soldier at the bar and the alluring and "not so dumb" lady are by an anonymous artist with the Sixth Army Corps. The other three by Crooks.

M. P. School Opens Here

With 225 officer students on hand, what was said to be the first school for military police in the Army's history opened Monday at Arlington Cantonment.

For the next two months these officers, from M. P. battalions and companies in eight of the Nation's nine corps areas, will cover in conference, by demonstrations and in practical field work, the details of one of the most touchy jobs in the Army. They will have 19 instructors, each an expert in his field.

Before they go back to their outfits, to make room for another 225 students, they will have covered in detail what they already know in fact: that the M. P.'s job in a modern army goes infinitely far beyond locking up recalcitrant soldiers.

Cripps Urges Close Cooperation With Russia to Make Lasting Peace

(Editor's note: Sir Stafford Cripps, former British Ambassador to Soviet Russia, suggests in this second of two articles written exclusively for Wide World News Service the need for cooperation and mutual understanding between Russia, Great Britain and the United States, both in war and in the peace to come.)

By Sir Stafford Cripps

Copyright, 1942, by Wide World

London, Feb. 6.—In my previous article I have dealt with the material side of the Russian war effort, and I now come to deal with the political aspect of our association with the Soviet Union in the common struggle.

There are difficulties—yes, great difficulties—the ideological differences of two decades, suspicions and frictions of two peoples of widely different character and with methods of government and economic organization that are little understood by one another.

At the moment there exists what may seem to many to be an almost forced association, but fundamentally it is much more than that.

We all three—Great Britain, the United States and Soviet Russia—are fighting a common enemy because we each individually love and cherish our own freedom, our own right to determine how we shall live. We want our own ways because we believe they suit us better than other ways, but good or bad, we fight for them because they are our own and we will not allow any marauding gang of international gangsters to impose their rule upon us for their own benefit.

That state of mind applies equally to each one of the three countries. We have all signed the Atlantic Charter and although the Russians may think the world would be happier if their form of economic organization ruled throughout, just as many Americans may think Russia would be happier with another form of government and economy, yet the Soviet government has declared again and again with all sincerity that it does not want to interfere with the internal conditions of other countries.

Example, the Best Salesman

The best way of spreading an ideology or political system in the world is to show by example its success. Perhaps no country yet has succeeded in doing that for a sufficiently long period to convince others that they must change their own economic system.

Beyond demonstrating by the force of successful example the need for world change in the economic system, the Soviet Union has no intention to interfere either in Europe or elsewhere with forms of government of its neighbors.

The United States and Great Britain adopt the same attitude. Here there is common ground for future action in association.

We must put aside once and for all the "red bogey." Surely it has become perfectly plain why Hitler and his associates so sedulously fostered "fear of bolshevism." It was his policy to weaken the combination against him. It was his greatest "fifth column" effort to sow dissension among his political enemies. He was the fount and origin of all the propaganda for the last ten years, and it very nearly succeeded.

But now that we have seen through it, now that we realize the common interests for future world safety which we have with the Soviet Union, now that Hitler is unmasked and the true alignment of civilization has been hammered out in the furnace of war, now at last we can rid ourselves of unreasoning fears and suspicions and get down to the solid basis of constructive work for the future.

The Russians ask no country outside the Soviet Union to become Communist and we ask none within the Soviet Union to desert communism for any other political creed. We are not going to work politically or economically against one another as suspicious rivals attempting to weaken or sabotage political enemies.

Our Natures Haven't Changed

We are fighting together for a common aim and that common struggle should form the basis of our new association.

We have not changed our natures; Russians have not changed theirs. We accept them as they accept us for what we are with all our failings and shortcomings on both sides.

That should be the basis of our relations with one another and with the Soviet Union.

We shall either have to reconstruct the world in partnership after the victorious end of the war, or else we shall have to go each on our separate ways, and with no common agreement the peace will be a more tragic chaos than the war.

Partners can influence, aid and assist one another where jealous and suspicious associates merely destroy one another's schemes for fear that each may steal power from the other.

It is either cooperation or chaos, and we must choose between the two.

Let us make it clear beyond all doubt that it is to be cooperation and we shall deserve well of the future.

But cooperation does not, of course, mean giving way in everything to a partner. It means together working out schemes and plans with all the give and take that is necessary to arrive at a common decision.

Confidence Is Essential

If once we can create an atmosphere of confidence among three countries, which does not yet wholly exist, we can, I feel certain, plan together and reach an agreement in our plans.

Upon one major central point of European reconstruction there will be agreement. The Soviet government has said "never again" — never again must Europe and the world be subjected to such an agony of war. It must be put out of the power of Germany to repeat the aggression of 1939-41.

How that is to be achieved is a matter for discussion and settlement among the victorious powers.

Then again, we are all agreed some more stable and lasting system of peace organization must be inaugurated than that which arose after the last war. This again is a matter for discussion and decision.

There may and will be many opinions. But unless the principal powers can agree upon some scheme beforehand, little or nothing of value will come out of the peace conference.

The need for these considerations only stresses the vital importance of a clear, clean understanding among the United States, the U. S. S. R. and Great Britain, a wiping out of the past and a new, more hopeful beginning.

I am confident—and I know this from highest authority—the Soviet Union is anxious and most willing to work in association with Great Britain and America after the war, and to prepare now so as to make that work as effective and valuable as possible.

Deep Suspicions Persist

They have deep suspicions; so have many people in Great Britain and the United States, fostered by mistaken international policies and attitudes on both sides in the past, but based on fears of rival economic policies.

We must somehow convince each other that we will not interfere with one another's affairs in the future, directly or indirectly.

Let us leave rival theories to prove their own success or failure before the judgment seat of world opinion and let the best man win.

On this basis we can have true cooperation, but it's a question not only of governments and statesmen but of people and public opinion.

Perhaps the war has taught us to be less opinionated about the virtues of our own political system and more tolerant of what we consider defects of others. If this is so, we may hope to concentrate upon the possibilities of constructive common action in the future rather than upon fears and suspicions of possible rivalries.

If we do fear that rivalry, then the safest course we can accept is to make the rival our partner so that together we may influence and restrain one another from extreme courses in either direction.

To win the war is vital and for that purpose we must give every material aid to Russia. To win the peace is no less vital and to that end we must achieve full political cooperation among the three great allies of the war—the United States, Soviet Russia and Great Britain.

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
Mrs. Adams' message of universal appeal was inspired by the biblical story of Jacob, who fleeing from Esau's wrath, slept on a lonely hillside, dreamed of a heavenly ladder with angels ascending and descending on it, and awoke with renewed faith. It is a triumphant revelation that even in depths of despair, we may be lifted closer to God.

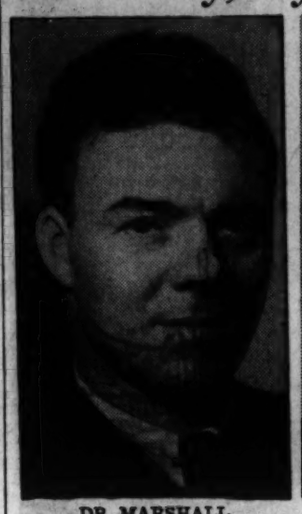
Scouts of Troop 54 will be special guests at the 11 o'clock services at Chevy Chase Baptist Church, where the Rev. Edward C. Clark will preach on "If Lincoln Were Here Today." W. S. Anderson is scoutmaster.

Boys of the Rising Sun Division will attend services at 8 p. m. at Garden Memorial Presbyterian Church, 1718 Minnesota Avenue Southeast. Scouts of the Arlington Divison will assemble at 4:30 p. m. at Mount Vernon Baptist Church, 935 Twenty-third Street.

Catholic Scouts and cubs will meet at 4 p. m. at St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Second and C Streets Southeast.

Eldbrooke Methodist Church's Boy Scout Troop will sponsor a banquet Wednesday at 6:30 p. m

Deeper Racial Understanding Vital Today, Says Dr. Schilling



DR. MARSHALL

DR. TAYLOR

"And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and bounds of their habitation." (Acts; 17:26.)

A call for deeper racial understanding was sounded yesterday by the Rev. Dr. S. Paul Schilling, pastor of Brookland Methodist Church, in a radio address heralding tomorrow's observance of Race Relations Sunday. He spoke over WRC.

Meanwhile, another race relations broadcast will be heard today at 9:45 a. m. over WJSV, the speakers being Mrs. Frank E. Edgington; the Rev. Dr. Worth M. Tippy, acting executive secretary of the Washington Federation of Churches, and the Rev. Dr. Robin S. Gould, pastor of Francis Asbury Methodist Church.

Race Relations Sunday, sponsored by the federation's race relations committee, will be marked by several pulpit exchanges between white and Negro clergymen, and a mass meeting at 4 p. m. at New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, whose pastor, the Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, will deliver the main address.

Also participating will be the Rev. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, president of the Federation of Churches; the Rev. Dr. Robert M. Williams, pastor of Asbury Methodist Church; the Rev. Glenn B. Faucett, pastor of East Washington Heights Baptist Church; the Rev. R. W. Brooks, pastor of Lincoln Congregational Church, and the Rev. Dr. Halley B. Taylor, pastor of Fifteenth Street Presbyterian Church, and chairman of the federation's committee on race relations. The Howard University choir will sing under Miss Louise Burge's direction.

For 20 years the Federal Council of Churches has urged that the Sunday nearest Lincoln's Birthday be set aside for emphasizing the need of improved race relations.

Services Listed

Individual church observances of Race Relations Sunday will include the following:

Dr. Robert W. Brooks, pastor of Lincoln Congregational Temple, will address young people of Eldbrooke Methodist Church at 7 p. m. Luther Leagues of St. Stephen's Lutheran Church, 1611 Brentwood Road Northeast, will have a special program at 7 p. m.

Dr. Robin Gould will lead his Francis Asbury Methodist congregation in observing the occasion, preaching at 11 a. m. on "Mine or Ours," and at 8 p. m. on "Decency." The Rev. Earl Harrison, pastor of Shiloh Baptist Church, will speak at Temple Baptist Church at 8 p. m. The Rev. George Condit, rector of Holy Communion Episcopal Church, and the Rev. A. A. Birch, of St. George's Episcopal Church here, will exchange pulpits.

Francis W. McPeek, director of the Federation of Churches' social welfare department, will address the Men's Brotherhood of Lincoln Congregational Church at 10:15 a. m. on "The World That Is to Be."

Churches Plan Programs for Lenten Period

Lent—most sacred period in the Christian calendar—will begin throughout the world with Ash Wednesday services on February 18. The 40-day period (Sundays not calculated) will be climaxed with the celebration of Easter, April 5.

Locally, daily Lenten services have been arranged for Epiphany Episcopal and several other churches. Federation of churches and other services will be announced later.

Lenten noonday speakers at Epiphany, to be heard from 12 to 12:30 p. m., Mondays through Fridays, follow:

February 19 and 20, the Rev. Dr. Hulbert A. Woolfall, rector of St. Peter's Church, St. Louis, Mo.; February 23 to 27, the Right Rev. Robert L. Strider, Bishop of West Virginia; March 2 to 6, the Very Rev. Chester B. Emerson, dean of Trinity Cathedral, Cleveland, Ohio; March 9 to 13, the Rev. Samuel M. Shoemaker, rector of Calvary Church, New York City.

March 16 to 20, the Rev. Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, rector of St. Nicholas' Collegiate Church, New York City; March 23 to 27, the Right Rev. Granville Gaylord Bennett, Suffragan Bishop of Rhode Island; March 30 to April 2, the Right Rev. James R. Freeman, Bishop of Washington; April 3, Good Friday, three hours' devotion, the Rev. Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, Epiphany rector. On Palm Sunday, March 29, at 11 a. m., the Bishop of Washington will confirm a class at Epiphany.

Covenant-First Church to Greet New Members

A membership enrollment service will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Covenant-First Presbyterian Church as "The Call to Christian Advance" phase of the "Church Appreciation Program."

The Rev. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, pastor, will celebrate Holy Communion, preach on "How Jesus Calls the Roll of His Flock," and greet a group of new members. More than 1000 members of the church have recently been visited by a group of 120 workers.

Discussing the project, Dr. McCartney said in part:

"In these world-crisis days, the Covenant-First Church Appreciation Program has been planned as a special effort to make religion more vital and effective and as a courageous enlistment in the holy cause of strengthing all services, activities and interests of the church."

Dr. Brooks to Talk At St. Andrew's

The Rev. Dr. Seth R. Brooks, pastor of Universalist National Memorial Church, will address the vesper service tomorrow at 8 p. m. at St. Andrew's Lutheran Church, Capitol Heights. His theme will be "A Touch of Madness." A fellowship period will follow. The Rev. Albert F. Harkins will preach at 11 a. m. on "Secularized Sunday or Sanctified Week?"

California Bishop Preaches Tomorrow

The Right Rev. Karl M. Block, D. D., Bishop of California, will preach tomorrow at 11 a.m at St. Mark's Episcopal Church, Third and A Streets Southeast, where he once was a choir boy.

He was born here in 1886, and was graduated from Eastern High School, George Washington University and Virginia Theological Seminary, Alexandria. He has a sister and brother here. One is Leonard Block, a lawyer, and the other, Miss Paulina Block, who attends All Souls' Church.

The Rev. Robert Plumb is St. Mark's rector.

Dirksen Assumes Church Organist Post

R. Wayne Dirksen, of Freeport, Ill., on February 1 took over his new duties as assistant organist at the Washington Cathedral.

Dirksen first studied organ with Hugh Price in La Salle, Ill., and until recently was a pupil of Virgil Fox at Peabody Conservatory. As a boy he sang in the choir of Grace Church, Freeport, later playing the organ at St. Mary's Church, where his mother was choirmaster.

While serving the Cathedral as assistant to Paul Callaway, he will continue his study toward a science degree at Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, Md.

Dr. Pierce Selects Tomorrow's Subject

Inaugurating a course of sermons on "The Search for Certainty—a Faith for These Days," Dr. Ulysses G. B. Pierce, minister of All Souls' Unitarian Church, will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "Can We Believe in God?" The subsequent subjects will be "Can We Trust Man?" and "What Heaven Can We Hope For?" Representatives of the young people's groups in the church, Martin Stark, Everett Utecht, Robert Farwell and Anne Ginsburgh, will participate in the service in observance of a postponed youth Sunday.

Christian Living School Announces Program

Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church's School of Christian Living for Young Adults will continue tomorrow, beginning at 5:30 p. m., with a worship session.

From 6 to 7 p. m. there will be discussions on everyday problems on a Bible background, personality development, effective speaking and human relationships, postwar peace, courtship and marriage, newcomers' problems and other subjects. There will be fellowship and a supper from 7 to 8 p. m., and worship services from 8 to 9 p. m.

Sen. Gillette on Program

Senator Guy Gillette, of Iowa, will address the annual banquet of the Clyde Kelly Men's Bible Class on Thursday at 6:30 p. m. at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church. Musical minstrels will be another feature.

New York Cleric Talks Tomorrow At St. John's

The Rev. Donald B. Aldrich, D. D., rector of the Church of the Ascension, New York, will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. at St. John's Church, Lafayette Square.

His church is particularly noted for its wide social outlook and the fact that it is open to all comers for 24 hours a day. Before going to Ascension, he was a member of the staff to the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, Boston, and chaplain of the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

A native of Massachusetts, he is a graduate of Dartmouth and the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, with a D. D. degree from Dartmouth and an L. H. D. from Kenyon College.

Rep. Patrick to Address River Road Men's Unit

Representative Luther Patrick, of Alabama, will address annual Men's Brotherhood services tomorrow at 11 a. m. at River Road United Presbyterian Church. The men's chorus will sing, and men will conduct the service. The legislator's topic will be "The Church, Its Men and War." Duncan MacPherson, Brotherhood president, will preside. The Rev. Virgil M. Cosby is pastor.

Mr. Hill's Sentence

George Hill's sentence should have a salutary effect upon other witnesses who go before the grand jury investigating Nazi activities in this country. Mr. Hill, second secretary to Representative Hamilton Fish, must spend from two to six years in prison for giving false testimony. He had the effrontery to trifle with our machinery of justice when the case of a Nazi agent was under investigation. That is indeed a grave offense. In the circumstances his sentence is certainly not too severe. But it is stiff enough to make every future witness think twice before lying to the grand jury.

The most unfortunate aspect of the case is the fact that Mr. Hill has not yet given the grand jury the information it seeks. William Power Maloney, special assistant to the Attorney General, told the court that "Mr. Hill has made no effort to show his good faith or any repentance by offering to tell the truth and to come clean." In other words, he is still "shielding George Sylvester Viereck, a sworn enemy of this country." The public still has a vital interest in the story which Mr. Hill insists on keeping to himself. Probably that is why the grand jury is planning to call Mr. Fish for further testimony.

Mr. Fish, it will be recalled, told the House of Representatives the same story that Mr. Hill told the grand jury. Even after Mr. Hill's conviction his employer offered the public and the House no explanation of the discrepancy between his story and the findings of the grand jury. Now that Mr. Hill is apparently going to prison without telling what he knows, the obligation upon Mr. Fish has been intensified. For a Nazi agent is still to be tried and Government counsel have clearly implied that information in the possession of Mr. Fish's secretary has a bearing upon Viereck's propaganda activities.

Burma Road

Congress acted with exemplary speed in approving the 500 million dollar loan to China. Its action recognizes the intimate link which has now been forged between the American destiny and places which till a short while ago were merely geographical expressions. Among the places that count in capital letters nowadays are those that dot the Burma Road. They are on our own frontier, just as if they were located in this country. The loss of the Burma Road would rob this country of its main avenue of supply to the fighting Chinese. More, it would undo the obvious strategical scheme with which the United Nations must eventfully bring down the Japanese juggernaut.

Britain's great admiral, Lord Nelson, used to say that if you struck at the trunk the branches would take care of themselves. The Japanese have branches all over Oceania, but the trunk is located in Japan proper. What is the best plan for attacking the Japanese when the United Nations succeed in wresting the initiative from the Japanese? Naval-minded strategists believe that the task confronting the United Nations is to roll up the Japanese conquests from their branches in the South Pacific. Other—in our opinion, more realistic—strategists feel that (in the absence of Russian cooperation) Japan must be reduced from China. In that event the outlying conquests of the Japanese in Oceania would eventually become untenable. Whatever plan is acted upon when the United Nations assume the initiative, China is the key to the successful crushing of the Japanese menace.

But the sorry fact of the matter is that the Japanese still have the initiative. The Burma Road is already under fire from the Japanese bombers. And this is only part of the great effort which Japan is exerting to put that vital communication out of business. From three points the road is endangered. One is the Thailand border of Burma, which the Japanese have crossed beyond the Salween River. The second is at Rangoon, maritime gateway to the road, which is being pounded from the air. Singapore, now a week under Japanese siege, is the third point. That mighty bastion in Japanese hands would, in the words of Colonel Amery, Secretary of State for India, make "the territories lying around the Indian Ocean helpless and isolated," including Rangoon. May reinforcements reach these points before the flag of the Rising Sun shuts out China from the United Nations! Congress did its part to that end by authorizing the loan to China.

Pensions Boomerang

Congress should hasten to repeal the measure by which it so generously provided pensions for its own members. As a means of sustaining public faith in the democratic system, it should quickly erase the impression that its members are reaching out for benefits while all the national strength is needed to win the war. No more inappropriate moment in the history of the United States could have been chosen for a pensions grab. If Congress thinks seriously about what it has done, it will surely see the impracticability of asking citizens to sacrifice for the national security while Congressmen are voting special benefits for themselves.

Senator Byrd points out how embarrassing it will be for Congress to turn down any pension scheme, however indefensible, so long as pensions for Congressmen are an approved policy. Even in ordinary times Senators and Representatives would expose themselves to widespread attacks by taking advantage of their power to increase their own emoluments. There is a salutary constitutional provision which forbids a legislator to resign and step into a Federal job created or given a boost in pay during his service in Congress. The ethics of this rule apply with equal force against Congressmen voting benefits to themselves. If a pension system for legislators should be found desirable after careful study, the least Congress could do would be to apply it to members thereafter elected.

The recently enacted amendment to the Civil Service retirement law would make it possible for one member of the Senate to obtain a $4100 annuity by payment of $1.40. That, of course, is an extreme example—so extreme that the Civil Service Commission denied it was a possibility. Under questioning by Senator Byrd, however, CSC officials have withdrawn from that vulnerable position. The propaganda which they issued to support the Congressional pensions grab has become a hard-hitting boomerang. So the best course is to wipe out the entire mistake by a straightforward repeal bill.

Even if the present measure did not lend itself to abuses, the undesirability of pensioning legislators would stand out clearly. Annuities are provided for employes in the executive departments because they often spend their lives in the Federal service. Members of Congress, being elected by the people, are here today and may be gone tomorrow. The very nature of their positions excludes the idea of permanent tenure. Service in Congress, moreover, probably enhances the members' earning power in most cases. Once they are voted out of office or choose to retire, they resume the status of citizens without official standing and have no real claim upon the Government. The attempt to treat them as career men is a mistake from the very beginning. And Congressmen who persist in taking that view of their assignment are very likely to have a rude awakening when voters go to the polls next November.

Price Of Cooperation

Under the leadership of Walter P. Reuther, the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) have drawn up a list of demands for submission to the General Motors Corporation. First they ask an increase of $1 per day for all employes, with subsequent adjustments for increases in living costs. Secondly, they demand a union shop and certain other concessions, such as distribution of $100 defense bonds, in lieu of vacation pay, to all employes on the seniority list. Speaking of union shop demands, Mr. Reuther says significantly: "If the union is given complete union security we can devote our energies to the successful prosecution of the war." Thus he clearly implies that resistance to the U. A. W.'s holdup demands will result in malingering and a retardation of the war effort.

The Steel Workers' Organizing Committee of the C. I. O. is likewise busy on the labor front. It, too, is asking the Bethlehem Steel Co. for pay increases of $1 per day and demanding "union security" and the check-off. Since negotiations between the union and Bethlehem have broken down, the issues in dispute have been referred to the War Labor Board.

Mr. Reuther has obligingly indicated the probable cost to the automobile industry of acceding to the single demand for an increase of $1 in the daily wage payment. The negotiations, he says, will set the standard for about 700,000 workers to be employed in the automobile factories after they have been converted to war production. Of that number an estimated 450,000 will be employed by General Motors alone. The automobile and steel workers' unions should not be permitted to "get away" with demands that would add many millions of dollars to the payrolls of companies engaged in war production. If they should succeed in their efforts to exploit the war emergency in such brazen fashion, it would be a signal for workers in other industries to make similar demands. The final result would be tremendous additions to the cost of the war program, a sharp rise in prices in general, and then renewed demands for still higher wages to offset increases.

In the absence of a well-defined policy of wage control, the country looks to the War Labor Board for protection against anti-social wage demands. Unless it takes a firm stand against demands of the Reuther type, we cannot hope to escape an inflationary spiraling of costs and prices that is a synonym for disaster.

Women In War Work

Ernest T. Kanzler, head of the automotive branch of the War Production Board, says that "the drafting of millions of men into the expanded war services, plus the additional man-power requirements of industry, will make it necessary for us to look to the women for substantial help in the factories." Sidney Hillman likewise emphasized the need for more women workers a few days ago. He urged women with factory experience to register as soon as possible with the employment services. More than one million skilled women workers, he says, will be required this year in arms and munitions plants. There is no doubt that women will have to undertake many types of work which have heretofore been reserved exclusively for men.

The Bureau of Employment Security reports that an increased number of women are being trained in riveting, welding, light assembly and aircraft inspection. But their infiltration into airplane plants and other munitions factories has not gone very far as yet. Indeed, so long as men are available, the entry of women into such work will encounter strong resistance from both the unions and employers. But our experience in the last war proved, and the British have again discovered, that women constitute an indispensable labor reserve. The sooner we realize this fact the better, for these labor reserves must have varied skills if they are to be of maximum service. Such skills can be best acquired by in-factory training and gradual infiltration of women into the more technical jobs. Too little attention has been given to the contributions which working women can make to the war effort and to their training for that purpose.

Double-Edged

Mr. Archibald MacLeish has issued a warning against the latest campaign of the Axis short-wave virtuosi. He considers them to be "as shrewd, as ruthless as any poison plot of the Borgias." Shrewd and ruthless the campaign may be, but it is just about as subtle and tactful as Mr. MacLeish's dragging in the Borgias. After all, that celebrated family included saints as well as sinners.

Part of the Axis campaign is to persuade the people of the North and South American Continents that the Catholic hierarchy has reasons for wanting an Axis victory.

The programs sent to this country are usually introduced by various hymns sung in a dubious Latin accent and seldom to the approved Gregorian music. A pretty fair sample of the "message" was the announcement from Berlin last Sunday that the American Archbishop of Manila has issued a "clarion call" to Filipino Catholics to support the Japanese peace aims. This rather curious bit of information was later elucidated by a Tokyo broadcaster. He explained that Filipino Catholics are collaborating with the Japanese because, since the Japanese Emperor is himself a god, the invaders are necessarily on the side of piety and religion. Meanwhile, the effort to persuade Latin-American Catholics that the Vatican had advised their governments not to break relations with the Axis recoiled on the authors when the Vatican categorically denied it.

However, this is a game at which both sides can play. The hypocrisy of the Nazis and stupidity of the Japanese in this matter are by now a little too obvious to be effective. No amount of short-wave propaganda can conceal from Americans the fact that Japanese victory would mean the extirpation of Christianity in the Orient and possibly throughout all Asia.

Thus, Nazi Germany is allied to a power which offers the most formidable threat, not merely to the so-called Aryan race but also to the Christian religion that the world has seen since the rise of Islam. Not only that, but the extirpation of Christianity within Germany itself is the settled policy of the Nazi regime. Our job—which is to say, the job of the Donovan committee—should be to make sure that these issues are as well understood in Spain, Italy, Ireland and France as they are to the German leaders of Christianity. Propaganda is not necessarily any more powerful for being false, nor any less effective for being true.

ONE WAY OF SORROW

One way the heart will turn,
In turning out of grief,
She might have come to learn
From the green leaf
That turns from green to gold,
And goldens all the air
That never thought to hold
A thing so fair.

All communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. In fairness to other correspondents, letters should be held to 300 words. Letters are subject to condensation.

War-Boosted Prices

Recently you published a communication of mine, devoted to proving that personal incomes ought not to be raised in order to offset any war-begotten increase of prices, and condemning any possible breaking of that rule by the farm bloc, or others. Pvt. Carlyle Skolos apparently took exception on behalf of the farmer. His good-tempered letter entirely missed my main point.

High prices may be justified. Even when they are not, someone has to pay them: The people who neutralize the effect of high prices on themselves by means of an increase of wages are usually raising still higher the prices which others have to pay. They are shirking their share of a common burden. Nevertheless, millions of well-meaning and patriotic people are trying to do just that. They assume as a matter of course that their real incomes should stay put. So they should, but in war they are not going to, for the people as a whole. These well-meaning people do not suppose they are so superior that they may avoid the common penalty, but that is what their demands imply.

Not only are these wage increases cruelly unfair; it is they, and they alone, which cause spiral inflation. If it could be generally accepted that increases purely to match war-begotten price increases are wrong, all danger of the terrible spiral inflation would cease.

In my other letter I suggested, not once, but twice, that farmers should be compensated for their low prices before the war. I think I thus proposed the "break for the farmers" which he wants. I am sincerely sorry that he did not notice that. It is very different, however, when he asks for a "fair share of war profits." That I do not countenance. There ought not to be any "war profits."

Private Skolos tried to reinforce his argument by citing the case of someone making 247 per cent profit. There he followed the familiar technique of some labor unions. Such pleas amount to: "So-and-so took a big profit, which is unjust and unpatriotic. Therefore, we must be allowed to do the same."

Inferior Clerks

There are probably hundreds of able, sincere and conscientious employes in the Government service here whose sentiments are voiced by "One of the Victims," contributor to The Post's letter column.

It is destructive to the morale of the intelligent and competent employe, who, in addition, is an eager and enthusiastic worker to find oneself herded into these wonderful and mysterious groupings that civil service sets up for us. Regardless of past accomplishments and present performance in the Government service, qualified workers and the dull, stumbling ones are all grouped alike.

Certainly there must be a way of separating the competents from the incompetents, but if civil service insists on sending out broadsides all over the country to bring in clerks—just clerks at a salary of $1440 per year they will have the kind of working agencies that reflect just that type of help.

As an employe whose work has been recognized for efficiency and performance (and I say this in all humility) I have an ax to grind, and I'll continue to grind it, as long as this system continues to exist. We are in a war, and I don't think that we can afford to muddle along and pretend that we're doing the job just because we have so many thousands of clerks on our pay roll. The level of intelligence of most of them is appalling. R. S.

Termites

Speaking of parasites in Washington reminds me of the termites that infest the Administration. Boring from within to wreck the governmental structure. How about a thorough fumigation?

Local Hotel Rooms

Before people are driven from their homes to make room for war workers it would seem that the possibilities of the local hotels should be looked into. If tourists are (as they should be) excluded from the city during the emergency, a large number of hotel rooms will undoubtedly be available for the accommodation of these employes, since Washington is preeminently a city of hotels.

The latest statistics I have at hand show that this city had, in the year 1935, 76 hotels, containing 12,033 guest rooms, and having receipts of $15,544,000 for that year—a gross income for each room of about $1,300 per annum, or $3.50 per day. It is quite evident that the city now has many more hotels than in 1935, and they can be put to a much better use during the emergency than furnishing luxurious accommodations to sightseers. Most private houses are ill-adapted to the accommodation of roomers, whereas hotels are really only glorified rooming houses. The Government should commandeer these hotels at a rental based on their value merely as buildings, and not on their potential value as hotels capable of a gross yield of $1300 per annum for each guest room. After an allowance had been made for those who had established a residence of, say, two years in these buildings, and a suitable amount of space had been reserved for transients having legitimate business with the war agencies, the remaining rooms could be turned over to the "Government girls" on the basis of first-come-first-served. The large hotel now going up on Sixteenth Street can serve no useful purpose during the emergency, and it should be completed by the Government as a housing project for war workers.

My suggestion is so eminently logical that I am surprised that the possibility should have escaped the eagle eye of our Government.

Conservation Piece

Some weeks ago I suggested to Donald Nelson, who is now chief of the War Production Board, some economies which affect the newspaper, printing and bookbinding trade, in an effort to conserve paper, metals and dyes. These products are more necessary for war purposes than they are for the printing and publishing business, and substitute methods can be very easily found and placed into operation so that no hardship will be involved. Specifically, my suggestions were as follows:

1. Consideration might be given to reducing the size of advertisements in newspapers by obliging advertisers to reduce the size of type and illustrations. This will not necessarily involve a reduction in the cost of advertisements nor in the price of newspapers but reduction in advertising would save paper. Newspapers should not be the billboards they are fast becoming.

2. Consideration might be given to obliging book publishers to produce books with paper covers. This would save a great deal of paper, glue, string, tape, gauze, etc. If people think books are good enough to preserve, they can have them bound specially, as they do in Europe, and they can pay accordingly. Book jackets might also be eliminated, thus saving ink, dyes, etc.

One objection may be made by bookbinders on the theory that they will be thrown out of work. This does not necessarily follow because if the European method of binding books with paper covers is utilized, books will become vastly more popular than they are now owing to the reduced price, and book paper is plentiful.

First Lady Deflates Morale

From time to time there have been press comments on the activities of Mrs. Roosevelt. Some have been fair, some unfair.

But even bending backwards to be fair on the subject of Mrs. Roosevelt, I would like to ask if there is anyone who can come forward at this time and defend her actions in making a cheap vaudeville of the highly important Office of Civilian Defense?

Mrs. Roosevelt is, in my humble opinion, doing more to throw suspicion on the efficiency of our war effort than any one other source.

I would like to ask one question:

How can the Government build a real "blood, sweat and toil" psychology in this country to win this war with the wife of the President proving on the front pages every day that she thinks this is a time for May Pole dancing? Her every official act says, "Public interest be damned."

Citizens are giving their sons, their money, their every waking hour to the winning of this war.

And they are being confronted daily with dismaying evidence that the wife of the President believes it is the time for her to unload a menagerie of palace pets on the public payroll in ridiculous jobs.

I wonder if she realizes that American men and women, patriots and well-wishers all, are talking about this situation wherever they meet . . . at Red Cross sewing tables, around dinner pails in factories, everywhere.

I wonder if she knows they are saying, "My taxes going for planes and guns? Like hell they are. They are going for blond dancers at $4600 a year and female White House parasites."

Did the lady ever hear of Caesar's wife?

Can't the President do something?

Or doesn't anyone give a damn!

Maybe this isn't war at all . . . maybe it is just a spectacular method of putting the world on WPA. LEGIONEER.

Fun With Father

My chances of turning out any real humor seem very remote, indeed, when I survey that field in contemporary writing. I never had a father. And that seems to be the sine qua non, the chief ingredient in the recipe of American humor these days. Everywhere one reads the entertaining antics of father, the great, lovable American bear.

I have just finished reading, belatedly, another very amusing account of someone's father. This time it is a lady, an actress, who laughs at papa. And believe me, her pop was sure a corker.

Of course, I did have a father initially. But he didn't wait around to meet me. He died before my advent. The causes of his demise are now immaterial, but I am convinced that I was not one of them.

What I mean to say is that I did not have a father around underfoot to observe and analyze, whose irascibilities and petty vices I could treasure up for publication.

Another fellow I know had one. And I thought of borrowing his for a spell. But the last time I saw him I detected ink on his fingers. He's probably already hard at work on his own story of his father.

A neighbor boy on the farm had a father, but he was the old-fashioned razor-strap kind who never did know how to take a joke; so he's out.

Considering my fatherless dilemma, I've decided to spare my children this problem. I've determined that they shall have a father. And he will be one they can write about.

About a year ago an article of mine, called "A Bachelor on the Behavior of Parents," appeared in a magazine devoted to children and parents, and such related things. Twice in the course of the article I spoke of what I hope to do with regard to my children when I become a father.

After each of my whens, the editor inserted in parenthesis: "or if." It was a good thing I didn't give him a chance to "or-if" me a third time; I might have begun to entertain doubts myself.

The idea of planting doubt in a declarative sentence! Must remember to take this up with the editor when (or if) I ever meet him.

When, then, I become a father, I propose to treat my children to such an array of paternal foibles as not even the best of the current best-selling fathers can boast. This should be no end helpful to them later on; though it may be a trifle annoying in the early years.

Father, in the past in America—judging from things I've been reading of him—was a bullheaded, thundering, unreasoning, opinionated, simple-minded, but withal lovable man. He never paid a bill without grumbling about it. And he never failed to pay one. He went to church regularly from principle—not preference. He was at once harsh and tender with his children.

Father voted Democratic or Republican, according to whether his habitat happened to be South Carolina or Vermont. He did most things comme il faut and rigidly required his family to do the same, timing their obedience with stopwatch precision.

Dad, in short, was a pill. But through it all he always managed to make his brood love and honor him.

Many of the dads of the past would undoubtedly be much surprised to read themselves in our best-seller pages; it is more than possible that many of them would not recognize themselves. Certainly, some would prefer not to see themselves in incidents in their offspring's writings.

Probably most of the dads would react the way "Peck's Bad Boy" did in after years. When a staid gentleman of business, it apparently embarrassed him no little to be constantly confronted with his pranks in the pages of his father's books. To reporters he shyly suggested that perhaps his father exaggerated a little.

Father starts becoming a problem in most books from the day of the birth of his first child. While his wife calmly goes through her ordeal, he paces the floor or drapes himself around the chandelier—according to his individual nervous set-up.

When the crisis is over, father expands and sprouts cigars—the best for the first child—from every pocket. The mother—and even the child—all is forgotten but his achievement: He has become a father. In a few cases the father has to be revived before he can expand.

When I become a father I intend to eliminate these paternal preliminaries. It seems to me that becoming a father in the old way entails too much suffering—and all for the humor of future generations of the family and the future literary productions of the children who are the cause of it all in the first place. No, sir; my children will have to look elsewhere for their first chapter.

But I am looking forward in gleeful anticipation to my role of the great American father, as portrayed in current literature. Think of the license and leeway this will afford me.

Not, mind you, that I intend to become exactly a miscreant rascal or a rogue. But I shall be free of many of the inhibitions which beset me now in my prepaternal state.

Secure in the knowledge that my children are hoarding all my idiosyncracies for future use, I shall be able to give free rein to them. And I have a number I've never even used yet.

If conscience ever catches up with me following a display of impatience or temper with my children, I'll always be able to console myself with the thought: Well, it will make excellent reading someday.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Travel Note

A MAN can cross the continent, as I have just done, and see at first few outward signs of the American mobilization. On the ordinary lines of travel and in the cities through which he passes, he sees almost nothing of the great war industries, or of the large and growing troop concentrations, or of the military movements which have in fact been under way since we entered the war. The country is so large that a war effort which almost anywhere else would be evident to everyone is here in America not at all obvious. And so great are the American reserves that the effort itself has as yet wrought few visible changes in the outward aspects of civilian life.

LIPPMANN

ALL THIS is no doubt a sign of what is possible here. There must be great potential power in a nation which has moved large armies across a continent, and itself has hardly realized what was happening except that here and there the luxurious civilian passenger trains were a bit late, which can organize what is already in absolute, though not in relative, terms a great war industry—and yet feel almost no serious strain.

Yet if this indicates what is possible, it also indicates what is difficult. For one thing the comparative ease with which we have done what we have already done encourages the unawareness, the overconfidence, and the complacency which are everywhere the great obstacles to a much more rapid and drastic mobilization. If the effort had been harder to make, the will of the people would already have become hardened more than it actually is. There would be less of the notion that the war is something which MacArthur is fighting, or that the President is fighting, while the rest of us sit in the bleachers. There would be fewer conversationalists who follow the war and express the correct sentiments but soon betray the fact that they are not absolutely sure whether they are more concerned about the Japanese and the Nazis or about the New Dealers.

FOR ANOTHER, the depth of our reserves is a liability as well as an asset. For we have raised a standard of living upon an industrial organization, which requires speedy and luxurious transportation by automobile, bus, truck, express trains and airlines, which uses up raw materials, skilled labor, power, managerial ability on a scale with which there is nothing comparable in the world. The reduction of that standard of living—which is what a full war effort must require—is more dislocating in America than in a country where the standard of living is much simpler. We are rather like a man who has climbed up high by placing a chair on a table and a stepladder on the chair; going up is easier than coming down.

Indeed, coming down is so disconcerting that one finds almost everywhere a strong desire not to think about how in fact it is to be done—and, therefore, a lack of foresight and serious planning about how, with the coming rubber famine, we are to get along, and a willingness to drift, hoping that the Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Jesse Jones Micawber, is not so misleading in his belief that something will turn up, as, in fact, every serious person knows he is.

MOREOVER, the immense scope and depth of the American reserves require leadership and administration and management of a much higher order than are needed to mobilize a smaller and a poorer country. The Japanese war lords and the Nazi officials have exhibited a skill and an ingenuity which it would be silly to underestimate. Almost certainly the very fact that they have had to make much out of little has, in fact, simplified their problem: They do not have to worry about how to transport aircraft employes to work, each in his private car. Their poverty has also sharpened their wits, necessity being the mother of invention. The fact that they operate on a thin margin is not altogether a weakness; it is also a source of strength, making for that enterprise and daring without which wars are not won.

Thus, it is propable that only as the real costs of the war begin to bite will those of us who are behind the lines begin to put all our energy and all our wits into it. We are like a man who must lose fat by working it off, and who then works better because he has lost his fat.

FSA Faces Full-Dress Probe Of Its Alleged Vote-Buying

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

A Congressional economy committee last night docketed the Farm Security Administration for complete investigation following yesterday's admission by its chief that FSA funds have been used for payment of Alabama poll taxes and after a national farm leader accused it of "flagrant attempts to build up" political pressure groups.

It appeared at the same time that FSA can expect close scrutiny from the potent Senate Appropriations Committee. Senator Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, committee chairman, warned Farm Security Administrator C. B. Baldwin that he would have to "explain completely" before the administration is granted "another dollar."

At a hearing of the Joint Committee on Nondefense Expenditures, Baldwin faced an angry group of Southern Senators and declared frankly that he believed Federal loans for payment of poll taxes to be a "perfectly legitimate expenditure" under the FSA's program for rehabilitation of destitute white farmers.

Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, declared to the committee that findings of the federation's "preliminary investigation" of FSA "amount to a national disgrace." He said the federation's inquiry indicated "some startling and shocking conditions of waste, extravagance and indefensible practices," including:

1. Assignment of quotas covering the number of FSA clients to be obtained in counties "in order to expend funds appropriated by Congress and to maintain personnel employed by the agency."
2. "Widespread solicitation of clients in order to meet quotas."
3. "Burdening of clients with excessive loans beyond their ability ever to repay, resulting in a complete loss of hope and breakdown of morale."
4. "Flagrant attempts to build up pressure groups to maintain Congressional appropriations and local political and community support through various devices and practices."
5. "Instances of refusal to accept payment of indebtedness in full or to make full reimbursement of overpayments evidently for the purpose of maintaining governmental control over the individual."

Remedy Suggested

To correct these conditions, O'Neal recommended transfer of the lending functions of FSA to a special division in the Farm Credit Administration.

"I do not think it is possible for a farm family to become rehabilitated until it has been restored to citizenship," Baldwin told the committee. "I think that the right to vote is one we all cherish. I can't conceive of a person having a real part in democracy and not having that right."

He emphatically denied that poll-tax loans were made for the purpose of building up a political organization or for creating a pressure group by which, as it was charged, FSA might perpetuate itself by influencing Congressional votes on its own appropriations.

Glass Is Outraged

"Whoever heard of anybody paying anybody else's poll tax and not trying to influence an election?" snorted Senator Glass. "My God Almighty!"

A few minutes later Glass left the committee room, informing his colleagues that he was going to answer his correspondence and "leave this to you credulous gentlemen."

"We're not as credulous as you think, Senator," called out Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee.

In announcing resumption of the inquiry at a hearing Tuesday morning, Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, the committee chairman, declared payment of poll taxes to be in violation of the Constitutional provision making each State judge of the qualifications of its voters. He said he was as much concerned about the principle involved as he was about the money spent. The practice, he maintained, "is an attempt to influence votes," observing that payment of poll taxes by persons other than the voter is a violation of the constitutions of all Southern States.

Senators Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, and Caraway (Democrat), of Arkansas, approved of the payments. Nye said the practice was proper in normal times, but doubted it should be countenanced in wartime.

The charge against FSA was brought by Probate Judge Robert K. Green, of Hale County, Ala., who was a committee witness. Green presented affidavits from W. D. Bynum, former FSA assistant rural supervisor, and S. L. Griffin, assistant supervisor in Hale County. Both documents attested that FSA officials urged loan-making drives on their subordinates and emphasized the importance of paying up poll taxes.

Adolf—I can't be intimidated by weather.

Yank—That ain't the way I heard it.

• • • •

Adolf—Bah! You're green and untrained. You represent a capitalistic nation. You are soft and flabby.

Yank—The voice is the voice of Adolf but the words are the words of Wilhelm.

• • • •

Adolf—Where are you?

Yank—Wouldn't you like to know?

Adolf—I'll find out.

Yank—You bet. From now on I'll be in constant touch.

Adolf—I suppose you realize you are up against an unbeatable army.

Yank—Nix on that. I read that news from Russia.

Adolf—Russia, phooey! I'm not finished with her yet.

Yank—Boy, how you wish you were! Lissen, Adolf, how's your nervous breakdown coming along.

Adolf—That was all newspaper talk. I have no nervous breakdown.

Yank—I'll see that you get one now! Are you still wearing that uniform you were never going to take off until you had licked the world?

Adolf—Ja! Ja!

Yank—I didn't know cooties could stay so long in one place. Say, why don't you get wise and sue for peace.

Adolf—Me sue for peace! I've got the world under my heel

Yank—All I got from that sentence was your name.

Adolf—What name?

Yank—Heel.

Adolf—Nincompoop! I consider you too small for me to notice.

Yank—If you think you look oversized you're crazy. How are your generals?

Adolf—Don't worry about my generals.

Yank—If you ain't worried why should I be?

• • • •

Adolf—I'm itching to get a crack at you.

Yank—You're a poor judge of what causes those itches, Adolf. And, lissen, I've got a proposition for a partner of yours. It's an offer for Mussolini. Hollywood wants him in Keystone comedy revivals.

Adolf—He'd be no funnier there than he is here!

• • • •

Yank—Why do you get all your partners out of vaudeville? Benito could have come from no place else. And now you're tying up with Japanese acrobats.

Adolf—You'd better not disparage my acrobats. They're putting on quite an act.

Yank—They crossed us by coming on during intermission. A year from now they won't be able to get bookings in Perth Amboy.

• • • •

Adolf—You amuse me.

Yank—You'll laugh all over when you see what I've brought over for you.

Adolf—What is it?

Yank—A bucksaw.

Adolf—What would I do with a bucksaw?

Yank—You'll find out!

Norway Unites Against Him

"QUISLING has united the Norwegian nation. He has created the most solid front that has ever existed in Norway."

In these words a Norwegian observer, who has just arrived in this country, summed up the situation existing in his homeland as he set out, last September, on a hazardous trip across the North Sea to England.

Quisling, indeed, has achieved the seemingly impossible. He has welded a nation of hard-boiled individualists into one compact bloc. He has blotted out party lines. He has created perfect national unity, against himself, and all he stands for.

Nine years ago, on May 17, 1933, Maj. Vidkun Quisling, a man of boundless ambition and permanent frustration, set out to unify the Norwegian nation which had just thrown him out from his post as minister of defense. He founded a new party and called it "Nasjonal Samling" (N. S.), which means "National Union." It did not immediately show its true colors, but close observers had no difficulty in detecting the virus of Nazism.

FOR THE next seven years "Foreren" (Fuehrer) Quisling campaigned with a singular lack of success, in an atmosphere of general indifference and disdain. At no time did his party muster more than 30,000 members—1 per cent of the population. It never managed to win a seat in parliament. But with every year that went, organization, aims and manners of the N. S. became more like those of the Nazi Party in Germany. It took up anti-Semitism—in a country practically without Jews; it started ranting against the "pluto-democracies;" it set up, and secretly armed, a body of storm troopers, called "Hirden;" it plotted, underhandedly, with Berlin.

On April 9, 1940, Quisling believed his hour had come. With his German friends, to whom he had opened the doors, firmly in possession of the capital and of all principal cities, the "Forer" saw the goal of his lifelong ambition at hand. Less than 24 hours after the first German troops had landed in Norway, Quisling proclaimed himself head of the government and minister of foreign affairs. In a proclamation to the Norwegian people he announced—it was a notorious falsehood—that the government at Nygaarsvold had resigned, with a "national government" taking its place.

The cabinet which Quisling set up that day, obviously in accordance with a long prearranged plan, was much the same as the one over which he presides today. Former Chief of Police Jonas Lie was made minister of justice; Gulbrand Lunde, minister of social affairs; Prof. Birger Meidell, minister of education; Aubert V. Hagelin, minister of trade; Tormod Hustad, minister of agriculture; Prof. Ragnar Skancke, minister of labor; Frederik Prytz, minister of finances; Maj. R. Hvoslef, minister of defense.

This first premiership of Quisling lasted less than a week. On April 15 the cabinet resigned in the face of a general refusal of local and provincial authorities to cooperate with the usurping power, and of decided popular resistance. The German army of occupation at the time preferred not to force the issue. Quisling disappeared from the scene, provisionally at least, and a makeshift government, the so-called council of administration, took over.

EVER SINCE, a strenuous tug-of-war has been going on in Oslo and Berlin about the issue of Quisling's eventual return to power. It has been, for a long time, an open secret that the German occupation authorities in Norway were doing their utmost to block such a move, whereas Berlin was favorable to it.

Quisling's trump-cards in this long-drawn-out struggle for power were his excellent connections with the top Nazi leaders. He is a friend of Goering and Alfred Rosenberg, and well liked by Hitler. He has had against him, all the time, the German military authorities and in particular the commander in chief of the occupation army, Col.-Gen. Nikolas von Falkenhorst. The latter, a professional soldier without Nazi sympathies, not only did his best to prevent a comeback of Quisling, but also consistently coldshouldered the other Norwegian Nazi leaders.

The picture was made still more complex and confused by the ambiguous attitude of Josef Terboven, head of the German civil administration in Norway. Terboven is a 100 per cent Nazi, and he has, from the first day of the occupation, played ball with the "Nasjonal Samling." But, for purely selfish reasons—he wanted to be the boss in Norway—Terboven too opposed Quisling's return to power. This did not make him an ally of Falkenhorst, however, for the general hates Terboven as much as he despises Quisling. It was an all-round fight for power in which some of Quisling's closest associates like Victor Mogens and Jonas Lie played very dubious roles.

TERBOVEN, by far the smartest and most unscrupulous player in this double-crossing game, won the first, second and third round but overreached himself in the end.

On September 25, 1940, Terboven put the ax to the council of administration, which was principally a Falkenhorst creation and a pet child of the general at that. The council was dissolved and with it went the last remnants of Norway's democratic constitution. All political parties, with the exception of the "Nasjonal Samling" were disbanded and King Haakon, with his government-in-exile were declared "deposed." To rule the country under his personal orders, Reichskommissar Terboven appointed 13 so-called "constituted" cabinet ministers—popular usage quickly perverted the term into "prostituted"—all of them members of the "Nasjonal Samling." But the "Forer" himself was left outside the combination. A Quisling state was set up without Quisling.

The new setup did not satisfy anybody in Norway save the schemer Terboven, who was now arbiter of the situation. With the aid of his loyal henchmen in the government, Quisling stubbornly worked for a new order in which he would again play the first fiddle. Three or four times he went to Berlin, where he ingratiated himself still further with the Fuehrer by promising him a large contingent of Norwegian "volunteers" for use against Britain and Russia.

Last spring, after another trip to Germany, during which he inspected the training camp of the "Nordland" Regiment recruited from his followers, Quisling again thought his hour had come. He was so sure of it that a day was fixed, in the last week of May, 1941, on which he was to proclaim himself Prime Minister of Norway. The ceremony worked out in advance into the last detail was to include, among other things, the solemn hauling down of the German flag from the Storting Building in Oslo and the hoisting of the Norwegian flag with the Quisling banner side by side.

EXACTLY WHY the show was called off at the last minute is not quite clear yet, but it is certain that once again Terboven had outsmarted Quisling. A few days before the date set for the induction of Quisling to the premiership, Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler arrived in Oslo by air and when he left again there was nothing left of Quisling's hope. Adding insult to injury, Terboven, more powerful than ever, issued a series of decrees tightening the purse-strings for Quisling considerably. One of the regulations, for instance, required the frustrated "Forer" and his henchmen to pay their own railroad fares in future—an unheard-of thing since the German invasion of Norway.

A few weeks later Terboven also got rid of his other rival, Gen. von Falkenhorst, who was put in charge of the Finnish front where he came within an ace of "dying from heart disease."

During the next few months not much was heard of Quisling except that he was having nervous breakdowns about one a day, that he was suffering from chronic insomnia and that he once attempted to commit suicide. Then, since last September approximately, his star began to rise again. He made a number of fire-eating speeches, threatening Sweden, invelghing against Britain and "warning" the United States. There were other indications too that Quisling was preparing a comeback in short order.

There can be no doubt that the decision to put Quisling back in the saddle must have been Hitler's himself. None of his lieutenants could dare to make a decision of such gravity, overriding both the veto of von Falkenhorst and the opposition of the powerful Terboven. Why Hitler took this step is not clear but it looks rather like another reckless fling by an increasingly desperate gambler.

The Gallup Poll

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princton, N. J., Feb. 6.—A majority of labor union members polled throughout the country by the American Institute of Public Opinion are opposed to one of organized labor's long-entrenched and most widely discussed practices—the check-off.

Local union leaders—presidents, secretaries, treasurers, business agents, etc.—are about evenly divided for and against it, with a slight preponderance in favor.

This important news comes from what is believed to be the first scientific, impartial and Nation-wide poll of labor union sentiment on the check-off system—the system whereby the employer collects union dues out of the workers' pay envelope and turns the money over to the union.

82 Centers Surveyed

The survey was conducted among 1000 labor union leaders in 82 industrial centers, and among a cross-section of the union rank and file in the same areas.

The issue was stated as follows in the poll:

"Should companies having a closed or union shop take union dues out of the workers' pay envelopes and turn the money over to the unions (the check-off), or should the unions collect the dues themselves?"

The vote follows:

	Union Leaders	Union Members
Companies
Should Collect	46%	29%
Unions
Should Collect	42	61
Qualified Answers	6	4
Undecided	6	6

Field reporters who conducted the survey on behalf of the Institute interviewed a representative group of labor union officials and members in 82 areas including Boston, Worcester, Springfield, Braintree, Bridgeport, Hartford, New Haven, Albany, Troy, Utica, Rochester, Buffalo, New York City, Jersey City, Newark, Camden, Baltimore, Providence, Pittsburgh, Scranton, Wilkes-Barre, Harrisburg, Philadelphia, Detroit, Kansas City, St. Louis, Wilmington, Wheeling, Louisville, Atlanta, Memphis, Milwaukee, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Oakland, Seattle, Cleveland, Akron, Youngstown, Indianapolis, Gary, Fort Wayne, South Bend, Chicago and 38 other important industrial centers.

Reasons Pro and Con

The men who expressed opposition to the check-off list named three general reasons for their opinion:

1. Payment of union dues should be voluntary; the check-off is undemocratic and "smacks too much of force."
2. Voluntary payments make for closer business contact between the union and its members and a better spirit.
3. The check-off is an imposition on employers, and invites them to snoop into union affairs.

Those who, on the other hand, favor the check-off, give these as their main arguments:

1. The check-off prevents delinquent dues and raises more money for union treasuries.
2. It is more efficient; saves time and bookkeeping for the individual worker.
3. It is the best way to keep a closed shop.

The secretary of an A. F. of L. plumbers' local in Muskogee, Okla., expressed the viewpoint of most labor union leaders when he said:

"I'm keeping the books now, and lots of men just don't seem to have money when dues are due. A check-off would prevent that."

Labor Union Majority Opposes Check-off

Colombian Neutrality

By Jean A. Crawford

Axis Agents Promote It

Bogota, Colombia.

THE "WAR of nerves," so long a familiar phrase on the European continent, became a very real thing in Colombia during the Rio conference. Late Wednesday evening the day before the delegates convened, the Italian spokesman, Virginio Gayda, led off with a statement which was widely publicized here.

"If the nations of South America don't like to recognize the triumph of the Axis," he warned, "it ought to be recorded for them that Japan has a terrifying fleet of submarines, capable of blockading the coasts of South America." This looked like common sense to the Colombians. The Bogota newspapers had been featuring a series of articles on the Choco—the region of their country which fronts on the Pacific. Singapore was already threatened and the Japanese fleet seemed nearer than at any time since the initial attack on Pearl Harbor.

The opening day of the conference saw a second well-planned propaganda move. The morning papers carried a dispatch from an authoritative news agency under a Vatican City date line. "It is affirmed from Rome that the Pope would like strict neutrality by all the countries of South America in order to make the re-establishment of harmony after the war easier," the article read.

THROUGHOUT the day anxious and apprehensive crowds gathered before the newspaper bulletin boards waiting for more news. Every recently chalked up story was scanned for further statements from the "Holy Father," who governs the religion, which in turn directs the life of practically every native-born Colombian. If the Pope had made such a declaration, Colombians knew they were already in opposition to the holy will, because they had abandoned neutrality December 18, when President Santos broke relations with the Axis. Many people with whom I talked even felt that the statement was aimed especially at Colombia.

Thursday night, when the opening ceremonies of the Rio Conference were being broadcast by local radio stations, the news was flashed that the Colombian government had received no confirmation of the Vatican statement, and would treat it as a rumor until proved otherwise. Later, the Vatican denied issuing any statement, and the story was traced to Nazi sources; but this was not until the pro-Axis newspaper of Bogota, El Siglo, had succeeding in making the issue of considerable political importance.

The apprehension caused by the possibility of blockade and the thought that the Pope was displeased was not increased by the third Axis move: The German and Italian threat to Brazil that the breaking of relations would be regarded as an "unfriendly act." Colombia had already broken relations with the Axis. Furthermore, the Colombian delegation, headed by Gabriel Turbay, was sponsoring with Mexico and Venezuela the proposal for the common rupture of relations.

"Can you imagine" a Colombian friend of mine asked me, "the Axis trying to stop our proposal from going through? Why, we ought to declare war on them!"

THE GOVERNMENT, perhaps taking its cue from the popular indignation, immediately issued decrees intended to curb the activities of the "fifth column." The German school in Barranquilla, center of the Nazi organization there, was closed, as was the German school in Bogota. In Cali, another German center, the schools have not been closed, but some changes in the teaching staff have been required. The system of prescribing places of residence for people under serious suspicion has also been started.

The great danger in Colombia is that the pro-totalitarian activities cannot be stopped by merely controlling the Axis nationals in this country. The leader of the Conservative party, Laureano Gomez, is a self-styled Nazi who has threatened to use force if necessary to thwart a Liberal victory in the May elections.

The naming of Gabriel Turbay to head the Colombian delegation to the Rio conference has played into Gomez's hands. Dr. Lopez de Mesa, the foreign minister, would normally have been named to the post, and he and his followers have made little attempt to conceal their chagrin. Gomez's paper has consistently supported their position against that of the President. Another important man has been angered by the appointment of Turbay. He is Dr. Carlos Lozano y Lozano, Colombian Ambassador to Brazil and president of the council of state. Under the terms of the Colombian constitution there can be no national elections if the country is in a state of war. Should Santos declare war before May and then, as is widely predicted, retire in favor of Lozano y Lozano, the President's chair will be filled by a man who was so angered by Turbay's appointment that he tried during the course of the Rio conference to resign his ambassadorship.

We do not know here yet whether the naming of the Rio delegation was entirely Santos' work, or whether the choice was influenced by Washington. Whichever may be the case, there is considerable apprehension that Colombia's leadership in the demand for American solidarity may have cost a dear price: the unity of the Liberal Party.

Retreat Planned

The women of St. Francis De Sales Church, under the auspices of the Washington Retreat League, will hold a Day of Recollection at the Washington Retreat House, 4000 Harewood Road, tomorrow.

The Retreat Master will be the Rev. John H. Schultz, SS. R., of the Preachers Institute of the Holy Redeemer College, Catholic University.

Auto Industry's War Preparation

THIS WILL be the who-dun-it chapter of this little series, the chapter having to do with the fact that we came right down to Pearl Harbor with a motor industry still largely engaged in the production of passenger cars for individual use. Such vehicles still are often miscalled pleasure cars, a form dating from the time when the private car was a luxury for a Sunday ride or "spin" over lumpy suburban roads, but experience and contemplation of the near future prove that it is an almost indispensable carrier.

PEGLER

Nobody has yet explained how we are going to do without it and the anxiety is nowhere more acute than in Detroit, where so many millions of cars have been made, but today the best minds of the community are wondering how 100,000 workers will be shifted from home to the job and back in three great mass movements daily, some of them as far as 100 miles a day, when the inconceivably vast Ford bomber plant goes into total operation next July.

This is not the entire problem in Detroit, to say nothing of similar problems in practically all other centers, but it will do as an illustration. True, the tires will give out before the vehicles, which then, presumably, will be put away for duration, but those new tires will give much priceless mileage in getting people about on necessary errands who otherwise would be immobilized much sooner; and it is the rather wounded contention of the motor makers of Detroit that their rubber consumption last year did not reduce by as much as an ounce the supply available for war today.

AT THE SOURCE there was unlimited rubber and the Federal Government, which was buying for war, has itself to blame for its own failure to buy and store more on its own account. That millions of miles of tire service will be wasted on frivolous and uneconomical errands is inevitable and just too bad, but a problem of public opinion and possibly of regulation. Most Americans apparently are using cars today as though there were still, as always before, plenty more where their present tires came from.

But why didn't the industry take the initiative, warn the Nation resoundingly that the cars and tires in service would have to last indefinitely, shut down last year and save time and material by total conversion of its plants for war work?

Well, the automobile industry is not the Government, for one reason, and any such assumption of a duty of the Government to anticipate war and create war-consciousness would certainly have been denounced as warmongering with an eye to profits. Moreover, the unemployment might have created another of those great revolutionary crises such as the Government smirkingly encouraged within the recent painful memory of the motor builders. And, finally, the big companies lacked orders from the Government for the performance of specific war tasks.

SUCH ORDERS as the Government had placed were being executed and there are several huge new works built from the ground up which argue the industry's contention that its men of strange genius were not lagging when tasks were definitely assigned. If it were granted that idle machine capacity above the requirements of the automobile production schedule could have been put to war use; and the industry denies that such was a feasible plan, the fact would still remain that there were no assigned jobs for these machines.

There is still some surliness and stalling, a hang-over from the bitter days of the sit-down, and the picket-line riots, but, on those war jobs which were in progress before Pearl Harbor, there has been a perceptible change of demeanor among the workers.

Not even the necessity of Mother Russia, whose sudden danger last June changed the war from a predatory adventure of capitalist imperialism to a fight for freedom in the minds of the Communist unioneers and strike leaders of the C. I. O., could quite overcome the sullenness of many men at the machines. But the attack on the United States by Japan caused a noticeable change and the great tank arsenal is bedecked with many homemade slogans and drawings bearing the insignia of the automobile workers union, exhorting the patriots to buy bonds.

IT WOULD compromise a sacred union principle, briefly stated as "the least work for the most money," to flaunt C. I. O. signs urging speed on the job, but there has been a slight stimulation, nevertheless. The few who still sulk and gossip on the job would seem to be beyond reach of any appeal, save, perhaps, that of Leon Trotsky, whose disciples still insist that the war is nothing but a capitalist, imperialist, Nazi, Fascist, Stalinist conspiracy against their little company of righteous men in a wicked world.

Did the manufacturers refuse or evade specific orders offered them, lest they lose private automobile business to competitors still turning out cars and uncommitted to war tasks? That I do not know, but Congress could find out if the question is worth asking, now that the whole industry is working in the war.

Greek Envoy and Wife Hosts at Large Party

By Carolyn Bell

"It has been postponed"—and with that, the Greek Minister, Cimon Diamantopoulos, dismissed the topic of conversation which, of course, was about the possible visit of the Greek King to the United States.

Entertaining between 5 and 7 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the Greek Minister and Mme. Diamantopoulos were hosts at one of the first large parties they have given since their arrival, almost two years ago. The party was given to fete the representatives of nations—26 in all—which signed the antiaxis pact several months ago.

It was a gala party from beginning to end—and it was away past 7 when the last guests left. Although diplomats were very much in evidence, a number of service people, residentials and Congressionals pulled up in their cars to the entrance of the gracious old home on Massachusetts Avenue to greet the representatives of the nation which so gallantly fought the Axis invaders—and not so very long ago.

"My dear, it's Michael Arlen—his wife is Greek, you know"—said Mrs. S. L. Childs by way of describing a large gathering of guests obviously spellbound. And Mr. Arlen, author of the "Green Hat," was looking extremely chipper with a red carnation tucked in his lapel. Mrs. Arlen, dark and most attractive, was dramatically gowned. Her black hat was swathed in black jersey, spangled with bright green pailletes.

For quite a while the Minister and Mme. Diamantopoulous maintained a receiving line in the outer salon but later in the evening they joined the party that merrily swirled about the handsome buffet table and bar. Red tulips, clusters of white hyacinths and jonquils centered the table where sweets of all kinds—including strawberry tarts—were arranged. Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslav minister, was pouring tea at one end of the table. She was chic in a black frock and a diamond clip.

"I think just about everyone in Washington is getting a parasite complex," said a smart young matron who thought it was really too bad. "After all many people here, men and women, have made Washington their home for years and would be lost any place else," she continued. Mrs. Truxtun Beale, who is now actively engaged in "good neighboring," was in the throng. She wore a bright red crepe frock and coachman's hat.

Lady Halifax Attends Party

Lady Halifax, wife of the British Minister, was an early arrival as was Mrs. Summer Welles, wife of the Undersecretary of State, who recently greeted her husband after his return from the Rio conference.

The cynosure of all eyes was the newly arrived Indian Agent General, now attached to the British Embassy. He was accompanied by his wife, Lady Bajpai, lovely in a sari of blue sky edged in a band of dark blue and gold. Following the Indian custom, she has a diamond set in her nose.

Ian Elliott In Throng

Regaling a group with his fund of dry, humorous stories was Ian Elliott—who doesn't mind being called by his first name if the I is pronounced softly and quickly. Not far away was attractive Mrs. Elliott chatting with a group. Dr. and Mrs. P. S. Constantinople were late arrivals. Mrs. Constantinople was chic in black with a flower rhinestone clip at the neckline.

The Minister Counselor of the legation, George S. Depasta, was here, there and everywhere seeing that guests were made happy. Also assisting was attractive Mme. Depasta, who wore a tea-length frock of black crepe. The Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Gouthier chatted with Mme. Philon Philon, who was smartly turned out in a black ensemble. Her husband, the First Secretary of the Legation, circulated through the rooms greeting first one person and then another. Handsome in his uniform was Capt. Alfred Leontopoulos, who was sporting more decorations than have been seen around Washington in many a day.

Being warmly greeted on all sides were the former Swiss Minister and Mme. Peter, who are now making their home in Washington. Mme. Peter, who yesterday had a gardenia tucked in her lapel, divides her time between here and New England. She was accompanied by Mrs. Ernest G. Draper, whose gray ensemble was trimmed in Persian lamb. Mrs. Eugene Villaret was there yesterday as were Senator William King, the Czecho-Slovak Minister and Mme. Hurban, Serge Krizman, John Sobotka, the Minister Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Konder and dozens of others.

Miss Bolling, Cary Fuller Wed in Canada

At St. James Church in Montreal last evening at 8 o'clock Miss Barbara Bolling, daughter of Richard Wilmer Bolling and Mrs. Eleanor Lutz Bolling and niece of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, became the bride of Air Cadet Cary Clark Moody Fuller of the Royal Canadian Air Force. The Rev. George A. McIntosh officiated.

The bride was gowned in a street length frock of emerald green velvet, with which she wore a hat of ivory duveteen gloves to match and a corsage of green orchids. Mrs. Harry R. Fowler, sister of Miss Bolling, who was the matron of honor and only attendant, was gowned in plum colored crepe, a green velvet hat and an orchid corsage. Mrs. Bolling, mother of the bride, was gowned in black crepe trimmed with powder blue and silver lame, a black velvet hat with a veil and a gardenia corsage.

Air Cadet Edward Saunders was the best man and the ushers were Cadets Frederick Wing, Howard Nomorov, Kyle Farmer, Edward Shove, James Gleason, William Rhodes and William Grey.

Emily Cresson's Marriage Moved Up to Today

Army orders, once more, have caused a wedding date to be moved up. Although the ceremoney had been planned for much later in the season, the bridegroom's recent call to the colors changed nuptial arrangements; and Miss Emily Vaux Cresson, who is widely known in Washington, will become the bride of Franklin Satterthwaite today.

The bride-elect, who is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Caleb Cresson, Oakland Hall, Oaks, Pa., has visited here frequently as the guest of Miss Margaret Carey Tuckerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman. Miss Tuckerman will serve as maid of honor of the wedding at 6 o'clock this evening in the Episcopal Church of Valley Forge, Pa. Mrs. Biddle Page, sister of Miss Cresson, will be matron of honor.

Following the ceremony there will be a reception at the home of the bride's parents. The bridegroom expects to be called into service some time soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Pack are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son, Robert Irving, a few days ago at Doctors Hospital.

Ellen Snodgrass, Houston S. Park Will Wed Today

In a quiet ceremony this morning Miss Ellen Lee Snodgrass will exchange vows with Houston S. Park, jr., at the Thirty-third Street home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Snodgrass.

The Rev. Robert L. Keesler will officiate for the ceremony at 10 o'clock. Miss Snodgrass will be given in marriage by her brother, Cadet Silas H. Snodgrass, Virginia Military Institute. Her family has been resident in Washington for the past seven generations, and she is a graduate of Sweetbriar College.

Mr. Park is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Houston S. Park, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., and attended the University of Alabama. The couple will live in Washington when they return from a week's honeymoon.

Carl Sylvesters Are Entertained By the Spears

"Well, I had thought I was retiring—but, as in the cases of so many other people now, that is out of the question," said Mrs. Carl Sylvester, who is making plans to return to her home in Rio de Janeiro before the end of the month. With her husband, Mrs. Sylvester for a number of years has made her home in Rio, where she has been actively engaged in social welfare and Red Cross work.

Last night they dined with Admiral and Mrs. Ray Spear, whom they have known for many years. A flurry of parties has been planned for the popular counle who had planned "to shuttle between Rio and their home in Maine . . . before December 7." Tonight Gen. and Mrs. Richard Jordan will be hosts at a small dinner in their honor and tomorrow they will lunch with Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land. Tomorrow afternoon Admiral and Mrs. Andrew C. Pickens have asked a few friends to drop in for tea at their Alexandria home to greet the Sylvesters. Yesterday Mrs. Sylvester was in the group lunching with Mrs. William H. P. Blandy, wife of Rear Admiral Blandy, U. S. N., when she entertained at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club for members of the club committee campaigning for funds.

The Sylvesters returned to the United States early in the fall when Mr. Sylvester retired from business after 30 years in Brazil. Their home at Ipanema Beach is now rented and Mrs. Sylvester is returning there to get things in order. She expects to be in Rio for about four months before returning again to the States "but then one can only live from day to day," she added. Mr. Sylvester is engaged in defense work here and will not return to Brazil with his wife.

At present they are stopping at the Brighton Hotel but have been offered a little house in Georgetown to "mind" for the next few weeks and may decide to take it over.

Lady Marley Honored Guest

Lady Dudley Marley was the guest in whose honor Mrs. Fayette B. Dow entertained at luncheon yesterday at her home on Thirty-third Street. Lord and Lady Marley came down from New York to be the weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dow.

Lord Marley has been lecturing in this country since he and Lady Marley came here a number of months ago. He is a Labor Party member of the British House of Lords, receiving his seat in 1930 in recognition of his services as a leader in his party. Tonight he and Lady Marley will be the guests of honor at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Dow.

Leighton McCarthys Honor Letsons at 'Farewell' Party

By Patricia Grady

It was more a "congratulations" party than a "farewell" fete that the Canadian Minister and Mrs. Leighton McCarthy gave yesterday afternoon in honor of the departing Canadian Military Attache and Mrs. H. F. G. Letson.

"Congratulations" were in order, for the popular retiring military attache has just been given the rank of major general—a step up from his brigadier status—and will go to Ottawa today to become adjutant general of the Canadian army. Standing in line with the Minister and Mrs. McCarthy, who wore multiple strands of pearls on her silver lame-jacketed black dinner dress, were Maj. Gen. Letson, in full uniform, and Mrs. Letson, who pinned a triple bouquet of orchids to her dark blue street-length frock trimmed in a lighter blue.

Braving the elements to enjoy the pleasant 5:30 to 7:30 party in the heavily carved walled legation on Massachusetts Avenue were scores of military and naval officers of the United Nations and a sprinkling of diplomatic and residential faces. Sir John Dill, Winston Churchill's Washington stand-in, regaled a group around him with his ideas on the Washington climate. "It's not like London," he said. "London is always trying to make up its mind whether or not to rain, and usually does, and Washington is always trying to make up its mind whether or not to rain, and usually doesn't." Yesterday, admitted Sir John, was a climatic exception for the American Capital.

So the Admiral Took Scotch

Here, there and everywhere were John McCarthy, son of the Canadian Minister and Mrs. McCarthy, and his pretty wife, Ruth, whose black dinner dress boasted a white lace yolk. "What do you think Admiral and Lady Little would like to drink?" asked young Mr. McCarthy after receiving word from his mother to fill their order. "Admirals always drink Scotch," was the consensus of his listeners, and so the admiral did.

Standing in a group of officers was Australian Minister Richard Casey, while his wife chatted nearby with a bevy of wives from the Canadian Legation. A center of attention was Maj. Gen. Chu, the Chinese Military Attache, in the uniform of his country, and Col. F. G. Lj. Weijerman, the Netherlands Military Attache, was also there. United States military officers were out in full force. Mrs. Harold Stark wore a United Service Organization pin as well as a Victory pin on her henna crepe frock, and Mrs. George C. Marshall seemed to know everyone at the party.

New Zealand Envoy Is in Attendance

Adding an exotic touch to the gathering was Lady Bajpai, in Indian costume, and her husband, the Indian Agent-General, who was never far away. The first New Zealand Minister to the United States, Walter Nash, came without his wife, who is in New York shopping for furniture for the new Legation on Observatory Circle, former home of the James Clement Dunns. Other diplomatic representatives were the South African Minister and Mrs. Ralph Close, Mrs. Loring Christie, wife of the former Canadian Minister; the Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. A. K. Helm, the Commercial Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. Kleijn Molekamp, Mrs. G. C. Pirie, wife of the former British Air Attache, who is now on duty overseas, and Commander D. H. Harries, new Naval Attache of the Australian Legation, who has recently come to the Capital, and his attractive wife.

Others there were Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hawkins, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Wales, Mr. and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, of the Canadian Legation, she in a gay red-feathered chapeau; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wilber, Mrs. Bissett Norment and Mr. and Mrs. John McCormack.

Mrs. Orr Honors Nancy Williard, Thomas Schaffert

Rounding out a whirl of prenuptial parties given in honor of Miss Nancy Williard, who will be married to Thomas Henry Schaffert today, was the dinner at the Army-Navy Town Club last night at which Mrs. William Orr feted the couple.

At the table, which was centered by a low bouquet of white roses, were Col. and Mrs. Ramsey, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schaffert, parents of the prospective bridegroom; Dr. and Mrs. Bryan Orr, Leonard Schaffert, Miss Virginia Steuart, Miss Frances Bowie, Miss Dorothy Phillips, Miss Martha Shelton, Miss Barbara Richards, Raymond Coe, Harold Vincent, jr., Gaines Gough, Gerard Paquin and William Smith.

A Suit That Will Go Places

Certain fashions are born during wars and others travel with them in cycles. Hobble skirts, peg-top skirts, uneven hemlines and other styles were born during World War I. Now again we have them all, including the uneven hemline, as shown above. This suit, of navy blue twill, features a skirt and jacket longer in back than in front. The jacket lapels, as well as the skirt and jacket hems, are faced with plaid taffeta matching the hat and gloves. This suit is one to be shown at a luncheon fashion show today at the Raleigh Hotel given by a local specialty shop

Midshipman Could Never See Beauty in Woman While Cloud of Smoke Curled From Her Lips: Says All Honest Men Will Second His View

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I must express my disappointment in your reply to "Baffled Husband" on February 3. I agree with you when you condemn him for continuously nagging his wife about her smoking habit, but I cannot agree with your defense of the habit itself. Having had experience as both a smoker and nonsmoker (which I am at present, and expect to remain), I feel that I have a reasonable outlook on the situation.

Nearly any man, if he is honest, will admit that he prefers the woman of his choice to be a nonsmoker. And I share "Baffled Husband's" view: that smoking makes a woman look coarse and tawdry. It definitely subtracts from her feminine appeal. Personally, I cannot appreciate the beauty of a woman who has a cloud of cigarette smoke curling lazily from her upper lip. Even if 60 per cent of modern women have adopted, —copy-cat fashion—the masculine habit of smoking, I say: "More power to the other 40 per cent."

Why is it that midshipmen are not allowed to smoke on city streets when in uniform? The answer is obvious. Nearly every drugstore cowboy and street corner bum that you see has a cigarette dangling from his lips. And the few women one sees smoking on the streets usually do look cheap and coarse. They seem to be the kind of women who "just don't care." You tell "Baffled Husband" that his "ideal of womanhood is borrowed from the past, when the romantic accent was upon woman as the social antithesis of man, instead of, as today, upon her honestly human qualities." Are we to infer from this that the modern woman regards her intrinsic merit as her chief stock in trade? If so, why does she bother to get a permanent wave and take care to keep her skin soft and smooth?

MIDSHIPMAN.

Man Condemns Smoking As Filthy Extravagance

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Here is another man lining up with "Baffled Husband" against women's smoking. I am opposed to smoking for two sexless reasons. Firstly, because I consider it a filthy habit. There is enough dirt in the world and pollution in the air (the necessary refuse of human activity) without manufacturing more. Secondly, I am against the habit because it is expensive. A bachelor girl we know kept accounts for a year and was surprised to find she was spending more money for cigarettes than for food; more, even, than she spends on the upkeep of her car, which she uses every day.

Now, I like my women intelligent and aggressive; and I admire them dressed in slacks. My wife is a modern professional woman. Yet, should I discover in her the callousness that one of my pals encountered in a girl he admired and tried for a time, to love, I am sure I would react as he did. He said there was no lovemaking so ardent or tender that she could not interrupt, by reaching for and lighting a cigarette. He is a smoker himself, but he couldn't stand that. Yours very truly,

NON-SMOKER.

She Will Not Breathe Smokers' Exhalations

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Long have I read your column with admiring interest, silently agreeing or disagreeing with what you have said. But now I must speak my mind on the smoking question—brought up by "Baffled Husband's" letter published February 3. There are two classes of persons in the world: those who object to smoking and those who don't. You and the two mental hygienists whose opinions you cite belong to the latter class. "Baffled Husband" and I belong to the former. And it has been my observation that neither group will ever understand the other's attitude. Yet, due to the preponderant size of your group, you assume that the minority group just doesn't exist.

"Baffled Husband" and I am not in complete accord, however. With me, there is no moral issue involved. It would be all right with me for the rest of the world to take nicotine in large or small doses, if I could be spared inhaling the second-hand smoke. It hurts eyes, nose, throat and feelings. Therefore, I detest smoking, regardless of who does it—man or woman. And I might say, in defense of "Baffled Husband," that an offensive habit is not necessarily less offensive when practised by a loved one. I plead for more consideration from smokers to non-smokers—for I would like to call the air I breath (as well as my soul) my own. Does this make my "emotional bias in re smoking" even worse than "Baffled Husband's?"

Use Toilet Soap To Last Bit

Mrs. George A. Rankin, 1716 Twenty-second Street Northwest, has given a suggestion that is apropos of the way one can be thrifty in little ways. She suggests the following way of using up bits of soap.

"Make a bag of linen or double cheese cloth about 10 inches square and put into it a handful of soap odds and ends and 2 handsful of oatmeal. Toss this in the tub for a foamy, milk, soft water bath."

Sugarless Dainties Served by Mrs. Wickard

MRS. Claude R. Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, practices what her husband preaches about the conservation of sugar. When the Wickards entertain today at a "family" gathering of the agricultural staff heads, the guests will learn—if they do not already know—that delicious cookies and candy are possible without the inclusion of the much talked about commodity—sugar. Cane sirup and honey were used to make the cookie assortment and sweet chocolate was used in making the chocolate candy drops.

Most of us have had as early "acquaintances" such cookies as the Wickards served their guests. My earliest recollection as a pantry scavenger is, standing on a chair in my grandmother's pantry so I could delve into the old stone cookie jar. And the cookies many times were gingersnaps of the kind served at the Wickard party. You may not have a stone jar to fill with gingersnaps but here is Mrs. Wickard's recipe for making them:

MRS. WICKARD

Honey was used to make crispy orange drop cookies. The recipe is:

Ginger Snaps

Heat 1 cup cane sirup with ½ cup butter until melted. Sift together 4 teaspoons soda, 1 tablespoon ginger, 1 teaspoon salt and 2 cups flour (or enough flour to make a dough that will roll). Add the sifted dry ingredients to sirup mixture. Chill in refrigerator over night. Roll and cut into rounds. Bake in a modern oven, 350 degrees, for 10 minutes. Loosen cookies from baking sheet while hot.

Orange Drop Cookies

Prepare 2 tablespoons grated orange rind. Cream together the orange rind, 4 tablespoons butter and 1 cup honey. Add 2 eggs and 2 cups sifted flour sifted with 4 teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Mix well. Drop by one-half teaspoons on greased cookie sheet and bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees, for 10 minutes.

Chocolate candy drops too were among the dainties that Mrs. Wickard made without sugar. They have all the appearance and taste of those professionally made. Her recipe is:

Chocolate Drops

Break ½-pound bar of sweet chocolate in pieces and melt in double boiler. Add 1 unbeaten egg and stir until smooth. It is important that the mixture be very smooth. Add 2 tablespoons butter and mix well. Allow mixture to become cold. Then roll into small balls and roll quickly into chocolate "shots" or chopped nut meats.

Margo, Movie Actress, Gives Advice on Improving Personality

By Ida Jean Kain

If the man in your life is not such that he tends to strengthen your sense of confidence, he is not for you.

That unexpected bit of feminine wisdom is passed along by as astonishingly tallented and level-headed young woman known as Margo who flits around in star roles on stage, screen or radio. Just now she can be heard over the radio singing on Xavier Cugat's radio program.

While advice to the lovelorn is not one of the specialties of this column, you will see that Margo's observation is part of her philosophy: The man you go with, the colors you wear and the way you carry yourself should all contribute something to your feeling of self-confidence. If they don't, you might better make some changes.

MARGO

Buck Up Your Beau

Being fair-minded, she points out that you should also bolster the self-confidence of the man you go with steadily. That disposes of the romance question.

Women generally, Margo is convinced, need to be more daring in the matter of dress and particularly with regard to color. "Women continue to wear blue, black or brown for years. During this time their skin and hair may have undergone such decided changes that the color around which they build their entire wardrobe may be actually unflattering. I think we should wear more of the bright shades—I find nothing beats the zip of a good strong color."

If you can splurge, she believes in carrying out the color combination idea in your jewels for an extra lift. The day I saw her, she was getting quite a lift out of a gift of topaz clips and a ring.

Aids Personality

Like all outstanding actresses, she considers posture one of the big factors in personality. There's no middle road here. You either create the impression of self-confidence by the way you carry yourself, or you don't. "But it's a funny thing" Margo says, "It's like the old puzzle of which came first, the chicken or the egg! If a woman who suffers from shyness can fake self-confidence in her posture, she takes on confidence. And you never see a self-confident person who doesn't have a fairly good posture! But regardless of how shy she is, the woman who walks proudly erect gives the impression of being poised and is treated accordingly."

What you cannot fake is the way you feel. Unless you feel like holding yourself erect, you will never be able to do it so consistently that you get the habit of good posture. "And here exercise enters the picture," Margo adds. "There seems to be no substitute for a set of exercises for keeping in trim.

Silk and Patriotism

QUERY: "Is there any point now in boycotting dealers who still have a small supply of silk on hand? If silk is from China, did it all have to come through Japan? What of advertisements for silk stockings, Chinese damask undies, imported English silks and Chinese silk shantung?

I have every reason to be patriotic, with one son already in the service. I would be glad to dress in cottons, if it would help any. But would it?" H. M.

ANSWER: There is no reason in the world for boycotting silk products of any kind, even though virtually all our silk fiber originated in Japan. American importers of Japanese goods who acted in perfectly good faith have been left with merchandise because no one will buy it. Any Japanese goods that is on hand has actually been in the country over six months—before Japanese funds were frozen last July.

Money for this merchandise has long ago passed into Japanese hands. Anything that is bought with a Japanese stamp is helping American industries and not those of the Japanese. That is why there are still pure silk materials, also hose available. If these are bought, then it is not necessary to supply other products to take their place—otherwise the silk is left to rot on the shelves.

The original fiber in imported English print silks also had its origin in Japan, but the fabric is made up, printed and finished in England by English labor. So the shipments that come through are perfectly legitimate.

Chinese silk Shantung did formerly come from [illegible] of Shantung, China. [illegible] part of occupied China. [illegible] supply on hand is going to be no more. Chinese [illegible] silk and different from Japanese variety. The [illegible] weaves the cocoon is [illegible] leaves, rather than [illegible] leaves, as in Japanese silk.

So, although your willingness to wear cottons is a patriotic gesture, it will not really help Uncle Sam. You are just denying yourself something that is not necessary. If you live a normal life, without hoarding, boycotting or buying unwisely, you will help this government of ours a lot more.

Afternoon Outfit

QUERY: I am a housewife and I wear tweeds and sports clothes to knock about in. Now I need an outfit to meet all uses—something I can wear in the afternoon and still look nice on occasions. This one outfit must take me to parties also. Should it be a suit, dress and coat or some other costume?

ANSWER: A suit is your best choice, but rather than a mannish type or tailored suit of any style, I would suggest a dressmaker one. Choose one with fine details and self-trimming—any little touch that takes away from severity. Select a fabric also that is very soft and be sure that it is not too heavy. If a coat is needed to complete the outfit, make it the straight hanging type equally as dressy as the suit.

A jabot, taffeta blouse, print blouse or dandy collar shirt will make the suit even more dressy. Matching taffeta hat and gloves or lingerie trim ones will add just the right touch.

Greek Envoy and Wife Hosts at Large Party

By Carolyn Bell

"It has been postponed"—and with that, the Greek Minister, Cimon Diamantopoulos, dismissed the topic of conversation which, of course, was about the possible visit of the Greek King to the United States.

Entertaining between 5 and 7 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the Greek Minister and Mme. Diamantopoulos were hosts at one of the first large parties they have given since their arrival, almost two years ago. The party was given to fete the representatives of nations—26 in all—which signed the antiaxis pact several months ago.

It was a gala party from beginning to end—and it was away past 7 when the last guests left. Although diplomats were very much in evidence, a number of service people, residentials and Congressionals pulled up in their cars to the entrance of the gracious old home on Massachusetts Avenue to greet the representatives of the nation which so gallantly fought the Axis invaders—and not so very long ago.

"My dear, it's Michael Arlen—his wife is Greek, you know"—said Mrs. S. L. Childs by way of describing a large gathering of guests obviously spellbound. And Mr. Arlen, author of the "Green Hat," was looking extremely chipper with a red carnation tucked in his lapel. Mrs. Arlen, dark and most attractive, was dramatically gowned. Her black hat was swathed in black jersey, spangled with bright green pailletes.

For quite a while the Minister and Mme. Diamantopoulous maintained a receiving line in the outer salon but later in the evening they joined the party that merrily swirled about the handsome buffet table and bar. Red tulips, clusters of white hyacinths and jonquils centered the table where sweets of all kinds—including strawberry tarts—were arranged. Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Yugoslav minister, was pouring tea at one end of the table. She was chic in a black frock and a diamond clip.

"I think just about everyone in Washington is getting a parasite complex," said a smart young matron who thought it was really too bad. "After all many people here, men and women, have made Washington their home for years and would be lost any place else," she continued. Mrs. Truxtun Beale, who is now actively engaged in "good neighboring," was in the throng. She wore a bright red crepe frock and coachman's hat.

Lady Halifax Attends Party

Lady Halifax, wife of the British Minister, was an early arrival as was Mrs. Summer Welles, wife of the Undersecretary of State, who recently greeted her husband after his return from the Rio conference.

The cynosure of all eyes was the newly arrived Indian Agent General, now attached to the British Embassy. He was accompanied by his wife, Lady Bajpai, lovely in a sari of blue sky edged in a band of dark blue and gold. Following the Indian custom, she has a diamond set in her nose.

Ian Elliott In Throng

Regaling a group with his fund of dry, humorous stories was Ian Elliott—who doesn't mind being called by his first name if the I is pronounced softly and quickly. Not far away was attractive Mrs. Elliott chatting with a group. Dr. and Mrs. P. S. Constantinople were late arrivals. Mrs. Constantinople was chic in black with a flower rhinestone clip at the neckline.

The Minister Counselor of the legation, George S. Depasta, was here, there and everywhere seeing that guests were made happy. Also assisting was attractive Mme. Depasta, who wore a tea-length frock of black crepe. The Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Gouthier chatted with Mme. Philon Philon, who was smartly turned out in a black ensemble. Her husband, the First Secretary of the Legation, circulated through the rooms greeting first one person and then another. Handsome in his uniform was Capt. Alfred Leontopoulos, who was sporting more decorations than have been seen around Washington in many a day.

Being warmly greeted on all sides were the former Swiss Minister and Mme. Peter, who are now making their home in Washington. Mme. Peter, who yesterday had a gardenia tucked in her lapel, divides her time between here and New England. She was accompanied by Mrs. Ernest G. Draper, whose gray ensemble was trimmed in Persian lamb. Mrs. Eugene Villaret was there yesterday as were Senator William King, the Czecho-Slovak Minister and Mme. Hurban, Serge Krizman, John Sobotka, the Minister Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Konder and dozens of others.

Miss Bolling, Cary Fuller Wed in Canada

At St. James Church in Montreal last evening at 8 o'clock Miss Barbara Bolling, daughter of Richard Wilmer Bolling and Mrs. Eleanor Lutz Bolling and niece of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, became the bride of Air Cadet Cary Clark Moody Fuller of the Royal Canadian Air Force. The Rev. George A. McIntosh officiated.

The bride was gowned in a street length frock of emerald green velvet, with which she wore a hat of ivory duveteen gloves to match and a corsage of green orchids. Mrs. Harry R. Fowler, sister of Miss Bolling, who was the matron of honor and only attendant, was gowned in plum colored crepe, a green velvet hat and an orchid corsage. Mrs. Bolling, mother of the bride, was gowned in black crepe trimmed with powder blue and silver lame, a black velvet hat with a veil and a gardenia corsage.

Air Cadet Edward Saunders was the best man and the ushers were Cadets Frederick Wing, Howard Nomorov, Kyle Farmer, Edward Shove, James Gleason, William Rhodes and William Grey.

Emily Cresson's Marriage Moved Up to Today

Army orders, once more, have caused a wedding date to be moved up. Although the ceremoney had been planned for much later in the season, the bridegroom's recent call to the colors changed nuptial arrangements; and Miss Emily Vaux Cresson, who is widely known in Washington, will become the bride of Franklin Satterthwaite today.

The bride-elect, who is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Caleb Cresson, Oakland Hall, Oaks, Pa., has visited here frequently as the guest of Miss Margaret Carey Tuckerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman. Miss Tuckerman will serve as maid of honor of the wedding at 6 o'clock this evening in the Episcopal Church of Valley Forge, Pa. Mrs. Biddle Page, sister of Miss Cresson, will be matron of honor.

Following the ceremony there will be a reception at the home of the bride's parents. The bridegroom expects to be called into service some time soon.

Mrs. Eva L. Campbell, mother of the hostess, assisted and guests included Mrs. George H. LeCarpentier, Miss Genevieve LeCarpentier, Mrs. Edward Rice, Mrs. Rose Reeves, Miss Eldie Haslacker, all of Washington, and Mrs. Wesley Whitelock and Miss Audrey Kemp, of Arlington, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. Marc Goldnamer, accompanied by Mrs. Louis Loeb, left yesterday for Hollywood, Fla., where they will spend some time at the Hollywood Beach Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Pack are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son, Robert Irving, a few days ago at Doctors Hospital.

Ellen Snodgrass, Houston S. Park Will Wed Today

In a quiet ceremony this morning Miss Ellen Lee Snodgrass will exchange vows with Houston S. Park, jr., at the Thirty-third Street home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Snodgrass.

The Rev. Robert L. Keesler will officiate for the ceremony at 10 o'clock. Miss Snodgrass will be given in marriage by her brother, Cadet Silas H. Snodgrass, Virginia Military Institute. Her family has been resident in Washington for the past seven generations, and she is a graduate of Sweetbriar College.

Mr. Park is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Houston S. Park, of Tuscaloosa, Ala., and attended the University of Alabama. The couple will live in Washington when they return from a week's honeymoon.

Carl Sylvesters Are Entertained By the Spears

"Well, I had thought I was retiring—but, as in the cases of so many other people now, that is out of the question," said Mrs. Carl Sylvester, who is making plans to return to her home in Rio de Janeiro before the end of the month. With her husband, Mrs. Sylvester for a number of years has made her home in Rio, where she has been actively engaged in social welfare and Red Cross work.

Last night they dined with Admiral and Mrs. Ray Spear, whom they have known for many years. A flurry of parties has been planned for the popular counle who had planned "to shuttle between Rio and their home in Maine . . . before December 7." Tonight Gen. and Mrs. Richard Jordan will be hosts at a small dinner in their honor and tomorrow they will lunch with Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land. Tomorrow afternoon Admiral and Mrs. Andrew C. Pickens have asked a few friends to drop in for tea at their Alexandria home to greet the Sylvesters. Yesterday Mrs. Sylvester was in the group lunching with Mrs. William H. P. Blandy, wife of Rear Admiral Blandy, U. S. N., when she entertained at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club for members of the club committee campaigning for funds.

The Sylvesters returned to the United States early in the fall when Mr. Sylvester retired from business after 30 years in Brazil. Their home at Ipanema Beach is now rented and Mrs. Sylvester is returning there to get things in order. She expects to be in Rio for about four months before returning again to the States "but then one can only live from day to day," she added. Mr. Sylvester is engaged in defense work here and will not return to Brazil with his wife.

At present they are stopping at the Brighton Hotel but have been offered a little house in Georgetown to "mind" for the next few weeks and may decide to take it over.

Lady Marley Honored Guest

Lady Dudley Marley was the guest in whose honor Mrs. Fayette B. Dow entertained at luncheon yesterday at her home on Thirty-third Street. Lord and Lady Marley came down from New York to be the weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Dow.

Lord Marley has been lecturing in this country since he and Lady Marley came here a number of months ago. He is a Labor Party member of the British House of Lords, receiving his seat in 1930 in recognition of his services as a leader in his party. Tonight he and Lady Marley will be the guests of honor at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Dow.

Mrs. Marley spoke briefly at yesterday's luncheon. numbered among the invited guests were Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the Supreme Court Justice; Mrs. Joseph B. O'Mahoney, wife of the Senator from Wyoming; Miss Dorothy Detzer, Mrs. Robert Huse, Mrs. G. M. Jones, Mrs. Albert Atwood, Mrs. Harry W. Blair, Mrs. Harold Brayman, Mrs. Ludwell Denney, Mrs. Daniel Knowlton, Mrs. Ernest I. Lewis and Mrs. Horace Lohnes.

Also Mrs. Lawrence Martin, Mrs. William Poland, Mrs. Harold Tweedy, Mrs. Parker West, Mrs. Norman Meyers, and Mrs. Charles Wood.

Nyes Entertain At Dinner Party

Senator and Mrs. Gerald P. Nye entertained informally at dinner last night in their apartment at The Westchester.

Their guests were the Minister of Finland and Mme. Procope; Senator and Mrs. John A. Danaher, and Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja.

By Patricia Grady

It was more a "congratulations" party than a "farewell" fete that the Canadian Minister and Mrs. Leighton McCarthy gave yesterday afternoon in honor of the departing Canadian Military Attache and Mrs. H. F. G. Letson.

"Congratulations" were in order, for the popular retiring military attache has just been given the rank of major general—a step up from his brigadier status—and will go to Ottawa today to become adjutant general of the Canadian army. Standing in line with the Minister and Mrs. McCarthy, who wore multiple strands of pearls on her silver lame-jacketed black dinner dress, were Maj. Gen. Letson, in full uniform, and Mrs. Letson, who pinned a triple bouquet of orchids to her dark blue street-length frock trimmed in a lighter blue.

Braving the elements to enjoy the pleasant 5:30 to 7:30 party in the heavily carved walled legation on Massachusetts Avenue were scores of military and naval officers of the United Nations and a sprinkling of diplomatic and residential faces. Sir John Dill, Winston Churchill's Washington stand-in, regaled a group around him with his ideas on the Washington climate. "It's not like London," he said. "London is always trying to make up its mind whether or not to rain, and usually does, and Washington is always trying to make up its mind whether or not to rain, and usually doesn't." Yesterday, admitted Sir John, was a climatic exception for the American Capital.

So the Admiral Took Scotch

Here, there and everywhere were John McCarthy, son of the Canadian Minister and Mrs. McCarthy, and his pretty wife, Ruth, whose black dinner dress boasted a white lace yolk. "What do you think Admiral and Lady Little would like to drink?" asked young Mr. McCarthy after receiving word from his mother to fill their order. "Admirals always drink Scotch," was the consensus of his listeners, and so the admiral did.

Standing in a group of officers was Australian Minister Richard Casey, while his wife chatted nearby with a bevy of wives from the Canadian Legation. A center of attention was Maj. Gen. Chu, the Chinese Military Attache, in the uniform of his country, and Col. F. G. Li. Weijerman, the Netherlands Military Attache, was also there. United States military officers were out in full force. Mrs. Harold Stark wore a United Service Organization pin as well as a Victory pin on her henna crepe frock, and Mrs. George C. Marshall seemed to know everyone at the party.

New Zealand Envoy Is in Attendance

Adding an exotic touch to the gathering was Lady Bajpai, in Indian costume, and her husband, the Indian Agent-General, who was never far away. The first New Zealand Minister to the United States, Walter Nash, came without his wife, who is in New York shopping for furniture for the new Legation on Observatory Circle, former home of the James Clement Dunns. Other diplomatic representatives were the South African Minister and Mrs. Ralph Close, Mrs. Loring Christie, wife of the former Canadian Minister; the Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. A. K. Helm, the Commercial Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. Kleijn Molekamp, Mrs. G. C. Pirie, wife of the former British Air Attache, who is now on duty overseas, and Commander D. H. Harries, new Naval Attache of the Australian Legation, who has recently come to the Capital, and his attractive wife.

Others there were Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hawkins, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Wales, Mr. and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, of the Canadian Legation, she in a gay red-feathered chapeau; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wilber, Mrs. Bissett Norment and Mr. and Mrs. John McCormack.

Mrs. Orr Honors Nancy Williard, Thomas Schaffert

Rounding out a whirl of prenuptial parties given in honor of Miss Nancy Williard, who will be married to Thomas Henry Schaffert today, was the dinner at the Army-Navy Town Club last night at which Mrs. William Orr feted the couple.

At the table, which was centered by a low bouquet of white roses, were Col. and Mrs. Ramsey, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Schaffert, parents of the prospective bridegroom; Dr. and Mrs. Bryan Orr, Leonard Schaffert, Miss Virginia Steuart, Miss Frances Bowie, Miss Dorothy Phillips, Miss Martha Shelton, Miss Barbara Richards, Raymond Coe, Harold Vincent, jr., Gaines Gough, Gerard Paquin and William Smith.

A Suit That Will Go Places

Certain fashions are born during wars and others travel with them in cycles. Hobble skirts, peg-top skirts, uneven hemlines and other styles were born during World War I. Now again we have them all, including the uneven hemline, as shown above. This suit, of navy blue twill, features a skirt and jacket longer in back than in front. The jacket lapels, as well as the skirt and jacket hems, are faced with plaid taffeta matching the hat and gloves. This suit is one to be shown at a luncheon fashion show today at the Raleigh Hotel given by a local specialty shop

MRS. Claude R. Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, practices what her husband preaches about the conservation of sugar. When the Wickards entertain today at a "family" gathering of the agricultural staff heads, the guests will learn—if they do not already know—that delicious cookies and candy are possible without the inclusion of the much talked about commodity—sugar. Cane sirup and honey were used to make the cookie assortment and sweet chocolate was used in making the chocolate candy drops.

Most of us have had as early "acquaintances" such cookies as the Wickards served their guests. My earliest recollection as a pantry scavenger is, standing on a chair in my grandmother's pantry so I could delve into the old stone cookie jar. And the cookies many times were gingersnaps of the kind served at the Wickard party. You may not have a stone jar to fill with gingersnaps but here is Mrs. Wickard's recipe for making them:

MRS. WICKARD

Honey was used to make crispy orange drop cookies. The recipe is:

Ginger Snaps

Heat 1 cup cane sirup with ½ cup butter until melted. Sift together 4 teaspoons soda, 1 tablespoon ginger, 1 teaspoon salt and 2 cups flour (or enough flour to make a dough that will roll). Add the sifted dry ingredients to sirup mixture. Chill in refrigerator over night. Roll and cut into rounds. Bake in a modern oven, 350 degrees, for 10 minutes. Loosen cookies from baking sheet while hot.

Orange Drop Cookies

Prepare 2 tablespoons grated orange rind. Cream together the orange rind, 4 tablespoons butter and 1 cup honey. Add 2 eggs and 2 cups sifted flour sifted with 4 teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Mix well. Drop by one-half teaspoons on greased cookie sheet and bake in moderate oven, 375 degrees, for 10 minutes.

Chocolate candy drops too were among the dainties that Mrs. Wickard made without sugar. They have all the appearance and taste of those professionally made. Her recipe is:

Chocolate Drops

Break ½-pound bar of sweet chocolate in pieces and melt in double boiler. Add 1 unbeaten egg and stir until smooth. It is important that the mixture be very smooth. Add 2 tablespoons butter and mix well. Allow mixture to become cold. Then roll into small balls and roll quickly into chocolate "shots" or chopped nut meats.

Midshipman Could Never See Beauty in Woman While Cloud of Smoke Curled From Her Lips: Says All Honest Men Will Second His View

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I must express my disappointment in your reply to "Baffled Husband" on February 3. I agree with you when you condemn him for continuously nagging his wife about her smoking habit, but I cannot agree with your defense of the habit itself. Having had experience as both a smoker and nonsmoker (which I am at present, and expect to remain), I feel that I have a reasonable outlook on the situation.

Nearly any man, if he is honest, will admit that he prefers the woman of his choice to be a nonsmoker. And I share "Baffled Husband's" view: that smoking makes a woman look coarse and tawdry. It definitely subtracts from her feminine appeal. Personally, I cannot appreciate the beauty of a woman who has a cloud of cigarette smoke curling lazily from her upper lip. Even if 60 per cent of modern women have adopted, —copy-cat fashion—the masculine habit of smoking, I say: "More power to the other 40 per cent."

Why is it that midshipmen are not allowed to smoke on city streets when in uniform? The answer is obvious. Nearly every drugstore cowboy and street corner bum that you see has a cigarette dangling from his lips. And the few women one sees smoking on the streets usually do look cheap and coarse. They seem to be the kind of women who "just don't care." You tell "Baffled Husband" that his "ideal of womanhood is borrowed from the past, when the romantic accent was upon woman as the social antithesis of man, instead of, as today, upon her honestly human qualities." Are we to infer from this that the modern woman regards her intrinsic merit as her chief stock in trade? If so, why does she bother to get a permanent wave and take care to keep her skin soft and smooth?

MIDSHIPMAN.

Man Condemns Smoking As Filthy Extravagance

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Here is another man lining up with "Baffled Husband" against women's smoking. I am opposed to smoking for two sexless reasons. Firstly, because I consider it a filthy habit. There is enough dirt in the world and pollution in the air (the necessary refuse of human activity) without manufacturing more. Secondly, I am against the habit because it is expensive. A bachelor girl we know kept accounts for a year and was surprised to find she was spending more money for cigarettes than for food; more, even, than she spends on the upkeep of her car, which she uses every day.

Now, I like my women intelligent and aggressive; and I admire them dressed in slacks. My wife is a modern professional woman. Yet, should I discover in her the callousness that one of my pals encountered in a girl he admired and tried for a time, to love, I am sure I would react as he did. He said there was no lovemaking so ardent or tender that she could not interrupt, by reaching for and lighting a cigarette. He is a smoker himself, but he couldn't stand that. Yours very truly,

NON-SMOKER.

She Will Not Breathe Smokers' Exhalations

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Long have I read your column with admiring interest, silently agreeing or disagreeing with what you have said. But now I must speak my mind on the smoking question—brought up by "Baffled Husband's" letter published February 3. There are two classes of persons in the world: those who object to smoking and those who don't. You and the two mental hygienists whose opinions you cite belong to the latter class. "Baffled Husband" and I belong to the former. And it has been my observation that neither group will ever understand the other's attitude. Yet, due to the preponderant size of your group, you assume that the minority group just doesn't exist.

"Baffled Husband" and I am not in complete accord, however. With me, there is no moral issue involved. It would be all right with me for the rest of the world to take nicotine in large or small doses, if I could be spared inhaling the second-hand smoke. It hurts eyes, nose, throat and feelings. Therefore, I detest smoking, regardless of who does it—man or woman. And I might say, in defense of "Baffled Husband," that an offensive habit is not necessarily less offensive when practised by a loved one. I plead for more consideration from smokers to non-smokers—for I would like to call the air I breath (as well as my soul) my own. Does this make my "emotional bias in re smoking" even worse than "Baffled Husband's?"

Use Toilet Soap To Last Bit

Mrs. George A. Rankin, 1716 Twenty-second Street Northwest, has given a suggestion that is apropos of the way one can be thrifty in little ways. She suggests the following way of using up bits of soap.

"Make a bag of linen or double cheese cloth about 10 inches square and put into it a handful of soap odds and ends and 2 handsful of oatmeal. Toss this in the tub for a foamy, milk, soft water bath."

Margo, Movie Actress, Gives Advice on Improving Personality

By Ida Jean Kain

If the man in your life is not such that he tends to strengthen your sense of confidence, he is not for you.

That unexpected bit of feminine wisdom is passed along by as astonishingly tallented and level-headed young woman known as Margo who flit around in star roles on stage, screen or radio. Just now she can be heard over the radio singing on Xavier Cugat's radio program.

While advice to the lovelorn is not one of the specialties of this column, you will see that Margo's observation is part of her philosophy: The man you go with, the colors you wear and the way you carry yourself should all contribute something to your feeling of self-confidence. If they don't, you might better make some changes.

Buck Up Your Beau

Being fair-minded, she points out that you should also bolster the self-confidence of the man you go with steadily. That disposes of the romance question.

Women generally, Margo is convinced, need to be more daring in the matter of dress and particularly with regard to color. "Women continue to wear blue, black or brown for years. During this time their skin and hair may have undergone such decided changes that the color around which they build their entire wardrobe may be actually unflattering. I think we should wear more of the bright shades—I find nothing beats the zip of a good strong color."

If you can splurge, she believes in carrying out the color combination idea in your jewels for an extra lift. The day I saw her, she was getting quite a lift out of a gift of topaz clips and a ring.

Aids Personality

Like all outstanding actresses, she considers posture one of the big factors in personality. There's no middle road here. You either create the impression of self-confidence by the way you carry yourself, or you don't. "But it's a funny thing" Margo says, "It's like the old puzzle of which came first, the chicken or the egg! If a woman who suffers from shyness can fake self-confidence in her posture, she takes on confidence. And you never see a self-confident person who doesn't have a fairly good posture! But regardless of how shy she is, the woman who walks proudly erect gives the impression of being poised and is treated accordingly."

What you cannot fake is the way you feel. Unless you feel like holding yourself erect, you will never be able to do it so consistently that you get the habit of good posture. "And here exercise enters the picture," Margo adds. "There seems to be no substitute for a set of exercises for keeping in trim.

Silk and Patriotism

QUERY: "Is there any point now in boycotting dealers who still have a small supply of silk on hand? If silk is from China, did it all have to come through Japan? What of advertisements for silk stockings, Chinese damask undies, imported English silks and Chinese silk shantung?

I have every reason to be patriotic, with one son already in the service. I would be glad to dress in cottons, if it would help any. But would it?" H. M.

ANSWER: There is no reason in the world for boycotting silk products of any kind, even though virtually all our silk fiber originated in Japan. American importers of Japanese goods who acted in perfectly good faith have been left with merchandise because no one will buy it. Any Japanese goods that is on hand has actually been in the country over six months—before Japanese funds were frozen last July.

Money for this merchandise has long ago passed into Japanese hands. Anything that is bought with a Japanese stamp is helping American industries and not those of the Japanese. That is why there are still pure silk materials, also hose available. If these are bought, then it is not necessary to supply other products to take their place—otherwise the silk is left to rot on the shelves.

The original fiber in imported English print silks also had its origin in Japan, but the fabric is made up, printed and finished in England by English labor. So the shipments that come through are perfectly legitimate.

Chinese silk Shantung did formerly come from the Province of Shantung, China—which is now part of occupied China. After the supply on hand is gone there will be no more. Chinese silk is wild silk and different from the Japanese variety. The worm that weaves the cocoon is fed on oak leaves, rather than mulberry leaves, as in Japanese silk.

So, although your willingness to wear cottons is a patriotic gesture, it will not really help Uncle Sam. You are just denying yourself something that is not necessary. If you live a normal life, without hoarding, boycotting or buying unwisely, you will help this Government of ours a lot more.

Afternoon Outfit

QUERY: I am a housewife and I wear tweeds and sports clothes to knock about in. Now I need an outfit to meet all uses—something I can wear in the afternoon and still look nice on occasions. This one outfit must take me to parties also. Should it be a suit, dress and coat or some other costume?

ANSWER: A suit is your best choice, but rather than a mannish type or tailored suit of any style, I would suggest a dressmaker one. Choose one with fine details and self-trimming—any little touch that takes away from severity. Select a fabric also that is very soft and be sure that it is not too heavy. If a coat is needed to complete the outfit, make it the straight hanging type equally as dressy as the suit.

A jabot, taffeta blouse, print blouse or dandy collar shirt will make the suit even more dressy. Matching taffeta hat and gloves or lingerie trim ones will add just the right touch.

Club Roundup

By Suzanne

The Hospers, Talented Iowa Musicians, Entertain at Congressional Club Tea

IT WAS an all-musical program by an all-musical family at the Congressional Club's tea yesterday. The artists came from Iowa on the invitation of Mrs. Karl Le Compte, wife of Representative Le Compte, of Iowa, just to give the Capital folk a sample of that State's singing.

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of Vice President Wallace, was on hand to greet the artists from back home. Staying long enough to say hello to everybody from the receiving line, Mrs. Wallace dashed off without having a cup of tea. "A pressing engagement," she said as she graciously excused herself. Other distinguished Iowa guests were Mrs. Florence Kerr, Mrs. Horace Towner, Mrs. Kathryn Macy Wilson, Mrs. William Ramseyer, Mrs. Tom Martin, Miss Marion Le Compte, the Rev. and Mrs. Ben Brashkamp.

The Hospers—Marian Edythe, soprano; Marian Hinds, mezzo soprano, and Birdinia Hill, accompanist, all of Iowa, are not the only talented members of their family. Their mother sings and teaches back in Iowa. Birdinia became a member of the playing, singing Hosper family through her marriage to Jack.

Last spring young Marian Edythe, soprano, made her musical debut in Chicago and is now continuing her studies in New York City.

Pouring at the informal tea following the recital were: Mrs. Fred Bradley, of Michigan; Mrs. William O. Burgin, North Carolina; Mrs. Thomas Ralph, California, and Mrs. Paul Kilday, of Texas. Mrs. John Taber, of New York, president of the Congressional, poured tea at Mrs. Le Compte's table that was especially arranged for the artists, Mrs. Wallace and other Iowans.

Back to the Books for Democratic Women

It's back to books for women of the Democratic Party. They'll do a bit of studying in the near future on international politics and international economics. Red penciled for intensive concentration is world geography. The purpose, according to Mrs. Charles W. Mrs. Carlton Duffus, chairman of the defense savings committee of the Federated Clubs of Washington, is guest speaker . . . The officers and the local board of Mary Washington Chapter meet with Mrs. Vinetta Wells Ranke to make final plans for the golden anniversary celebration of the chapter, which will be held at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening . . .

D. A. R. Chapter to Mark Golden Anniversary

ALTHOUGH Mrs. William H. Pouch, president general of the D. A. R., is in California and can't be present for the gala celebration of the golden anniversary of Mary Washington Chapter, Tuesday evening, 8 o'clock at the Washington Club, already she has sent her greetings and reprets.

Taking Mrs. Pouch's place at the head of the receiving line will be Mrs. Henry M. Robert, honorary president general; Mrs. Harry C. Oberholser, State regent, with Mrs. Howard Hodgkins, honorary vice president general; Miss Lillian Chenoweth, vice president general. Twelve charter members of the chapter and former regents will assist in receiving the guests. Miss Janet Richards, regent emeritus, and Mrs. W. H. O. McGehee, regent of the chapter, also will be in the receiving line.

During the evening there will be short reminiscences by charter members and Miss Richards will review the "Erly Days of the D. A. R." Maj. Charles Trowbridge Tittman will sing, accompanied at the piano by Dr. W. H. O. McGehee.

Monday's Calendar

MONDAY'S calendar is chock full of interesting events. Mrs. Clara Gebhard Snyder, chairman of the Home Economics Women in Business Department of the American Home Economics Association, who knows her X Y Z's as well as A B C's of "home economics" problems, will talk to the District HEWIB 6:30 p. m. at their dinner meeting at the A. A. U. W. clubhouse . . . Then Mrs. Harold Hertford will be hostess to the Junior Alliance at 2 p. m. . . . Message From President Opens Housing Conference

The "goal of a slumless America must be preserved," President Roosevelt declared yesterday in a message to the eleventh annual meeting of the National Public Housing Conference in the Washington Hotel which expressed regret that slum-clearance housing must be retarded substantially during the war.

Leifur Magnussen, member of the Board of Directors of the Washington Housing Association, asserted that some form of rationing of housing accommodations may ultimately be required in Washington to permit the Capital to cope with its rapidly expanding population.

Rationing, he explained to reporters, would be designed to bring about the utilization of all available living quarters not now offered for rent.

Hardships Reported

A prepared statement which provided the basis of discussion at the afternoon session pointed out that the defense housing program already had "lagged far behind demand."

"Failure to meet the needs of the defense workers has brought added hardships to these workers and their families; it has permitted rents to skyrocket, intensified overcrowding; it has kept many skilled workers from migrating to pivotal industrial centers; increased labor turnover to alarming proportions, upset the production timetable, imperiled the war program," the statement said.

Uncertainty about the reorganization of Federal housing agencies should be eliminated, excessive centralization should be avoided and the United States Housing Authority should be preserved to promote local cooperation, it stated.

Baird Snyder 3d, acting Federal Works Administrator, declared that defense housing should be built speedily, regardless of possible post-war effects.

President's Statement

President Roosevelt's message, which was addressed to Mrs. Mary K. Simkovitch, president of the conference, declared:

"Adequate housing is a morale builder and is essential to the speed and efficiency of our national defense work.

"The program of clearing slums and providing decent homes for the ill-housed of our Nation in the years before the war laid the foundation for the intensified housing effort necessary today," the President said.

"The job of clearing the slums, which your conference helped to begin, of necessity must be reduced substantially for the duration. With the scarcity of building materials we can now afford to build homes only in defense areas. But the goal of a slumless America must be preserved."

Monopoly of Tire Servicing Is Urged for Small Business

By the Associated Press

The House Small Business Committee yesterday recommended that independent dealers be given virtual monopoly in the sale and servicing of automobile tires during the war.

Chairman Patman (Democrat), of Texas, made public copies of a letter and resolution the committee sent President Roosevelt saying it was "deeply concerned over the drastic effects" of tire freezing and rationing orders.

Created to study the effects of the war program on small business generally, the committee recently heard independent tire dealers and servicers accuse the rubber industry of attempting to force the smaller operators out of business through company-controlled retail outlets.

The independents have charged company stores were being given preference in obtaining material for retreading and recapping tires and were under orders in some cases to operate on profits as low as 60 cents a year to take business away from independent stores.

Many retail outlets are taking advantage of "the present situation," the committee said, and are "for the first time showing any interest in tire rebuilding, and are buying up on a large scale the available supply of materials and machinery used in rebuilding tires."

The committee's resolution urged that:

Dealers whose principal business is not the sale of tires liquidate their stocks and discontinue the tire business, and that future rationing and allocation orders give preference to dealers whose principal business is and has been the sale and servicing of tires.

Tire rebuilding material be allocated only to dealers engaged principally in the sale and servicing of tires, and that servicing machinery be given only to independent dealers.

Bill to Increase General's Widow's Pension Vetoed

President Roosevelt vetoed yesterday a special bill to raise from $30 to $100 the monthly pension given the widow of Maj. Gen. Charles T. Menoher, who commanded the famous Rainbow Division in the first World War.

Such special legislation, the President said in a message to the House, had been discouraged in recent years because of a belief that "payments of this character should be on a uniform basis and without preferential treatment in a particular case."

Saying he regretted that he did not feel justified in approving the bill, Mr. Roosevelt added:

"In this particular case illness creates hardship but it is still not right to make an exception by a special bill because other widows of officers doubtless suffer from the same hardship."

Gen. Menoher, for his World War services, was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross.

Dairymen Ask Milk Price Boost

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Organized dairy farmers supplying Washington and environs yesterday asked more money for their milk and bluntly added that if they don't get it the Capital's needs probably won't be met.

The Department of Agriculture announced a public hearing on the petition for 9:30 a. m. Thursday in the South Building Auditorium.

The powerful Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association also requested that the Washington milk marketing area be extended deeper into Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, Maryland. This would increase producer and retail prices in those sections.

If the demanded prices are granted, Washingtonians can expect to pay at least one cent more per quart of milk and per half-pint of cream after May 1. Producers are asking increases of 46 cents a hundredweight (one cent a quart) on both Class 1 (fluid milk) and Class 2 (cream).

Penny Milk Boost Asked, Too

On class 1 milk used for the Federally subsidized programs which enable some 3000 needy Washington families to buy quarts for 5 cents and provide 30,000 half-pints daily to undernourished school children without cost, the organized dairymen are demanding an increase of $1.58 a hundreweight—more than 3 cents a quart.

On nonsubsidized milk and cream the 46-cent boost would apply on products handled by Maryland distributors who are not licensed to sell in the District, as well as to District handlers.

Last September the producers obtained from the Department of Agriculture a 40-cent per hundredweighn increase on fluid milk and a 20-cent rise on fluid cream. This order, however, is scheduled to be dropped automatically on May 1, unless Secretary Wickard continues it or grants the demand boosts. Or he may allow a compromise increase.

Increased Costs Cited

"Our farmers have successfully met the recent phenomenal demands for milk in this market, but unless a price increase is granted immediately it will be very doubtful if sufficient milk will be available to meet the anticipated demand," said B. B. Derrick, manager of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, in a formal statement.

Attempting to justify the second price rise in less than six months, he cited increased production costs, dearth of farm labor and other arguments advanced at the Agriculture Department's hearings last summer.

"It is inevitable," said Derrick, "that unless farmers get a higher price for milk, they will shift over to the production of crops and other livestock products that do not require so much labor and which are becoming much more profitable to produce.

Supply and Demand

"It is entirely a question of supply and demand. To make the supply keep up to the rapid pace of demand, it is inevitable that the necessary price incentive must be provided. Otherwise, there will not be enough milk."

Taking recognition of proposed Congressional legislation to open up the District market to fluid cream imported from the Midwest, Derrick claimed this would not solve the problem "because there is a shortage of whole milk rather than cream."

Prices Paid at Present

His statement mentioned only the 46-cent per hundredweight increase asked for commercially sold milk and cream, omitting reference to the $1.58 boost which would apply to milk distributed free or below cost to the needy and undernourished of Washington.

At present producers are getting $3.57 a hundred for Class 1 milk sold in the District and $3.11 for that handled by Maryland dairies. The cream schedule is $2.10 in the District, $1.67 in that part of Maryland included in the Washington marketing area, as defined by the Secretary of Agriculture. This $1.67 rate would be raised to $2.56, eliminating the differential that now exists on fluid cream.

In addition, the producers receive an average premium payment of 32 cents a hundredweight on both Classes 1 and 2, which is allowed for cattle and barn conditions.

Faust Just Another Wolf, But Margy Gets Our Bill

Bill Brinkley, Post reporter pinch-hitting for Ray C. Brown, went to last night's opera at the National Theater. He says he heard Gounod's "Faust." But . . . Well, here's his story.

Well, Boss, the way it is, this Faust greybeard is fed up with having been a bookworm all his life, so he asks the Devil to show him the town. The Devil, a gent by the name of Mephistopheles, (what a name for the Devil, eh, Boss?) says sure and O. K. and gives him a look at a blond-curly doll named Marguerite and asks how's that?

Faust says, boy, lead me to that Margy, and the Devil takes a pack of years off his life, gives him some new duds and away they go to meet the doll.

Well the trappings are just right, see, because the doll's brother a character named Valentine, is away to the wars and the only one to look after Margy is an old hag by the name of Martha, who never has much idea what the score is.

Also, this Faust turns out to be a fast worker and running into the doll in a crowd says—get this for a line, Boss—"Will you not permit me, my fairest demoiselle, to offer you my arm and clear for you the way?"

But this Margy wasn't born yesterday, so she gives him the brushoff.

This turns out to be the old lead-on, though, Boss, because pretty soon Margy gives it out that she would like to know this Faust guy.

But Faust doesn't know about this, so what do you think he does to win the doll over, Boss? Well, you guessed it—jewelry, featuring a pearl rope a yard long.

Well, of course, that hits the doll right between the eyes and soon they start giving each other the old mush, with all the time this heel Mephistopheles coaching them on.

Every time this guy Faust gets ready to give her the old smackaroo one of them does a tra-la-la on the mouth organ. All the time she keeps dampening her lips and pretty soon, sure enough, they clinch, and let me tell you it's worth waiting for.

Then Valentine gets back from the war and when he tries to do right by his sister gets rammed by old Faust, who isn't a pantywaist. And that's all of brother Jack.

Then all the bad things start happening fast, much to the delight of this rat Mephistopheles. Margy gets put in the jug. The guy Faust tries to get her to lam it but she says she's going the straight and narrow.

Margy, poor doll, kicks the bucket. This rat Mephistopheles is shouting happy all over at the evil he's brought.

But right then a chorus of voices is heard from above, Boss, and that makes old Mephistopheles get his and he crouches away like the rat he is.

This Margy is really some doll, Boss—a whole pack of angels come to carry her away to be with them and Boss, I told the girl beside me to shut up, I wasn't either crying, what did she think I was anyhow?

Editor's Note—The performance was by the San Carlo Opera Co. conducted by Carlo Peroni.

Bangs Named Police Boys Club President

H. Clifford Bangs, former president of the Washington Real Estate Board, was elected president of the Metropolitan Police Boys Club last night.

Earlier, the first report luncheon in the current campaign to raise $100,000 for the clubs heard that $22,000 had been subscribed.

Bangs succeeds Morris Cafritz, who served two terms as president. Others elected by the board of directors, meeting at the Ambassador Hotel, included:

Dr. Malcolm G. Gibbs, first vice president; Raymond F. Garrity, second vice president; L. Gordon Leech, secretary; Robert V. Fleming, treasurer; I. J. Roberts, assistant treasurer; James A. Councilor, comptroller; Edna H. Nick, assistant comptroller; Max Farrington, executive secretary, and Forrest L. Binswanger, director.

Ralph L. Goldsmith was elected to the board for a three-year term and 16 directors whose terms expire this year were reelected.

Campaign workers met at the National Press Club to hear reports on the campaign's progress.

Representative Katharine E. Byron (Democrat), of Maryland, herself the mother of five boys, declared in a talk: "Even though we are now thinking in terms of defense of our country, I know that the citizens will not forget that the work you are carrying on must continue."

Goldsmith, chairman of the campaign committee, presided. He urged workers to intensify their efforts so that the 17,000 boys here who derive benefit from the five clubs and summer camp may continue to do so.

$398,803 For D.C. Wins House Nod

A $398,803 deficiency appropriation fund for the District government, carrying $106,000 in improvements for the Home for the Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains, was tentatively approved by the House yesterday.

The final vote on the first 1942 deficiency appropriation bill, in which the amount for the District is included, is expected Monday. No objection was raised on the floor of the House yesterday when the District items were read.

As approved by the Appropriations Committee the measure reduced $160,633 from the budget estimates.

Some Items Cut

Cut at the suggestion of the Commissioners, according to the report, were items of the electrical department, the purchasing division, the local office of civilian defense and school building equipment totaling $88,085.

An estimate of $36,000 to supplement previous appropriations for the construction and equipment of a new receiving home for children also was eliminated because the committee did not believe priorities in building materials could be obtained, it was said.

Provision is made for salaries and equipment for 95 additional members of the Metropolitan Police force and for six more members of the Park Police under terms of the measure.

Although estimates requested a total of $127,468 for the Home for the Aged and Infirm, the committee reduced it to $106,000.

49 Employes Would Be Added

The estimates for the home contemplate the addition of 49 employes for a period of six months and additional food, bedding, clothing and equipment. The new employes will include three nurses, 16 hospital attendants, 3 dormitory supervisors, 2 night watchmen, 10 ward and dining room attendants and 1 mechanic.

The addition would raise the total staff at Blue Plains to 106. More sanitary and additional plumbing, new kitchen equipment, installation of a fire alarm system and general repair work would be enabled by the appropriation.

Need of improvements at Blue Plains was brought to public attention following an investigation

Reckord Urges Civil Riflemen As Guards

The National Defense program has overlooked a means close at hand to assist the war effort by not replacing soldier guards of strategic war production plants with members of civilian rifle clubs, Brig. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commander of the Third Corps Area, said last night.

Speaking at the seventy-first annual banquet of the National Rifle Association, Reckord said that he would support the establishment of interior defense units in the Third Corps Area made up entirely of expert civilian marksmen which would relieve the Regular Army of a vital and necessary function.

Gen. Reckord stated that he would ask the cooperation of the Governors of Maryland, Pennsylvania and Virginia and the District Commissioners to assist in the formation of those civilian defense units whose duty it would be "to see to it that the critical installations, critical from the point of national defense, are properly protected."

Brig. Gen. G. N. Barnes, Ordnance Division, the other guest speaker at the dinner, outlined the progress that the Ordnance Division had made with private industries in stepping up war production through the use of educational orders.

In the afternoon session of the conference the following officers for the coming year were elected: Hillard Comstock, Santa Rosa, Calif., president; Gen. Reckord, executive vice president; C. B. Lester, of Washington, secretary treasurer.

The principal resolution that issued from the conference yesterday was the offer of the National Rifle Association member clubs to act as firearms training agents for the auxiliary police on a Nation-wide basis.

Girl, 4, Suffers Skull Fracture In Fall From Car

A 4-year-old girl is in a serious condition at Georgetown Hospital with a skull fracture suffered when she fell from an automobile taking her to her home from the Chevy Chase Country Day School.

Peggy Ann Reeves, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Reeves, 4125 Harrison Street Northwest, fell from the machine on Wisconsin Avenue near Stanford Street, Bethesda, and was removed to the hospital by the Bethesda rescue squad. Police are investigating to determine how she came to fall from the car.

Views Differ On Liquor Ad Price Ban

A special Senate District subcommittee will continue hearings at 10:30 a. m. today on a House-passed bill which would forbid issuance of liquor licenses to stores within 600 feet of churches, schools and other public institutions and prohibit advertising of retail liquor prices in the District.

Testimony on the bill was opened yesterday with a statement by Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, appearing as a witness, to the effect that enactment of the measure would create "an intolerable liquor monopoly" in Washington.

"I'm opposed to this legislation because it will inevitably increase prices and thereby increase bootlegging," he said. "If a consumer is prohibited from reading in his newspaper local prices on nationally known beverages he has lost a right belonging to him.

"I don't know who's responsible for this bill, but it looks to me as if it was fostered by one of the larger liquor dealers who wants to raise the price."

Commissioners Opposed

Questions by Senator Hughes (Democrat), of Delaware, the subcommittee chairman, and Senators Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, and Capper (Republican), of Kansas, failed to reveal the source of the bill which was introduced in the House by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana.

Vernon West, assistant corporation counsel, told the subcommittee that the Commissioners are opposed to the bill.

Under present law, which prohibits licensing of dispensaries within 400 feet of public institutions, there exists sufficient power to prohibit the issuance of licenses, he said.

"The bill creates a monopoly for the owner of the property on which a liquor store is already located," he said. "It would be a monopoly which lasts forever, keeping the property at an unnecessarily high value."

F. Joseph Donohue, appearing as counsel for Milton Kronheim, wholesale liquor dealer, and the beverage industry committee, a group of wholesale and retail liquor dealers, spoke in favor of the bill.

Says Monopoly Exists

"The monopoly is here in Washington now," he said. "Although there are 392 'package' stores in the District now, a large volume of the business is being done by a few stores which monopolize the field because they can afford to advertise."

"What is Kronheim's interest in this matter?" Senator Clark asked.

"The wholesalers would rather have the largest number of retail dealers in good financial conditions," Donohue replied, explaining that the bill would help the small retail dealer.

S. Milton Simpson, representing the corporation constructing the Statler Hotel at Sixteenth and K Streets Northwest, asked that some exception be made in the bill in the case of hotels on which construction was started with observance of existing liquor laws. If new hotels, such as the Statler, constructed within 600 feet of public institutions were unable to serve liquor they could not compete with hotels already in operation, he said.

Letters Favor Bill

Others besides Donohue testifying in favor of the bill included Mrs. Ernest Howard, representing the District Federation of Women's Clubs, and George W. Potter, president of the Petworth Citizens Association.

Letters favoring the measure were read from Representative Eberharter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania; Senators Gurney (Republican), of South Dakota, and Glass (Democrat), of Virginia, and Mrs. P. C. Ellett, of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Appearing in opposition to the bill were Manuel J. Davis, an attorney for the Sam April Liquor Store; George A. Warren, of the Mid-City Citizens Association; Grover Aderholdt, former president of the National Association Opposed to Blue Laws, and Charles J. Columbus, secretary of the Advertising Club of Washington.

U. S. to Pay 2-3 of 4 D. C. Highways

Federal funds will pay for two-thirds of four major highway developments planned for Washington within the next few months, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, announced yesterday.

About $6,005,000 is involved in the proposed projects, Whitehurst estimated. His announcement was made at a meeting of the highways committee of the Board of Trade in the Harrington Hotel.

The committee previously had urged that the Federal Government stand a share of the improvement costs "because this extensive alteration work is necessary as a direct result of the new Federal construction outside the District."

Projects slated for partial Federal financing are:

The grade separation at Fourteenth Street and Maine Avenue Southwest—$2,300,000.

Extension of Independence Avenue west of Fourteenth Street to the Lincoln Memorial—$1,100,000.

Widening of Twenty-third Street Northwest from the Lincoln Memorial to Washington Circle and further developments of Twenty-second and Twenty-third Streets to Massachusetts Avenue Northwest—$405,000.

The K Street elevated highway from the overpass at Rock Creek Park to Key Bridge—$2,200,000.

The four projects were included in Whitehurst's 44-million-dollar highway planning survey completed last year. Preliminary work on all is now under way.

Whitehurst said the financing would be divided between the regular Federal-aid fund for highway improvements; the District's so-called "matching-fund" and the special defense "access roads" appropriation for various communities throughout the country.

It is hoped by District officials, said Whitehurst, that the four projects will be completed by December. He added that work will soon begin—also with Federal-aid payments—on the proposed new South Capitol Street Bridge

Legion Posts Plan Blood Bank Parties

Two American Legion posts simultaneously became the first in the District Department yesterday to reveal plans for Children's Hospital Blood Bank benefit parties.

Kenneth H. Nash Post and Auxiliary Unit No. 8 will hold a party Monday night at its clubhouse, 209 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, with all proceeds going into the hospital fund. E. W. Luther is post commander. Mrs. Lucille Cuney is auxiliary president and Vice Commander Everett Totten is chairman on arrangements.

Lincoln Post and Auxiliary Unit No. 17 announced that financial returns from its annual Lincoln's Birthday dinner on Thursday night will go into the blood bank fund. The program will be at the department clubhouse, 2437 Fifteenth Street Northwest.

John D. Germer is post commander and Mrs. Frieda Pratt is unit president.

Child welfare chairmen of the various American Legion posts and auxiliaries will meet at the Fifteenth Street clubhouse Tuesday night to coordinate plans for blood bank benefits which will be held in February and March. The meeting was called yesterday by Porter Bush and Mrs. Katherine Mills, child welfare chairmen for the American Legion's District Department.

The Legion, Washington Bridge League and The Washington Post are joint sponsors of the fourth annual campaign for maintenance of the Blood, Serum and Plasma Bank at Children's Hospital. As in previous years, funds will be raised by the staging of benefit card parties, dances and other events.

Individuals, as well as social and fraternal organizations, are invited to participate in the campaign.

'All Through the Night' Gives Hoodlum a Break

New Picture at Earle Places the Flag In New Hands and Waves It Violently; Stage Revue Is Brief, but Bounteous

"ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Leonard Q. Ross and Leonard Spigelgass, adapted to the screen by Leonard Spigelgass and Edwin Gilbert, featuring Humphrey Bogart, Conrad Veidt and Kaaren Verne, with Jane Darwell, Frank McHugh, Jackie C. Gleason, Judith Anderson, Peter Lorre, Barton MacLane, William Demarest, Martin Kosleck, Hans Schumm, Ludwig Stossel, Irene Seidner, Jean Ames, Ben Welden, Sam McDaniel, James Burke, Phil Silvers, Wally Ford, Edward Brophy, Charles Cane and Frank Sully. Directed by Vincent Sherman. At the Earle Theater.

HERE IS A NUMBER that packs enough concentrated action and explosive excitement to blast the casual customer right out of his pew! In essence, it is the old cops-and-robbers story made familiar in a long procession of what used to be known as "gangster pictures," but all of melodrama's old hair-curlers and spine-prodders have been reconditioned into instruments of vivid entertainment that look almost like new.

Furthermore, in its use of these freshly serviced implements "All Through the Night" effects a complete metamorphosis in the character of the racketeer and demonstrates with enormous timeliness how many cuts above the top men in the Nazi spy system the American hoodlum really is. For the first time in his life, the gangster emerges as a hero. And what a hero!

The whole hectic business begins normally enough with a murder. Not a justifiable homicide, but one of those nasty killings that seems to have been done just for the fun of the thing "by a person or persons unknown." Gloves Donahue, a former tough guy now supporting his mother by the comparatively honorable devices of crooked gambling—he doesn't rub them out any more—is making a personal investigation of the crime that has removed the old baker friend of the family, when a beautiful girl appears on the scene and leaves the impression that she knows too much about what has happened. Gloves and his henchman trail her to the hot spot of a rival mob, where she sings pretty songs like "All Through the Night." Everything is according to the carbon paper up to now. It is only when the gal turns out to be one of the unwilling "fronts" of a crowd of fifth columnists—"Fivers" to you—operating as art connoisseurs over on the East Side, that the pattern takes on new outlines. From this point out it becomes a paean of patriotism and a saga of sublimated sacrifice of petty antagonisms to the common cause of sabotaging the saboteurs. When Gloves and Marty Callahan mobilize their henchmen to gang up on the Nazis, it is something to warm the heart—but toward the mobsters, mind you.

What with all its barricaded warehouses, killings, abductions, chases, miraculous escapes, underword strategy and whatever, "All Through the Night" is pretty strong meat and much of it is exceedingly hard to swallow, but, by and large, it is one whale of a melodrama that places a high premium on fundamental virtues and pays a heavy dividend in rip-snorting entertainment. Except for purposes of his eventual triumph, Gloves Donahue wouldn't have lived five minutes after he passed the door of that fifth columnist warehouse the first time and the mysterious night club gal wouldn't have survived that long to help him on his way to a solution of all those sudden and violent deaths—but who cares? It is worth a slight stretch of the credulity to discover in what manner least expected sources might contribute to the overthrow of a sinister and subtle enemy. And besides that it affords a ne plus ultra cast as invigorating a workout as it does the audience.

Accent on a New Syllable for a Change

Humphrey Bogart, as Gloves Donahue, earns the unaccustomed reward of admiration after his long career as one of the most contemptible and distinguished rats on the screen. His partially reformed racketeer, for once, has virtue on his side and Mr. Bogart makes it appear a finely admirable thing to be tough enough to make the most of it. Kaaren Verne, in the role of the persecuted hostage-spy, Leda Hamilton, deepens the impression of great charm and notable ability created in less fruitful roles in lesser pictures, and Conrad Veidt, the chief of the enemy agents, is perfect in a pernicious part. William Demarest, Frank McHugh and Barton MacLane are potent on Mr. Bogart's side and Peter Lorre and Judith Anderson are quite as efficient in their support of Mr. Veidt. Jane Darwell, Wally Ford, Ed Brophy, Phil Silvers and a long list of others aid immensely in the over-all effect and keep the goings-on nicely leavened with a constant flow of comedy.

Hary Anger's new stage revue at the Earle is not long, but it is extravagantly likable. Diane Davis gets the curtains apart with a fine singing of Irving Berlin's "Angels of Mercy"—dedicated to the Red Cross—with the assistance of two pianos and full orchestra on stage. The Maxellos, all five of them—three men and two girls—take over with one of the best of the acrobatic turns and Harris, Claire and Shannon, follow with their superlative exposition of what one man might do with two dancing partners on a ballroom floor. Al Gordon and "His Racketeers" still present one of the most engaging of the dog acts, a little different from any of the others. The Roxyettes are at their best in a series of gorgeously costumed—and uncostumed—routines. The newsreel's first release of bona fide pictures of the raid on Pearl Harbor, Gen. MacArthur and his army on the battle-front on Bataan Peninsula and the United States Navy at the Marshall and Gilbert Islands lends a final mighty wallop to a consistently high-power bill.

On the Right Side, After All!

KAAREN VERNE

the charming young European actress, who appears in the leading feminine role opposite Humphrey Bogart in the Warner Brothers production of "All Through the Night," now on the screen at the Earle Theater. Conrad Veidt, Frank McHugh, William Demarest, Jane Darwell and Judith Anderson are among the many others importantly cast in this exciting picture of espionage and gangster counter-espionage on New York's East Side

HEDDA HOPPER

Marjorie Main's Mail

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 6.—Marjorie Main gave up her sunning at Palm Springs, came back to town to go into "Jackass Mail," with Wally Beery. Now, Wally's being looked over to find a remedy for his neuritis. Some teeth have to be extracted, so picture is postponed. In the meantime, Marjorie goes into "Once Upon a Thursday," whatever that means.

CLARK GABLE

She told me she had a letter from Olive Tinder, who works for N. B. C. in Indianapolis. She was with Carole Lombard during most of her stay back there, and writes: "I was with Carole until 1 a. m. the morning she left, and we listened to the playback of her radio speech together. She was so pleased. It was unrehearsed and she hadn't known how it was going to turn out. The people of the town are so grief-stricken they feel as though a steam roller had gone over them. . . . It all seems like such needless waste. And Indianapolis, because they asked her to come on, feels guilty."

And speaking of Carole reminds me of stories going on about Clark, who, without a doubt, has the sympathy of every living being. Some say he'll never do another picture, that he'll retire from the screen. It's all pure conjecture. Nobody knows what Clark will do, not even Clark. But I can tell you this from one who's worked all her life: the only salvation from sorrow is work. And Clark's a worker—always has been, always will be. I wouldn't be surprised to have him turn up any day at Metro, and say, "Come on boys, let's finish the picture," and when it's through, ask for three or four months off, get together a bunch of his friends, some fine sketches, and tour the Army camps and entertain the boys. But whatever he does will be all right with the American people. Because there is a swell guy.

I sat the other night with a group of picture people who were discussing Gene Tierney. It was their unanimous opinion that even though she was in thre of the ten worst pictures of the year (picked by the New York critics), she'll go farther than any of our youngsters in the next year. She has that quality—call it sex appeal, personality, warmth, anything you will.

John Houseman, who left Orson Welles to be David Selznick's assistant, is now in Washington with a terrific Government job. He's in the radio division.

When Paul Henreid went back East for personal appearances with "Joan of Paris," the eagle eye of Arthur Hopkins lit upon him. Now Arthur wants him for the lead in an Ibsen play. Warners would also like to borrow him.

Don't be surprised if, when John Gunther comes here for a lecture, Bubbles Schinasi turns up in Hollywood at the same time . . . Yes, it happens all the time—them that has gits. Mrs. Ruby Schinasi, Bubble's ma, helped back the play "Let's Face It," which has turned out to be one of the hits of the year.

Now that the Doug Fairbanks, jr., have taken an enormous house in Washington, D. C., and Mrs. has one in Virginia, they'd like to sell their home here . . . Liz Whitney may be heading this way soon to try and sell her place here, too. She's really turned farmer and is trying to make her 3000 acre place in Virginia into a paying farm. She's got sheep, cattle, hogs, horses—AND a new romance.

Ran into Walter Huston, as he was huddled over a sandwich and cup of coffee at a drugstore fountain near Warners. With a huge ranch up north and a mansion in the mountains, he's living in one room in a hotel. Said he: "It took me 50 years to learn just how little it takes to make one happy."

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Back to Firing Line!

Hollywood, Feb. 6 (INS).—Boy Wonder Norman Krasna, who was kicked out of the Warner publicity department when he submitted a play, "Louder Please," is returning—but not to the publicity department. Norman has a nice fat contract personally signed by Jack Warner which nominates him as a writer and director. His first picture is "Princess O'Rourke" and the deal was made by Charles Feldman.

CARY GRANT

The story of Krasna and the Warner P. A. is one of Hollywood's classics. It seems Norman had written the play and mentioned it to Hubert Voight, who was then in charge of the publicity office. Either Voight or someone else became angered and fired Norman, according to the story. So he took his play to New York and put it on the stage, where it was a great success, and the columnists never cease kidding about the kick that landed Krasna fame and fortune.

Milton Howell, tennis pro, today has a check for $30,000 in his pocket and the happy knowledge that his story, "Bundles for Freedom," will be Cary Grant's next for R. K. O.

Howell went to M.-G.-M. to sell his script. Charlie Lederer loaned him $10 and gave Howell's story to an M.-G.-M. producer to read. In the meantime, Howell met Cary, with whom he had played tennis, and said, "I saw you in 'Suspicion' and liked you—for the first time." Cary laughed. Then Howell said, "I have written a story which would be good for you—a romantic gangster yarn." Cary agreed to read it—and liked it so well he asked R. K. O. to buy it. Never rains but it pours—for M.-G.-M. studio a day later tried to buy it for Clark Gable.

I, for one, am glad that William Powell is returning to drama, because as good as "The Thin Man" pictures are, they are wearing a little thin. Bill used to be one of the most romantic and adventurous gents on the screen before he got in a rut of shaking cocktails and sleuthing. This all leads up to the news that Bill will co-star with Hedy Lamarr in "Cross Roads," a yarn about a French diplomat accused of being an imposter. Hedy Lamarr plays his wife and the picture starts rolling in less than a week with Edwin Knopf producing. We just had Hedy in "Forever," the Mildred Cram story, but a switch in production plans puts "Cross Roads" ahead.

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Glossary

New York, Feb. 6.

CALM: A lady entered a room at the Waldorf-Astoria and saw Leon Henderson sitting on a chair, reading a manuscript. "You're Mr. Henderson?" she asked. The Price Administrator nodded . . . "What are you doing?" she asked him . . . "I'm going to make a speech before the National Association of Manufacturers," Henderson replied. "I'm a few minutes early" (one of the banquet officials had led him here, to wait) . . . "Tell me, frankly, Mr. Henderson," the lady continued. "Are you nervous before making a speech?" . . . "Me, nervous?" laughed Henderson. "Not a bit, I'm never nervous" . . . "In that case," reminded the lady, "what're you doing here—in the Ladies' Room?"

TALLULAH BANKHEAD

DEFEAT: Louis "Lepke" Buchalter, the nation's most noterious convict, has applied to the courts for permission to leave his place of detention, under guard, for a few days. A member of his family is near death, and Lepke is anxious to make one last visit with that relative . . . His application, however, was refused.

ENTERPRISE: Leo Lania, the Austrian writer who escaped from a concentration camp and walked from Brittany to Marseilles, has suffered an unusual series of professional setbacks . . . Lania had contracted to write a book about the Soviet-Manchuria border. He went to Russia, but found the region barred to all visitors. He returned to London, where his publisher agreed to accept in substitution a novel which was finished in Paris on the day before the war began—when he was arrested. The manuscript was confiscated. After his escape, Lania wrote "The Darkest Hour," and sent a carbon to London—by a vessel which was sunk. He then sent a copy of the galley proofs—which was destroyed by bombs . . . Lania now has played it safe. In New York he's written a new book, whose facts are accessible and won't be lost—his biography.

SUCCESS: Henry Youngman rushed into Lindy's the other night and exhibited a lump of sugar. "Yoo lucky guy. How'd you get it?" he was asked . . . "Oh, it was easy," Youngman shrugged. "I just went outside, put a saddle on my back—and someone slipped it to me."

CHATTER: Donald M. Nelson, the busiest man in America, works day and night in Washington, but has no servant . . . The March of Time's radio series will be switched to Friday night at 9:30, starting February 13 . . . Leon Keyserling, now acting Administrator of the United States Housing Authority, is expected to get the job vacated by Nathan Straus . . . Tallulah Bankhead started her new radio series last night. At noon yesterday the producers couldn't get two supporting actors for that 11½-minute program. "Let me try," said Tallulah. Within a few minutes she returned with George Coulouris, featured player in "Watch on the Rhine," and Vincent Price, star of "Angel Street."

DRAFT: Romo Vincent, the 290-pound entertainer, now is headlining the new show at La Martinique. Romo, who is more than 100 pounds overweight, has been classified 4-F by his Selective Service Board . . . "4-F," he explains, "means that after they start taking women, I go" . . . Vincent then was reminded that the physically unfit are being reclassified. "Then I'll be reclassified into 6-V," he assured . . . "6-V"? Romo was asked. "I've heard of 1-H and 3-A, and 4-F, but never of 6-V. Is that a new class?" . . . "Yes," he answered, "for cowards."

CURFEW: At Leon & Eddie's Sunday night a group of young showgirls were at a ringside table as guests of a Broadway star and the lady he was escorting. When the orchestra played "Lights Out" at 4 a. m., the young showgirls yawned and announced, wearily: "We're going home to sleep. We've had enough. It's time to quit" . . . "Okay," agreed the Broadway star—Ole Olsen of Olsen & Johnson . . . "We can't quit now. The night's young," the lady at his side protested. "Let's find some more places to go" . . . She was Mrs. Olsen—his 77-year-old mother.

Metropolitan

With the annual "Oscar" award by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences fast approaching, Gary Cooper's "Sergeant York" comes further to the fore as a favorite in the race. The film is continuing its downtown run at the Metropolitan.

While naturally "Sergeant York's" story reaches its climax in the trenches of World War I, most of this compeling biography takes place in the hills of Tennessee, tracing the growth of a hot-blooded chap into a young man who recognizes man's responsibility toward his fellows. It's not stuffy preaching; it's more matter of fact story-telling that engrosses with honest simplicity.

Casting of "Sergeant York's" other roles is well up to the memorable standard set by Cooper in the lead. Walter Brennan and Margaret Wycherley are particularly outstanding as York's ministerial pal and his mother. Joan Leslie makes a promising impression as Miss Gracie, the girl who was to become Mrs. York.

Also on the Metropolitan screen are the newsreels recording the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Orioles Beat Eagles in Riotous Game, 5-4

This Morning

Without Shirley Povich

(While Shirley Povich is on vacation various members of The Post Sports Department will write his column.)

By Clarence Nixon

Joe DiMaggio is worth $50,000 a year of any ball club's money, probably more. There's not a person who knows the difference between a hot dog and a baseball bat who will argue that point. And we think the Yankee ball club should kick in with his demand for 50 G's.

NIXON

But if Joe DiMaggio is as smart as we think he is, the big Yankee slugger will not take a raise. No, sir, he'll be smart and set what will be a precedent in baseball. He'll hold-out for his 50 G's, all right, and the Yankee bigwigs will meet his demands and when it's all over there'll be big headlines in all the papers telling about what a great guy this DiMaggio is and all that.

It will be very simple, but very painful, at first, for the Yankee club, but later Joe's bosses will thank him for his great deed. And that deed will be this:

When DiMaggio and the Yankees get together for their salary battle, Joe will announce, "Gentlemen, I don't want you to pay me $50,000 for this season's work, I want you to take the additional $10,000 I am demanding and donate it to the Army-Navy Relief Fund or the American Red Cross. If you will agree to do that I will give you one of the best years of my career. Gentlemen, it's up to you."

And when the Yankee financial wizards recover from the blow, there'll be a rush of contract signing. It will put the Yankee club squarely on the spot.

If there's a patriotic bone in DiMaggio's head, and we have every reason to believe there is, Joe will put his contract up to the Yankee owners in that manner. And Mr. Ed Barrow will have to agree.

Boxing Its Own Worst Enemy

Our Tony Neri is still wondering what is wrong with the fight racket in Washington. It's just that: A Racket. And the sooner the boxing commission comes out of its nice, warm shell and rids the town of the disturbing elements the boxing game in the District will continue to be a racket.

Washington fans, like those anywhere else, like a good fight and will turn out for a fair scrap between two good boys, but as long as those responsible for the "turkeys" they have been serving the customers are permitted to run things fistic here, we'll wait a long time for anything resembling a real fight.

There are a few persons mixed up in the game here who strive to give the public what it should have in the way of fights, but they are so far outnumbered by those who think only of themselves and who are more interested in the dollar sign than in what the public gets, that the honest guys who would give the public a break might as well be in some other place.

Until the boxing commission cracks down and the persons responsible for the existing condition of the game in Washington realize they can't palm off ham fights on the public, the cash customers will continue to find other ways of spending their money and time. Of course there will always be the faithful few who will turn out for a "turkey" as quickly as they will for a real fight. But they just don't know any better.

Everything Happens to 'Catfish'

Just what the war is doing to the peace and happiness of the American people is reflected in a letter from our favorite fishing companion down South, "Catfish" Campbell, one of the best guys to ever wet a hook. Here's what "Catfish" writes:

Dear Nick:

Since you last heard from me, everything's happened to me. No it's not the shortage of tires. It's not that old setter that worried me so much. He's dead. It's about our favorite fishinghole.

No it's not dried up. It's still full of water and the fish are still in there like always. But it just ain't the same lake. Not since those guv'ment guys got through with it.

You remember how we used to get up before day and pack everything in the boat and head for our favorite spots? Well I can't do that any more. Not since those guv'ment men visited here. The lake's plumb ruined.

Instead of getting in the boat and setting that outboard motor you brought me and sleeping until I get to the exact spot to cach fish, I have to guide that thing as careful as those guys who pilot them big airliners. And it's all on account of them engineer fellows.

One day they came up the lake from down by the store landing. It seems they were headed up to the top of the lake. Just when they got in front of my place there was a big crash. You know what happened. They had run into that rut in the water we used to set the boat in to guide it across the lake. Well, that's not the worst of it. They was swimming ashore after the crash and fell into a couple more. They got gosh awful mad and sent a crew of men up to fill up the holes. Now that was alright, but they filled them too full and now everytime you start anywhere's on the lake you have to jump the boat over a flock of ridges. Let me know when to expect you. "CATFISH."

RE: WILSON, EARL, REPUB., INDIANA, 77TH CONG.

New York, Feb. 6.—Have a care there, Wilson, Earl, Repub., Indiana, 77th Cong.! Just because you are a Congressman and Congress rules the inmates of Washington, D. C., through political stooges called District Commissioners, don't think you can tell the Government girls when to go to bed, and don't think you can make Government clerk stop playing the horses.

CONSIDINE

You may have been the principal of a 2x4 Hoosier high school, Wilson, my man, but there are a lot of things you don't know. Especially about Washington, to which you brought your corny reform wave in November of 1940. It was a pretty old city by November of 1940, Wilson. It had been through a lot since the day the Continental Congress fled there to escape ancestors of the D. A. R. who at gun point demanded bonuses for beating Cornwallis. The city might have seemed like a wicked boom town to you by the time you got there, but its primary instincts haven't changed much since the Civil War.

Take this humble advice from one of the few natives of the sleepy Southern town which became the capital of the world:

Neither you, nor President Roosevelt himself, will ever make its hardy transients go to bed early enough to enable them to report to their Government offices the next morning in tip-top shape.

Neither you, nor Mr. Roosevelt himself (the President would never think of trying it!) will ever exterminate horse-playing in Government offices.

So This Is Washington in Springtime

You see, buddy, there isn't enough to do in Washington for the thousands of boys and girls (mostly girls) who are pouring into the Capital from all parts of the country to typewrite World War II into submission. Relaxation is hard to find. The baseball club provides only negative thrills: The sight of the home team losing 21-1 to the Yankees; the football Redskins play only a few games there; the best college football team, Georgetown, wouldn't think of playing one of its better opponents there. Washington night clubs and talent, with scant exception, are so crummy that they repel even persons who, until they went to Washington, thought a juke box was the last word in Chi-Chi. Waiters still snatch drinks out of your paw at 15 minutes before midnight on Saturday nights.

The town's countless old maids, and a lot of young ones, have found that no matter how many times they go to the Lincoln Memorial they don't meet Senator Jimmy Stewart and no matter how many times they picnic in Rock Creek Park they aren't saved from falling in the crik by a Brazilian charge d'affaires.

There are no beaches, few gyms, no big-league fighting, hockey, basketball, few tennis courts, few golf courses the clerks can afford. What's left, Wilson, except a few get-togethers at night in airless rooming houses, and a hot tip on the fifth at Bowie?

There are more horseplayers, per square foot, in Government offices than anywhere else in the country. Clerks, stenogs and petty officials who never bet a buck on a nag in their home towns learn to bet in Washington.

There are enough Government offices in Washington to fill 13 Empire State Buildings, and there's a bookie's man for every floor or big section.

And Here Is Walter Haight Again

We know. As a messenger boy in the Public Health Service and the Census Bureau we used to run bets. In the State Department the horse business was attended to by veteran and usually very pious old colored messengers. One was a minister in Washington Harlem, U Street, on Sundays. He filed his tip sheets in the well-thumbed Bible that rested on his desk in the gloomy State Department corridors, during those old, quiet days.

Walter Haight, the distinguished horse expert for The Washington Post, got his early turf training while running bets when he worked as a messenger in the Department of Agriculture. Once there was a tip so hot and furious around the department that Haight had $312

2416 Fans See Rowdy Ice Contest

Teams End Up With 3 Players Apiece; Courteau, Lessard Of Locals, Involved

By Jack Munhall

The Washington Eagles did not distinguish themselves last night as they lost to the Baltimore Orioles, who still have a slim chance to beat out the locals for a playoff berth. The score was 5 to 4. And also there was the usual fight between the intercity boys.

In fact, it was just about the roughest looking brawl that Riverside Stadium and the 2416 customers have seen. It resulted in both teams playing the last few minutes with only three men apiece, for Baltimore had lost three and Washington two men by penalties.

Courteau in a Melee

The quintet of pugilists who drew five minutes each for slugging one another were Art Lessard and Paul Courteau, of Washington, and Otis Skinner, Mayer Flett and Fraser Bowman, of Baltimore. Flett was squared off with Lessard and from the looks of his face as he entered the penalty box he didn't win the argument. Blood poured out from at least three cuts in his forehead and nose, while two ugly gaps appeared where two lower teeth had been before.

Courteau, a little more ambitious than usual, was battling with several Orioles instead of just one. It was hard to tell just how many because for fully two or three minutes you couldn't even see Courteau. He was on the bottom of a squirming entanglement of arms and legs.

All this happened fairly late in the third period at a time when the Orioles, overcoming an early 0-1 deficit, were leading 4-2, thanks to some very sloppy hockey by our Eagles, who did little to inspire the admiration of the fans.

Easy Shots Missed

Before and after the fight the Eagles missed enough easy shots to have won by five or even ten points. After a while their shooting efforts became really ludicrous, with Kenny Ullyot missing a Baltimore net that was as bare as a new born babe. Goalie Roy Roche, who, incidentally, turned in a fine performance, was absent at the time. He was lying on his face from stopping a previous Washington scoring attempt.

The Eagles were in there trying, however, and they made a late rally. Much too late, though, since their final goal, by McLenahan, came just four seconds from the finish.

Gallaudet Five Beaten, 52-47, By Catholic U.

Catholic University went above the .500 mark in the Mason-Dixon Conference standings last night by turning back its cross-town rivals, Gallaudet, 52-47, on the C. U. floor. The winners have now won six and lost five in conference games.

Gallaudet, hampered in the fourth quarter with the loss of three men via the personal foul route, was behind at halftime, 29-21. Capt. Mike Cherello, who scored 11 points for C. U., also played a polished floor game. Freddie Rice and Dick Scanlon were high-point men for the winners with 15 apiece.

Padden, Weingold, and Ludovico, who tallied 13 points, left the Gallaudet line-up in the last period on fouls.

Alsab and Challedon In '42 Debuts Today

Former Is Top Entry in Bahamas at Hialeah; Maryland Horse Runs in Secondary Feature

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Feb. 6.—The much-talked about Alsab, top-weighted at 128 pounds and at one time considered a doubtful starter because of the heavy impost, will spring through the starting gate at Hialeah Park tomorrow in his debut as a 3-year-old.

Opposing Al Sabath's fleet colt in the 7-furlong $5000 Bahamas Stakes, inaugural 3-year-old classic of 1942 and an early Kentucky Derby preview, will be his arch rival, B. F. Whitaker's Requested, and 12 other proven performers.

It's a red-letter day of racing for Hialeah, marked also by the Florida debut of the great Challedon in a $1500 second feature, and another $1500 event headed by John Hay Whitney's ace, Gramps, opposed by formidable campaigners.

The 128 pounds Alsab will pack are 2 more than the standard for 3-year-olds in February. Sabath at first was unwilling to run his rags-to-riches colt under that weight. He relented, however, with the statement he did not want "to disappoint the public which has come to admire this grand colt just as we do."

War Relic Entered

Challedon will meet tough competition in his appearance, which will provide a tune-up not only for W. L. Brann's horse but also for Samuel D. Riddle's War Relic and Woodvale Farms' Our Boots. All are pointing for the $50,000 Widener

Colleges Solve Attendance Riddle —Free Admission

By International News Service

Conway, Ark., Feb. 6.—In the past when Hendrix College and Arkansas Teachers College played basketball, often there were more players on the court than there were spectators in the audience.

Seldom were there enough shekels in the till to pay the $18-per-game internal revenue tax.

But, athletic officials of both institutions revealed tonight, they don't worry either about the atendance or the tax any more.

They just abolished admission charges, thus don't have to pay any tax, and the attendance at games of both colleges has improved.

American U. Five Defeats Jackets, 56-48

Unleashing a surprising powerhouse offensive in the final period, the American University hoopmen defeated the favored Randolph-Macon College five, 56 to 48, on the American court last night.

Taking their second game of the season, the Eagles did it the hard way by waging a second-half rally after trailing at halftime, 24 to 21. This victory was A. U.'s first over a Mason-Dixon Conference opponent.

The big man in the Eagle offense was Bart Fugler, who collected seven field goals and a free toss in the final period. He was top scorer for the evening with a total of 17. Runner-up was his teammate, Charlie Kligman, who rimmed the hoops for 16 points.

Center Norman Mason was the threat from Randolph-Macon, collecting a total of 15 points before he left the game late in the last stanza on excessive personal fouls.

Joe Hiestand Wins International Title In Havana Shoot

By International News Service

Havana, Feb. 6.—Joe Hiestand, of Hillsboro, Ohio, today won the International Class Trap-Shooting Trophy at the Havana winter tournament, defeating D. E. Spangler, of Casper, Wyo., in a shootoff.

Both scored 148 out of 150, but in the shootoff of 25 targets Hiestand scored 24 to Spangler's 22.

Jose Maria Cuervo, of Havana, and Bernard Peyton, of Philadelphia, tied for third place with 146, and A. R. Meyers, of Barnegat, N. J., was fourth with 145.

The tournament will continue tomorrow with 50 American and Cuban marksmen competing for the Batista Trophy in the international live pigeon championship shoot.

Western Juniors Win

Night Games On Coast Get Amber Light

By International News Service

San Diego, Calif., Feb. 6.—The Pacific Coast League tonight was given a tentative "go ahead" for night baseball games.

Gov. Culbert L. Olson informed San Diego Defense Council officials the Army has given its okay for night games "unless conditions change for the worse."

In a letter to Lieut. Max I. Black, council director, Gov. Olson said:

"Lieut. Gen. (John L.) De Witt has advised that unless conditions change for the worse, baseball games on the West Coast will be approved. However, the enemy situation cannot be forecast, and what it may be on April 2, 1942, the date the season opens, is entirely a matter of conjecture.

"It must, therefore, be thoroughly understood that the enemy situation at that time may preclude the possibility of holding such games, and under such circumstances the Western defense command may find it necessary that night baseball be canceled."

Opening-Day Tickets Go on Sale Tomorrow

Tickets for the opening baseball game here April 14 between the New York Yankees and Washington will go on sale tomorrow at 9 o'clock at the ball park office, Seventh and Florida Avenue Northwest, it was announced yesterday by E. B. Eynon, jr., Washington club secretary.

Hogan Trails By Two Shots On First Day

31-34 Score Trims 7 Strokes Off Par In $5000 Tourney Over Phoenix Links

By the Associated Press

Phoenix, Ariz., Feb. 6.—Heading a wrecking crew of 22 par busters, lanky, unheralded Lloyd Mangrum, of Chicago, set a spectacular pace through the first round of the $5000 Western Open today with a six under par 65.

Overlooked in the pretournament predictions, Mangum threw a scare into the big-name delegation when he moved into a commanding two-stroke lead over Benny Hogan, golf's mightiest mite, and a larger advantage over other more highly rated professionals competing in this forty-second edition of the Western.

Mangrum, who tied for low score of all the professionals in the recent $5000 Bing Crosby Tournament in California, blistered the first nine with a 31, five under, and came on in with a 34, one under regulation figures for the Phoenix Country Club course.

Hogan Posts 34, 33—67

Up to this stage Hogan, the Hershey, Pa., belter, ruled the field with a 34, 33—67, and six other contenders were crowding him in the 68 bracket.

Included in this bracket were Henry Picard, Chick Harbert and E. J. (Dutch) Harrison. The latter, like Mangrum, is an unattached pro from Chicago.

Eight others were tied in the 69 division, and the 70s were filled with six golfers, including the low amateur in the field of nearly 150, Harry Todd, of Hobbs, N, Mex., former Western amateur champion.

Byron Nelson, former National Open king and winner of the Western Open in 1939, came in with a 69, along with veteran Horton Smith, Clayton Heafner and Joe Turnesa, to name a few, while erratic Sam Snead shot a 76 to leave himself out in the cold.

Brother Ray Bags a 68

Ray Mangrum, of Los Angeles, another brother in the well-known family of golfers, shared some of the spotlight with younger Lloyd with a 68 done in 34, 34 style, while Amateur Johnny Dawson, of Hollywood, winner of the Crosby tournament over the field of pros, was even with par.

Former Western Titleholder Jimmy Demaret, playing in a threesome with Ed Dudley and Singer Bing Crosby, helped himself to a five on the short fifteenth and dropped back with a 73.

Dudley, another former winner, shot 72 and Crosby came in with 83.

One hole in one was scored—by George Schneiter of Ogden, Utah, on the 130-yard second hole. He finished with 71.

Siege-gun Jimmy Thomson wrenched a shoulder muscle on the practice tee, but managed to turn in a creditable 72 for the day.

Archie San Romani Gives Up Track for First Love—Music

Former Kansas Star Assistant Supervisor In Portland Schools

By the Associated Press

Portland, Me., Feb. 6.—Archie San Romani, the former Kansas track star, has been appointed assistant supervisor of instrumental music in the Portland public schools, the school committee announced today.

Since 1940 San Romani has been director of music and director of physical education in suburban Cape Elizabeth schools.

In accepting the new teaching job, which starts next September, San Romani said he definitely was giving up his track career for his first love—music.

A graduate of Kansas State Teachers College at Emporia, Archie holds a bachelor of science degree in music. As a trumpet player he tooted his way through school and broke track records at the same time. He was a member of the last United States Olympic team and his record in the 2000 meters is still tops.

Jockey McCreary Is Injured But Will Pilot Alsab Today

Leg Is Hurt When Mount Is Jammed

Examination Finds No Broken Bones; Ace Rider Is Badly Shaken Up by Mishap

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 6.—What at first was reported today as a possible serious injury to Jockey Con McCreary developed, late in the afternoon, to be a seemingly trivial mishap. During the fourth race, McCreary's mount reared up at the gate and the Jockey was painfully jammed in the stall. The boy was sent to a hospital, the track physician reporting a possible fracture in his right leg.

Later, by phone, came reassuring reports that McCreary had only a bruise. Then, after the seventh race, the St. Louis mite walked into the track under his own power, having been released from the hospital. He went right to Albert Sabath's box and stated that he should be able to ride Sabath's colt, Alsab, in tomorrow's Bahamas Handicap, as originally scheduled.

He said the hospital physician told him he had a tightening up of the leg muscle but should be fit to ride the 1941 juvenile king tomorrow, news which was very pleasing to Owner Sabath.

The tiny St. Louis pilot, sensation of the Hialeah meeting a year ago and second to Basil James in the jockey standing for the current meeting, was removed to Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami for further examination and treatment.

McCreary was astride the Barrington Stable's Loftsman. Before a start could be made, Loftsman reared up in his stall and McCreary was jammed in. Assistant starters stretched the popular little fellow out on the grass until the track ambulance came. Eddie Arcaro substituted for Conn on Loftsman, which finished third in the race behind Tee Midge, a $71.40 for $2 shot, and Refulgent.

Sabath early today decided to start Alsab in the Bahamas, changing his recent decision.

The charm that seemed to attend the Missouri mite here last year has not been so much in evidence this season. Last Monday, Conn returned to the saddle after a week's layoff caused by a recurrence of sinus trouble, a cold and slight temperature.

Only last night, McCreary stopped the show at a Miami night club, where the Jockey Guild's annual dinner and show was staged. The shortest of all riders here danced a rhumba with a 6-foot-2-inch member of the stage show.

Heartease Heritage, a cocker spaniel belonging to Dorothy Maynard and entered in the Westminster Show February 11 in New York's Madison Square Garden, is shown in three poses as he is being prepared for dogdom's big show. At left—On a stroll with Miss Maynard. Center—Being groomed to look his best, and right, all dolled up. Winner of six points in two shows to date, he needs nine more to be a "champion;" can get five in Westminster show

Selections at Hialeah.

Dear Al:

With 14 horses named for the $5000 added Bahamas Handicap to include Alsab. Requested, Eternal Bull and Bright Willie, and eight slated for the British West Indies Purse containing such older stars of the turf as War Relic, Challedon and Our Boots, Hialeah Park will present its most brilliant racing program today. The surprise entry came in the form of Alsab. The Nation's outstanding 2-year-old of 1941, earlier in the week it was believed that the colt would be a doubtful starter. However, just before entry closing time yesterday morning, Trainer "Sarge" Swenke placed the name of his equine king on the Bahamas list. In instructing Swenke to make the entry, Owner Al Sabath said: "We are starting Alsab Saturday because we do not want to disappoint the public which has come to admire this grand colt just as we have. We have tried to be good sports with the horse as a 2-year-old, running him under all kinds of conditions. I was a bit hesitant in entering Alsab for the Bahamas because I did not want to put too much strain on him in his debut as a 3-year-old. But inasmuch as his preparatory works were so perfect, I came to the conclusion that I would not let two pounds stand in the way of permitting the public to get its first view of Alsab in the Bahamas."

A testimonial dinner will be given by the turf writers to Joseph E. Widener, one of the Nation's outstanding men of racing at the Royal Palm Club Tuesday evening, February 24. The dinner will serve a two-fold purpose—that of honoring a man who has contributed so unselfishly to all that is good in a sport and that of furthering a movement of giving all possible aid to this Nation's needs in time of war. The turf writers have announced that all proceeds from the testimonial dinner will be distributed in equal shares to the following organizations: The American Red Cross, the Army Relief Society, the Navy Relief Society, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Edward S. Moore, master of the Circle M. Ranch, is back at the races after a short sojourn in a local hospital. Moore suffered a severe cold which last week threatened to react seriously.

BILL.

First race—ALFORAY is my choice in this baby race. BUCKRA and SEAWARD BOUND are the ones to whip, if top one makes any mistakes.

Second race—AVESTA has the early foot to be out of trouble in this claiming event. WANNA HYGRO is the one to beat. RASTY WIRE and SIR GIBSON for the show end.

Third race—MORE THAN FEW'S last winning race repeated should make it two in a row. PEMMICAN, off badly last out, had no chance. ANTI CLIMAX and PAINT POT are long shots.

Fourth race—BROWN BOMB likes a route and best effort is needed. NAVARIN will be right there if top one makes any mistakes. WHO REIGH for the show end.

Fifth race—RUN BY finished third last out in the same kind of company and that race repeated should greet the judges. FLAGSCOT and BALLY BOY are the ones to whip.

Sixth race—REQUESTED has turned in some real fast works and will take some beating. ALSAB is strictly the one to beat. BRIGHT WILLIE, RODNEY and FIRST FIDDLE have good outside chances.

Seventh race—SHERIFF CULKIN is dropping 21 pounds off last race and will have WAR RELIC to trim. THE CHIEF and CHALLEDON are fit and ready.

Eighth race—JOHNNIE J. on last winning race. Has a good chance in this open affair. JOE SCHENCK, RED DOCK and BATTLE COLORS are the real factors.

Best bet—MORE THAN FEW.

150 Racing Days Okayed In Maryland

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Feb. 6.—The State racing commission announced approval today of dates for 150 days of racing at nine Maryland tracks in 1942.

The four 1-mile tracks will have 100 racing days and the five ½-mile tracks, 50 days.

Dates approved for the major tracks were: Bowie, April 1-11 and November 12-28; Havre de Grace, April 13-25 and September 12-26; Pimlico, April 27-May 9 and October 28-November 11; Laurel, September 29-October 27.

The schedule for the minor tracks: Hagerstown, July 7-11 and July 14-18; Bel Air, July 22-August 1; Cumberland, August 4-8 and August 11-15; Marlboro, August 19-29; Timonium, August 31-September 10.

3 Star Athletes Seek Navy Appointments

By the Associated Press

Three outstanding collegiate athletes applied here yesterday for Naval Reserve appointments to help the Navy and Marine Corps with their huge new pilot training program, planned to turn out the toughest and most daring aviators in the world.

The three are Fred Wolcott, Rice Institute graduate and holder of three world's track records and co-holder of a fourth; James (Sweet) Lalanne, former University of North Carolina football star, and Peter Kmetovic, a Stanford University senior and fullback on the Stanford eleven.

If their applications for appointment as ensigns are approved, the Navy announced, the three will serve under Lieut. Comdr. Tom Hamilton, former head football coach at the Naval Academy, whom Secretary Knox has selected to direct the work of conditioning student pilots under the training program announced by the Navy last week.

Wolcott, who graduated from Rice last year, is now in business in Houston, Tex.; home address, 4333 Jefferson Street. Wolcott's records include those for the 200-meter low hurdles, the 220-yard low hurdles and the 45-yard high hurdles indoors. He is coholder of the 120-yard high-hurdle record.

Kmetovic, 22, is a senior at Stanford, where he has played both varsity football and Rugby. In addition he has participated in other sports, including track.

Manager Mel Ott Signed by Giants To 2-Year Contract

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 6.—Mel Ott went through the formality of becoming manager of the New York Giants today when he signed a two-year player-manager contract.

Ott was named manager last December, succeeding Bill Terry after 17 years' service as outfielder and third baseman. Terry moved up as general manager of the Giants' farm system.

Secretary Eddie Brannick declined to disclose terms of the contract but Ott was believed to have received around $18,000 last year after taking a cut from 1940.

Brannick announced the Giants would fly to Havana for the two-game exhibition series with the Brooklyn Dodgers, February 28 and March 1.

All-Stars Tie Bruins, 4-4, Before 14,622

By the Associated Press

Boston, Feb. 6.—Varying degrees of their old-time uncanny skill and terrific speed were demonstrated by 16 of the greatest players of the National Hockey League's modern era tonight as they waged a 4-4 tie with the world championship Boston Bruins in a 39-minute exhibition charity game before an overflow crowd of 14,622 at the Boston Garden.

Such famous forward combinations as the New York Rangers' Frankie Boucher, Bill and Bun Cook; the Toronto Maple Leafs' Joe Primeau, Charlie Conacher and Busher Jackson, and the Detroit Red Wings' Marty Barry, Larry Aurie and Herbie Lewis were reunited in their old-time formations.

Protecting them were such defensive immortals as Eddie Shore, Boston's greatest hockey hero; the still-smiling Ching Johnson; Red Horner, the crowd's pet hate when he was campaigning with the Maple Leafs; George Owen, Harvard's only gift to major league hockey, and the bigger Cy Wentworth, ence of Montreal's Canadiens.

Boston's beloved Tiny Thompson prtected the All-Stars' net, and he did it so well that he kicked out 10 of the 14 shots the nonpressing Bruins managed to fire at him during the Army Relief Fund benefit.

Blair's Rally Fails, Landon Wins, 31 to 29

Surviving a desperate Montgomery Blair High rally toward the end, Landon School basketers grabbed a slim 31-29 victory over their suburban foes lost night in Silver Spring.

With Ted Brawner tallying the first of his 15 points during hostilities, Landon boasted a 21-10 margin at the half. The losers' second-half spree was sparked by Weir, who boosted his total to 13 points for the game.

Hoya Hockey Team Meets St. Joseph's

Missing their former captain and high scorer, Bill Deegan, Georgetown's undefeated ice hockey team tonight will bid for its seventh victory of the season as St. Joseph's College, of Philadelphia, is met at Riverside Stadium Deegan, who has gone to the Marine Officers' Training School at Quantico, is the second member of the team lost to the armed services. Mickey Ford, promising sophomore defenseman, was drafted January 9.

Supplanting Deegan at right wing in the Georgetown lineup will be Dick Fullam, a former all-scholastic from New Hampshire.

Another large crowd is expected tonight to boost Georgetown's remarkable total of 21,000 customers for six games, which they claim is the best attendance mark by any Eastern college six.

The Hoyas are averaging better than seven goals a game, having 43 as well as 37 assists so far. John McQueeney, the new captain, is second high scorer with seven goals and six assists. He is from Providence.

The hot foul-line shooters of St. John's High shone in that department last night to trip Benedictine High five, of Richmond, by 35-28 on the local court.

It was close all the way, though the Johnnies were never headed. Their period leads were 10-9, 23-18 and 31-25. Their 11 successful conversions from the charity stripe eventually proved decisive, as Benedictine sank only 6.

Central Edges Tech, 32 to 30; Roosevelt Defeats Anacostia

Thrilling Battles Mark Series Play; Vikings Take Third Place in Title Race

As thrilling a pair of basketball games as has ever been played in Washington in one evening was witnessed by interhigh fans last night at Tech, where Roosevelt and Central fives were victorious by the proverbial skin of their teeth.

In the first head-on meeting, Roosevelt, undefeated league leader, which didn't need the game but wanted it badly, barely saved a 34-33 judgment out of a lightning-like scrap with Anacostia, one of two clubs which has yet to win an outing. The nightcap went to Central over Tech, the series' other winless team, 32-30, giving the Vikings undisputed third place in the standings.

A Real Heartbreaker

That second business was the real heartbreaker. It marked the fifth time in six public school battles Tech has lost by three points or less. And it went to the husky Vikings after the Trainers had held a five-point lead.

Trying with all their ability to break their streak of losing close contests, the Trainers hung on and trailed by only 8-6 at the first quarter. Hank Pizza was the spark of a drive which put Tech out front at the half, 16-15, but, meanwhile, Central's Teddy Thomaides had distinguished himself with several of the most unbelievable shots in the book.

Going into the final quarter the Trainers still had a one-point edge, 21-20, and quickly they upped it to 25-20. The margin was short-lived, however, for Thomaides, Hank Lawler and Bob Hill staged a rally that put the winners out front, 32-29, with one minute left. Nobby Mater's foul shot only gave the hosts a false hope.

Thomaides High Scorer

With his overhand circus tosses, Thomaides accounted for the top scoring effort, 15 points. Hill managed for 8, tying Tech's Bob Brewer with that total.

Anacostia, too, was ahead in its tangle with the highly favored Riders, but just didn't have the big guns of the defending champions. In the end it was a technical foul, called on the Indians for excessive "time outs" which decided the issue.

A 7-3 Anacostia advantage midway of the first period was cut to 9-8 at the end, and Roosevelt jumped ahead by 16-11 at intermission. Anacostia again pressed into the van early in the third quarter, 20-19, sagged to a 20-25 deficit going into the last eight minutes.

From then on the eventual winners stayed on top, thanking Jim Flaherty for a missed foul shot in the last 10 seconds that there was no overtime.

While Paul Benner and Bob Nelson were doing most of the Indians' scoring, getting 11 points apiece, Roosevelt's players were distributing the point-making almost evenly between its five regulars.

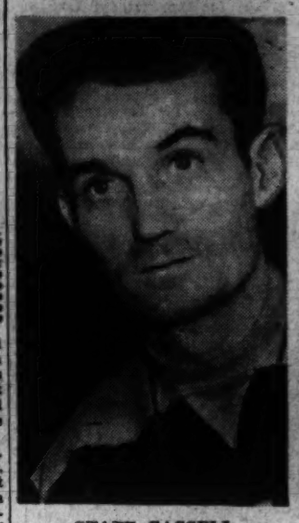
Coach Cassell May Leave American U.



STAFF CASSELL

DR. PAUL DOUGLASS

Talented Young Mentor Offered More Lucrative Job With a Mid-West College

American University and Staff Cassell today stand at their athletic crossroads.

Although neither desires it, they may soon part company, these two who have come so far, athletically speaking, in the last few years.

It is not a new story. It has happened dozens of times at small colleges with talented young sports leaders. Cassell has been offered "about 2½ times as much money" to become director of athletics at a Midwestern college. He can hardly afford to refuse the offer.

But he is very happy at A. U. and he doesn't want to leave. Neither does the school want him to leave. So much do they appreciate the good he has done in his variegated role that certain influential members of the board of trustees plus star athletes and other students are telephoning and writing prominent alumni to take steps to see that Cassell does not leave.

What they are trying to do, of course, is obtain a substantial increase in salary for Cassell. The next few days should tell.

Dr. Paul F. Douglass, 37-year-old president of the school and a great advocate of college football, says:

"You may say that I will do everything I can within the limits of our academic setup to retain Mr. Cassell."

Dr. Douglass, recalling that the usual procedure to get a raise for a faculty member is for the dean to recommend it and the board of faculty approve it, said anybody could see the trouble involved.

"However, it is fortunate that all but a few of the faculty members agree with me that football and other sports should be considered a part of the academic and not as independent functions for the entertainment of the public."

Dr. Douglass said the decision of what can be done to keep Cassell will be up to the board of trustees, and he predicted that "something could be done" even if it meant cutting yards of red tape to do it.

Among the active local members of A. U.'s board of trustees, which will make a decision vital to the success of the school's future athletics are E. Barrett Prettyman, president of the District Bar Association, and E. F. Colladay and Roland Rice, local attorneys, and Harry W. Bergen, minister at the Hamline Methodist Church.

Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, resident bishop of the Methodist Church here, has written Cassell a letter praising his work and exhorting him to remain.

Leading the students' fight for Cassell is W. Kenneth Hoover, president of the Student Life Committee. Hoover, reporting that the student body is almost 100 per cent behind its director of athletics, football and basketball coach, trainer and so on is telephoning and writing the alumni to enlist their aid. Gun Club to Hold Weekly Shoot Today

The regular weekly meeting of the Washington Gun Club will take place this afternoon on the Benning Grounds at Thirty-fourth and Benning Road Northeast.

Events scheduled are at 25 and 50 targets, the first from 16 yards' rise, the second from various handicap distances. Regular ammunition is 12-gauge, but any desired shotgun load may be used.

Friends Bows To St. Albans Five, 34 to 19

St. Alban's cagemen proved the class of yesterday's city prep school clash at the Massachusetts Avenue gym, trouncing Sidwell-Friends by a 34-19 count after running up a huge lead in the first period.

Teamwork made much of the difference, but in the end it was the offensive play of Earl Elliott and the defensive play of Jim Trimble which decided. Elliott continued his hot scoring streak with 16 points, while Trimble's outstanding performance was the limiting of "Cotton" Smith, Friends' ace, to a single field goal. The latter also tallied seven points.

At the start of hostilities it was red-headed Sterling Lee, Elliott's running mate, who sparked the hosts to an 11-1 lead after one quarter, and a 19-1 margin with half a minute of the first half remaining. Then Bobby Bensinger tossed in two circus shots to cut the visitors' half-time deficit to 19-5.

With Frederick's excellent defense work and Dale Meyers' 16 points, the winners pulled away in the last half to turn the contest into a rout. Held 2-0 at the end of the first quarter, and 6-5 at halftime, Bladensburg then turned on the heat.

Auker Leaves Hospital, Undecided on Career

Detroit, Feb. 6 (AP).—Elden Auker, 31-year-old St. Louis Browns' pitcher, has ended a three-day hospital stay following an automobile accident, but he still wants a look at his 1942 contract before deciding whether to remain in baseball.

Auker, recuperating at his home from head and chest injuries suffered Tuesday in a three-car collision, said tonight he had not yet received terms from the Brownies. The one-time Kansas State College athlete is employed by a manufacturing concern here in the off season.

Maryland, A.U. And Hoyas Play Tonight

Maryland and American University courtmen at home and Georgetown on the road, is the college basketball setup for tonight as the District quintets complete a week that has found most of them passing the halfway mark of the current schedules.

Maryland, stuck with the task of winning all its remaining Southern Conference games to gain a championship playoff berth, is host to Washington and Lee in Ritchie Coliseum at 8 p. m.

American U. will play on its home court, but Gallaudet, oddly enough, is host as the Blue Bisons requested the game transferred from their own small gym to the A. U. court. The varsity center-jump will be at 8:30, following a preliminary between the Gallaudet jayvee-frosh team against the American freshmen and subs.

Georgetown, winner over Colgate and loser to Syracuse in the first two games of its current road trip, will play in the Chicago Garden against Marquette in the first half of a double-header which finds De-Paul and Loyola in the nightcap. The double bill is a Catholic Youth Organization benefit and the Garden was reported sold out some time ago. The Hoyas also journey to Philadelphia on Tuesday to meet St. Joseph's.

Travis Traveling High

Maryland has already taken a 52-44 licking from Washington and Lee this week in Lexington and the fact that the game will be played on the Terps' home floor is hardly enough to expect a reversal. The Generals have won four and lost two in the conference, while Maryland's opening game victory over Richmond is its only triumph in six starts.

Maryland's rookie center, Ernie Travis, who is on his way to new State, conference and metropolitan Washington collegiate scoring records, will take his mounting average and 223-point total against the Generals. Travis scored 20 points in the Lexington game and in the more familiar surroundings of his home gym may do as well or better.

The American-Gallaudet battle will be the second of the season between the intracity rivals and Mason-Dixon Conference opponents. A. U. won the first, 61-37.

Brewers Lose, Play Tomorrow

The Washington Brewers, beaten last night in Trenton by the Trenton Tigers, 47 to 27, are looking forward to the big game with the Wilmington Blue Bombers, first-half winners in the American Professional Basketball League, tomorrow night at the Heurich gym, Twenty-sixth and D Streets Northwest.

Despite the setback, the Brewers continue to hold the lead in the American loop with two victories and one defeat.

Washington defeated Wilmington ten nights ago, 33 to 27, to break an eight-game streak of the Bombers, while last Sunday they shaded Trenton, 31 to 30.

The Wilmington-Washington game will start at 9 p. m., with a preliminary at 7:30. A capacity crowd is expected.

Bethesda Defeats Sherwood, 45-24

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High captured its ninth triumph in 15 games yesterday at the expense of Sherwood cagers, winning by a 45-24 margin on the lossers' court.

With nine players contributing to the invaders' scoring the Barons jumped into a 24-8 advantage at intermission and won easily. Dick Poerstel's 13 points nosed out Sherwood's Thompson for scoring honors by a single point.

Newsom's Future Depends On Size of His Salary Cut

Tiger Pitcher Set to Reject His Contract If Bosses Slice Too Deeply Into His Pay

By the Associated Press

Hartsville, S. C., Feb. 6.—Big Bobo Newsom indicated today that if his 1942 contract with the Detroit Tigers were too sharply trimmed he would mail it back unsigned.

"You all seem to know a lot more about it than I do," he commented when asked for his reaction to a prospective steep salary cut. The ponderous right-hander then dismissed the whole subject with this terse sweep:

"There won't be any reaction at all."

"You mean that you intend to sign it and mail it back?" he was asked.

"I do not," he replied emphatically, sort of spitting out the words.

"Then you won't sign it at all, eh?" as the interviewer tried the only obvious alternative.

"What's the idea," was the answer.

"You'd quit baseball?"

"Might be."

Newsom indicated that he might have more to say after receiving the contract, especially if it were drastically pared.

All this was brought on by reports from Detroit that the 1942 contracts had been mailed to 33 players and that a sharp salary curtailment was afoot. Buck's fortunes of last season, when he won few games, were expected to result in a liberal whack off his salary figure, undisclosed by him, but reputed to be $37,500, second only to the $55,000 earmarked for Hank Greenberg.

"They can cut all they please," said Newsom. ". . . and maybe they can look for some pitchers, too."

Asked what he'd do if he decided to quit baseball, Bobo replied that he'd probably "stay here and run my grill."

U. S. Olympic Body Awaits O.K. on Pan-American Games

By the United Press

Chicago, Feb. 6.—Olympic Committee President Avery Brundage announced today that the United States would participate in the proposed Pan-American games at Buenos Aires in November if the State Department sanctioned passage.

"We hope to learn the State Department's attitude within a week or so and that's all we need," Brundage explained. "Plans executed a few weeks before war was declared can be streamlined to meet the emergency."

Brundage said that a team could be flown to South America and that many airline reservations already had been made. Otherwise, passage through waters in which there might be Axis submarines would be a great problem.

A National Duty

"If the State Department wants us to get there we'll make it some way," Brundage said. "If the games actually are held and we are not represented, South American governments might be disturbed.

"We feel it is our duty to carry on and will continue present preparations unless we are requested not to. All members of our committee feel that participation would be a contribution to civilian morale and, of course, a great physical resource builder."

Prewar plans called for a delegation of approximately 200 athletes to compete in track and field, and a number of other sports, including swimming, basketball, boxing, fencing, rowing, polo and marksmanship.

Pan-American Games

Buenos Aires, Feb. 6 (U.P.).—Jose J. Leidi, manager of the Argentine Olympics, said today that despite the spread of the World War to the Americas, preparations were being continued for the Pan-American games at Buenos Aires in November.

"The international situation has had no effect upon the games and I can assure you that they'll take place as scheduled," he announced.

A committee poll of the nations of the North and South American continents, taken after United States' entrance into the war, revealed that none desired to withdraw, he said. Canada's answer had not been received, he added, and the Dominion's participation was doubtful.

G. W. Edges Little Hoyas By 25-23 Score

A well-aimed field goal in the last five seconds gave G. W. High five, of Alexandria, its eighth triumph of the season yesterday, a 25-23 victory over Georgetown Prep at Garrett Park.

Billy Bell, guard, put an end to the see-saw affair with a desperate toss from mid-court. The Little Hoyas didn't have time enough to retaliate.

With players of both teams splitting the scoring fairly evenly, G. W. grabbed an 8-2 edge in the first period but went behind, 14-10, at the half. Again the Presidents rallied, earning a 17-16 lead going into the final session. It was anybody's game from there in.

"MY business is simply Blooming! . . . Is Yours?"

Ernie Powers
Made a living off of flowers.
He'd raise them in his Flower Shop and when they were all grown up he'd smell them.
And if the smell was right he'd sell them.
Gradually, his fame spread through the city area
Until there was nary a
Person who hadn't heard of his special sweet pea or prize petunia,
And pretty soon ya
Couldn't even get waited on
Unless you could prove it was your wife's birthday or, if single, a day you were heavily dated on,
And even then the service
Made you nervice.

Well, who should come in one day but a chap named Marty,
And oh, he was a smarty!
"Ernie," he said, "you're a genius botanical,
But you're not mechanical,
Yet you try to do everything alone
From answering the phone
To personally handling the delivery of every little potted azalea.
Do you want your health to falea?"
Of course Ernie answered, "No."
Then added, "Oh, oh, oh!
If I could only get some efficient help to help me and get it now,
Only—how?"

So Marty made reply:
"It's easy as pie.
Just put a Help Wanted Ad in the paper you like the most—
The Washington Post.
The cost is infinitesimal,
Only .22 a line, which is a pretty small decimal,
And you'll get much quicker action
Because The Post is people's first-thing-in-the-morning main attraction.
So what do you say?"
And Ernie said, "Okay.
But how do I do it?"
"Just call an Ad-taker at NAtional 4200," said Marty, "and give her your ad, and that's all there is to it."
So Ernie did it
And now his life is a bed of roses, and if you ask him if it's due to his Post Want Ad he'll proudly admit it.

It pays to put a Want Ad in The Post NAtional 4200

New Car Sales Here Off 53% In December

Registrations of new passenger cars in December continued to show a sharp decline in Washington, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported in its monthly review received here yesterday. A shrinkage of 53 per cent was noted as compared with December, 1940. Registrations in the last month of 1941 totaled 1238 as compared with 2622 in the previous year.

The sales drop began in September when 1942 models were introduced. However, sales of automobiles were so large during the first eight months of 1941 that the year's total for Washington was 30,186, a gain of 3 per cent over the 1940 aggregate of 29,170.

Another Washington business field which suffered sharp contraction toward the close of the year was private building. However, the year's total of private building permits was $55,212,080, against $43,751,180 in 1940, the Federal Reserve Bank reported.

Your Federal Income Tax

By Bureau of Internal Revenue

No. 34—Deduction for Taxes

In general, taxes are deductible only by the person upon whom they are imposed.

Taxes on real estate and personal property paid during the year 1941 are deductible. So-called taxes which are assessed against local benefits, such as streets, sidewalks, draining, and other like improvements, are not deductible, but are to be capitalized, as they tend to increase the value of the property and thus constitute cost of a permanent improvement. The Federal income tax may not be deducted. Income tax, however, paid to the State by an individual on his income is an allowable deduction in his Federal income tax return.

Customs duties paid by a consignee on articles imported for his own use are deductible. Import or tariff duties paid to customs officers, and business, license, privilege, excise and stamp taxes paid to internal revenue collectors are deductible as taxes, provided they are not added to and made a part of the expense of the business or the cost of the articles of merchandise with respect to which they are paid, in which case they cannot be deducted separately as a tax. The purchaser may not deduct the Federal tax of 10 per cent on the retail sale of jewelry, furs and toilet preparations. The Federal tax of 1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof paid for admission to any place is deductible, provided an account has been kept by the taxpayer of the amount paid. Taxes on club dues are deductible by the member paying them. An individual may deduct the tax on his telephone conversations, radio messages, telegrams and cables and on the rent of his safe-deposit box.

Unemployment compensation contributions required under a State law, if officially classified as taxes, are deductible as taxes and not as business expenses.

The excise taxes imposed upon employers by the Social Security Act, as amended, are deductible, but the tax imposed on employes by that act is not deductible. If an employer pays such tax for the employes, the amount may be deducted by the employer as a business expense, and the employes are required to report as additional income in their Federal income-tax returns the amounts of the tax so paid for them.

License fees exacted by a State or city upon certain businesses are deductible as taxes. Automobile license fees are ordinarily taxes and deductible. Postage is not a tax and is not deductible.

Federal estate and gift taxes and State inheritance, estate, legacy or succession taxes are not deductible. The Federal taxes on automobiles, gasoline, cigarettes and liquor are imposed upon the manufacturer, producer or importer and are not deductible by the purchaser or consumer. Whether or not the gasoline tax, the use tax, or the sales tax levied by a State may be deducted by the individual purchaser depends upon the terms of the State law imposing the tax; consequently, the right to the deduction, as between purchaser and seller, varies in the different States.

The Outlook

Federalizing of Unemployment Insurance Seen Unnecessary Burden on Washington

In view of the tremendous necessary concentration of centralized power at Washington, the already overworked Federal Government should avoid taking on any "normal" functions which have in the past been performed satisfactorily by the States and the localities.

Certainly the existing division of functions among national, State and local governments should be frozen for the duration, and, if there is any change during war time, it should be in the direction of decentralization, that is, shedding responsibility from Washington to the States and the localities.

By way of illustration, any interest that there may be in Federalizing unemployment insurance, instead of continuing the existing Federal-State setup, should be arrested until victory has been won.

Under the existing setup aas determined in the Social Security Act, the Federal Social Security Board is empowered to approve or disapprove State unemployment laws as a basis for tax credit by citizens of such States in abating liability against a Federal unemployment tax. The criteria for approval include standards designed to assure integrity of the funds, bona fide laws and reasonable protection of labor standards. Likewise, in the matter of grants of Federal funds, the board was authorized to pass on the administrative competence of State agencies.

Nevertheless, the States had some leeway in selecting laws, and two-thirds of them adopted some variant of "experience rating" in which the tax liability of employers would be related to their actual record in keeping men steadily at work. Thus, an attempt was made to give a financial incentive for promoting stability of employment.

Ever since October, 1941, those who want a continuance of States' rights and independence in the realm of unemployment insurance have been nervous. They have been afraid that complete federalization of the system might be in the wind.

At that time, it will be recalled, the President indicated he was considering a report of the Federal Social Security Board for complete federalization of the State-operated unemployment insurance system.

Opposition to this was expressed by more than half the governors of the States, by the Interstate Conference of Employment Security Agencies, by numerous employers organizations and by a few labor unions.

After Pearl Harbor, the President on December 19 telegraphed the 48 State governors to turn over their State employment services to the Social Security Board for Federal operation. The chief executive expressed the view that a national employment service could more effectively handle the labor supply problems incidental to accelerated wartime production.

Funds for Federal administration of this activity had been previously inserted into an appropriation measure last June.

In complying with the request, some governors specified that they were turning agencies over to the Federal Government for the duration of the war only, and some further expressed continued opposition to contemplated federalization of the whole unemployment compensation setup.

Then in the President's January 6 budget message he asked Congress to provide more liberal unemployment compensation benefits "under a uniform national system."

In addition to wanting to hold on to State prerogatives, some of the State officials also fear that, if complete federalization occurs, the "experience rating" system, to which two-thirds subscribe, may also go out of the window.

Auto Output Shrinks to 37,125

Detroit, Feb. 6 (AP).—Ward's Reports, Inc., estimated today that car and truck production for the current week would total 37,125 vehicles, compared with 73,305 last week and 127,675 this week a year ago.

Noting that nearly all manufacturers have completed their last quotas of passenger car production, Ward's said it was discontinuing regular public announcements of weekly output totals after this week.

"Output from here forward will be primarily in truck and military classifications," it said, "and no general purpose would be served by publicizing this volume."

Johns-Manville Corporation reported consolidated net earnings for 1941 were $5,967,145, equal to $6.66 a common share, compared with $5,885,071, or $6.35 a share in the preceding year. Lewis H. Brown, president, said earnings before income and excess profits taxes were $17,491,975, the largest in the company's history. Net sales, he said, were at a record high of $92,852,483, an increase of about 50 per cent over the $61,761,236 reported for 1940.

Republic Steel Corporation reported a record net profit of $24,038,340 for 1941. This compared with the previous record of $21,113,507 in 1940.

Defense-spurred operations gave the Nation's third largest steel company $6,041,244 net profit in the fourth quarter last year—more than 25 per cent below record final quarter net profit of $8,480,174 in 1940.

However, provisions for Federal income and excess profits taxes for the past quarter alone totaled $16,275,000, compared with 8 million dollars tax provisions for all of 1940. Tax allowances for entire 1941 amounted to $46,250,000.

Rate of earnings last year was $3.87 per common share against $3.30 the preceding year.

Warner & Swasey Co., maker of machine tools and precision instruments, reported 1941 net income of $4,929,859, comared with $3,371,283 for 1940. This was equal to $6.03 on each of the 816,635 outstanding common sahres, aginst $4.19 per share the preceding year. Reflecting the heavy demand for machine tools in the war effort, the company's shipments last year totaled $34,903,703, compared with $19,027,259 in 1940 and $9,237,082 in 1939.

Simonds Saw & Steel Co. reported for the year ended December 31, consolidated net income of $2,433,139 after provision of $3,951,500 for Federal and Canadian taxes, equal to $4.89 a common share. This compared with $1,553,866, or $3.12 a share, in 1940.

Nash-Kelvinator Corporation reported a profit of $885,153 after provision for normal and excess profits taxes, for the three months ended December 31, 1941. This compares with a profit of $87,000 for the similar quarter of 1941. The report was described as an interim one, subject to adjustments and to "a more complete appraisal of the effect of the cessation of the manufacture of civilian automobiles."

Fall Footwear To Be Limited In Color Range

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 6.—Women's fall footwear will have just six colors, including black, a meeting of industry and Government representatives decided today.

Men will have black and a range of six shades of brown, including two tones now used for Army shoes.

The colors were agreed upon by meetings of representatives of the Tanners' Council of America, National Shoe Retailers Association, National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers Association, Textile Color Card Association and the War Production Board's leather conservation division.

Women's shades will be repeated from the 1941 fall and 1942 spring colors and will include town brown, golden tobacco, turf tan, kona red and bluejacket. These colors, stylists pointed out, will blend well with the subdued colors fall costumers will display.

Men can choose from Yankee brown, national brown, charro brown and a cordovan tone, like Chilean brown, which will be called Rio cordo. In addition there will be garrison tan and service tan.

"The adoption of a color program this far in advance," said the National Shoe Retailers Association, "is not simply a matter of style forecasting.

"The purpose is the conservation of leather, chemicals and other important commodities desired by the Government."

More than 90 per cent of the shoes to be sold this fall will adhere to these colors, which take the least possible amount of dyes, the association added.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 6 (AP).—Grain prices were in retreat again today, losing 1 to almost 2 cents a bushel in a market which traders said was depressed partly by developments in connection with the Government's wheat and corn selling program. Soybeans fell more than 3 cents.

Grain men said much trade attention was centered on bearish market reaction to Government disposal of large quantities of wheat as feed, which has been depressing feed prices in general, directly affecting all grains. The market also was forced to absorb hedging and profit-taking sales, with processing and other consuming interests holding back waiting to see what the ultimate effect of the Government program will be as far as prices are concerned.

Wheat reached the lowest levels in about a month, closing ⅞-1¼ cents lower than yesterday: May, 1.28⅛-1.28⅝; July, 1.30¼. Oats also were at lows since early in January, finishing 1-1⅛ down: May, 56⅛-56⅝. Corn closed ⅞-1¼ off: May, 86¼-86¾; July, 88; rye, 1¼-1½ lower; soybeans, 3¼-3½ down, and lard, 7 to 10 lower.

Textile Trade Shows Record Output in Year

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 6.—The textile industry broke all production records in 1941 for the third straight year, the trade magazine, Textile World, reported today in its annual review.

Mill activity was figured at 138 per cent of average operations in the base years 1923-25, the magazine said, an increase of one-third over the 142 figure for 1940.

It added that in October a record use of 651 million pounds of textile fibers were consumed by domestic mills, a total nearly equaling the average quarterly use in 1932.

"When this war is over, and we start to reclothe the denuded peoples of the world, we will probably have more months like that, and maybe months which will make that look like a piker," the article said.

"But, in the meantime—what with rationing of raw materials—October, 1941, will probably retain its position as the champion of all textile months."

The magazine predicted that while 1942 would be "another big year" because of military and essential industrial use, many branches of the industry would not share in that work.

A long war, it said, would reduce the industry largely to clothing the armed forces, supplying needed industrial fabrics and of producing utility fabrics "which will keep the mass of civilians decent, if not beautiful."

Rayon Organon, another trade publication, filled in the 1941 textile picture with consumption figures for the four major textile fibers—cotton, wool, rayon and silk.

Total consumption of these four textiles expanded 32 per cent in 1941 to 6,470,400,000 pounds from the 4,896,100,000 pounds used in 1940.

New York Cotton

New York, Feb. 6 (AP).—Active spot house buying to fix mill accounts rallied cotton futures in the last hour today.

Final prices were 25 cents a bale higher to 18 cents lower.

The mill-fixing was believed to be against huge Government orders as spot firms reported sizable quantities of cotton needed for Government work had been sold recently.

Port receipts Thursday, 35,484 bales; port stocks, 3,274,257.

Cobalt Restricted; All Blue-Colored Goods Affected

The Government placed cobalt under full allocation control yesterday, prefacing the end of the famous "cobalt blue" for the rest of the war and seriously affecting future production of blue bottles, ceramics, inks and paints.

The War Production Board coupled the allocation order with another prohibiting the use of cobalt in all pigments after May 1 and directed that its use until then be reduced 40 per cent under consumption for the first six months of 1941.

Cobalt is an important steel alloy and domestic production is negligible. Africa is the principal source of supply with small amounts coming from Canada.

WPB experts predicted that blue enamelware, inks, fabric dyes, paints and stains would take on an ultramarine tint when effect of the cobalt ban was felt. Ultramarine is a reddish blue compared with the blue-green produced by cobalt.

Gasoline Consumption Gains 10.7% in Year

Gasoline consumption in the United States in 1941 amouned to 26,613,392,000 gallons, up 2,574,867,000 gallons, or 10.7 per cent over 1940, the Public Roads Administration estimated yesterday.

War activity, particularly troop and transport movements, the bureau said, undoubtedly accounted for a considerable part of the increase.

Of the total consumption, the agency estimated highway use accounted for 24,300,000,000 gallons.

Alabama and South Carolina had the greatest increases in consumption—19.4 per cent. Other States with more than 15 per cent increases were Florida, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia. The District of Columbia had a 15 per cent increase.

Motor vehicle registrations were estimated to have increased 7.3 per cent during 1941, with the estimate including 29,375,000 passenger cars, 68,000 buses and 4,911,000 trucks.

Louisiana led all States with a registration increase of 20 per cent, and all Southern States east of the Mississippi River showed above-average increases.

SEC Agrees to 'Special Offerings' on Big Board

The Securities Commission agreed yesterday to a six months' experiment with a plan for soliciting purchases of special offerings of securities on the New York Stock Exchange. An opportunity to try similar plans was offered all national securities markets.

The New York plan provides that the special offerings may be made, the SEC said, "only when it is determined that the auction market on the floor of the exchange cannot, within a reasonable time and at a reasonable price, absorb a particular block of stock."

The person making the offering may pay a special commission to the broker for the purchasing customer, but in such cases the broker may not also receive compensation from his customer.

Terms of the offering, including any special commissions, will be shown on the exchange tape. Customers will be advised of special commissions when the transaction is confirmed.

The commission said that exchanges desiring to try such a plan should file it for study. The plan may not be put into effect until given clearance by the SEC. It was explained that such action would not constitute approval by the commission.

The SEC action yesterday amounted to granting a conditional exemption from a rule relating to soliciting of purchases on an exchange, nd was taken, the commission said, after the New York market had urged it "as a means of improving the market for some of its securities."

Treasury to Borrow Another 1½ Billion

The Treasury announced yesterday it would borrow $1,500,000,000 through the sale of securities next Friday, February 13.

Details of the financing were not made public

Listen! with Glynn

A newspaper columnist, a social science professor and an editor join a movie censor—who also is a radio commentator and author—in an informal "People's Platform" discussion on the amount of public criticism of Government activities which should be allowed in wartime. And you'll be allowed in on the discussion, too, when it's heard over WJSV and the Columbia network between 7 and 7:30 o'clock this evening.

Following this broadcast—the 183d consecutive dinner-table discussion presented by "People's Platform" since its debut July 20, 1938—the series suspends temporarily.

It is yielding its time to a new Government show, "This Is War," which is to be broadcast Saturdays at 7 p. m. simultaneously over all four major networks, starting February 14. Still another C. B. S. program in which public issues will be discussed is to be announced soon.

Russell Davenport, president of "Citizens for Victory" and former editor of Fortune Magazine.

Samuel Grafton, columnist of the New York Post.

Contract Bridge

"I had an argument in my usual bridge game that made the war seem very quiet," writes I. H. S. "Will you please decide the correct bidding so that either I or my best friend for a lifetime will keep quiet?"

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ◇	Pass	3 N.T.	Pass
6 ♣	Dbl.	?

"What should South's partner now bid, holding these cards?"

♠ A K 2
♡ K J 8 5 4
◇ Q 10 6 3

North's call is six diamonds; late though it is, he should show his fine support for diamonds, a declaration he certainly prefers to clubs. If there was anything peculiar about South's two-diamond call, and there is no reason to assume so, South can jump to six no trump, which he certainly ought to be able to make as easily as six clubs.

If all military problems were as easy to decide as this, Col. Alfred M. Gruenther would surely summon us to be his aide de camp.

State May Ask Death in Killing Of Loveless

Special Dispatch to The Post

Leesburg, Va., Feb. 6.—The death penalty for the two 16-year-old murderers of Ward Loveless, Washington tax attorney and Loudoun County squire, probably will be demanded tomorrow when the youths go on trial here before Judge J. R. H. Alexander.

Commonwealth's Attorney Charles F. Harrison said today he had "pretty well decided" to ask the chair for Herbert Bucke Porter, of Brentwood, Md., and Paul Bernard Hoback, of Bluefield, W. Va.

The defendants, now in jail here, have pleaded guilty to an indictment charging that "in the commission of burglary and robbery they did wilfully, deliberately and premeditately kill Ward Loveless," whose bullet-ridden body was found November 24 in the china closet of his estate near Waterford, about 8 miles from here.

Defense Attorney Aubrey Weaver, of Front Royal, a Virginia State Senator, has waived jury trial and tomorrow's proceedings are expected to be brief. Sentences of at least 20 years are mandatory.

Prosecutor Harrison has called 15 witnesses, but probably no more than half a dozen will go on the stand as the defense is expected to acknowledge the veracity of most evidence without demanding corroboration.

Evidence includes confessions made by the youths, who came back to Leesburg, where they had once worked, to rob "the richest man they knew" and found only an empty wallet, according to county authorities.

Hoback and Porter were captured November 27 in Appalachia, Va., after spending two days with Hoback's aunt in nearby Cumberland, Ky.

Senator Weaver said in Front Royal tonight that he would put both boys on the stand and urge them to "tell everything they know" about the crime. He said he might also call several character witnesses.

Vandal Slashes 12 Tires

Fredericksburg, Va., Feb. 6.—Twelve tires on automobiles owned by eight persons have been slased in Bowling Green recently by an unidentified vandal whose acts have aroused citizens of the Caroline Countyseat to ask that rewards be posted for an arrest.

Ex-Manager of Senate Restaurant Sued on $15,000 Bond

A Maryland surety firm filed suit for $15,000 in District Court yesterday against William W. Arbuckle, former manager of the United States Senate Restaurant, charging that Arbuckle's unauthorized borrowing of restaurant funds had forced the company to forfeit a $15,000 bond to the Senate Rules Committee.

The Fidelity and Deposit Co., of Baltimore, asserted in their suit that they had executed the bond in 1933 on Edward H. King, former auditor of the restaurant, and payable to the supervising Senate Rules Committee.

They charge that from 1935 to 1941, King loaned Arbuckle upward of $15,000 from the funds in his custody, which Arbuckle allegedly never repaid. When the shortage was discovered, the firm claims, the Rules Committee demanded the posted surety, which was paid by the company in December, 1941.
